Board of Works Will Recommend a Number of Changes in the Names of Streets

At last night's meeting of the Board of Works, Alderman Saunders succeeded in resurrecting a resolution to change the names of a number of streets throughout the city. Mayor Buller, Aldermen Edgar and a number of others favoured a proposal to name one of the streets mentioned Stratton avenue, after the Hon. J. R. Stratton, and in consideration of his many good qualities as a citizen. It was finally decided to combine Princess street and Gladstone avenue and re-name them Stratton avenue, as one street is practically a continuation of the other.

It was moved by Mayor Buller, and seconded by Alderman Dobbin, that the following changes be made in the names of streets: Cedar street to be changed to Murray street, Read street between Sherbrooke and Wolfe street, changed to Park street. Park street, from Sherbrooke to Wolfe, and Park Place, changed to Harper street. Princess street and Gladstone avenue to Stratton avenue.

Will Extend Car Tracks

Extension Will Not be Made on McDonnell Street

The Board of Works Committee is in receipt of a letter from the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, in which the Company announces its intention of extending their tracks on Charlotte street from Park street to the Monaghan Road, and relay their tracks on Park street and on George street, from McDonnel to Smith streets. They did not anticipate any extensions on McDonnel street as was proposed some time ago.

MULTUM IN PARVO.

Thinking Americans are beginning to see clearly that if the democracy of France and Great Britain sinks beneath the German attack and a German Empire of 165,000,000 springs up in Europe, our democracy must fight or go under. We are already a year late in starting to get ready.—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE SUPREME LAW.

Victory over the enemy is the supreme law for every belligerent.—Berlin Vossische Zeitung.

Might makes right! Neutrals have no rights that belligerents are bound to respect!

It is the doctrine of barbarism. Laws of warfare—civilization itself—swept into the discard.

The triumph of Kultur!—New York Herald.

THE APPEAL FOR YOUNG MEN.

The young men of Canada must be persuaded, not scolded, into recruiting, and we must consider very seriously the means of persuasion. The greatest obstacle is imperfect realization of what is going on in Europe, and what the issue is. There is no use in scolding young men for not realizing this. We say that our liberties are in danger. They are in danger. But middle-aged men and old men, who realize this must not be in a hurry to blame young men who do not realize it. They have taken their enjoyment of liberty for granted. Not one young man in a hundred has ever reflected that his liberty came from Magna Charta or from John Hampden, or from the defeat of the Armada or the defeat of Napoleon.—Toronto Star.

BEST MEANS FOR PEACE.

While various devices have been suggested as a means of fighting Germany's poisonous gas, liquid fire spray, etc., probably the best answer is machine guns. If the enemy bring in any further diabolism, then more machine guns. Our forces cannot have too many. Those who want the war to end quickly; those who want to preserve the lives of "our boys"; those who want to prevent the monster of the age from dominating the world—buy machine guns.

This province, in proportion to its wealth and population, and Montreal, the leading city of Canada, have done much, but some of the smaller communities have done more. In Newfoundland they have gallantly sprung to the front, contingent after contingent, both naval and military, has been sent and of their frugal means they have contributed nobly. In Nova Scotia, they have not only recruited beyond every demand made upon them and that at once, but the whole people by popular subscription raised the funds to purchase a 100-horse power Gnome Vickers Gun biplane, fully equipped, and presented it to the Royal Flying Corps. This was done after consultation with Lord Kitchener, and the big flying ship is to be named "Nova Scotia." The contributions were received from every town and hamlet, from rich and poor alike. And, withal, they have done their share in equipping their forces with machine guns. We, up here in this wealthy and populous community, have done much, but we could and should do more.—Montreal Herald.

THE TRENT CANAL.

The completion of the locks at Port Severn, celebrated with great eclat on Monday, marks another great step in the construction of the Trent Valley Canal, and by so much brings nearer the day when the grain of the Northwest will pass from the Georgian Bay through central Ontario to the Bay of Quinte and thence to Montreal, says the Hamilton Spectator.

This enterprise was originally projected by Governor Simcoe a century and a quarter ago. It was, however, not taken up in earnest till the latter years of the administration of Sir John Macdonald. Since then it has been constantly prosecuted — somewhat fitfully, it is true, and most zealously when elections were approaching, yet on the whole so steadfastly that from time to time, substantial progress could be noted. The first part finished was that between Lake Simcoe and Rice Lake, joining together a number of interior lakes; and this channel is now of great service for local traffic. The second section, in point of time, is that, now approaching completion, between Rice Lake and Trenton, including the canalization of the Trentriver. The third section is that between Georgian Bay and Lake Simcoe, of which the work just finished at Port Severn, intended to dam up and render navigable the river Severn, is an important part.

When the whole canal is completed and opened, it will be available not only for local traffic, but for a class of grain barges fit to travel all the way from Port Severn to Montreal. Grain will come on the big lake steamers to Georgian Bay, and, just as it is now transhipped at Midland to the Grand Trunk, be transhipped into barges on the Trent Canal. These barges will thread the somewhat tortuous passage to Trenton, and thence down the Bay of Quinte to Kingston, thus avoiding the stormy Lake Ontario, and will doubtless then pursue the St. Lawrence to Montreal, where the cargoes will be transhipped into elevators or ocean steamships. The Montreal Transportation Company and the Kingston Forwarding Company now, at Kingston, tranship grain from large lake steamers to river barges, which carry it through the shallow St. Lawrence channel and canals to Montreal. The difference will be that these barges will be able to begin their eastward voyage at Port Severn, and the big lake steamers will be able to travel back and forth quickly between Fort William and Port Severn, instead of making the grand detour around Lakes Huron, Erie and Ontario. This —not the Georgian Bay Canal—is the real rival of the Welland Canal route.

CANADA'S DUTY.

What is the immediate duty of Canadians, asks Ralph Connors in the Toronto Globe. To raise large sums of money? Not so much. Old John Bull may be safely trusted to look after the financing of this war. But for Canada two things lie to her hand. Listen to the insistent iteration of Lloyd George: "Munitions and machine guns, munitions and machine guns." Let every Canadian wheel that can turn on a shell be set a-going. Let every Canadian workman and workwoman that can get to a munition factory or gun factory get there, and with all speed. Shells and more shells. Machine guns and more machine guns. Where British soldiers have two machine guns Germans have forty. Shells wasted mean battalions saved. We have tried fighting machine guns with men and have learned our bitter lesson. Canadian shells and Canadian machine guns mean the saving of Canadian men.

The Call for More Men.

And the other need is this: Men. Listen to Kitchener in his great Guildhall speech the other day: "I shall have to ask you for more men. The time was when we could not equip or clothe or arm or train men in large numbers. That time, thank God, is now past. And to-day I ask you for more men."

Canadians, do you know that your name is like a flame in British hearts to-day. That men's voices quiver and their eyes grow dim as they tell the tale of Ypres, and of St. Julien, and of Festubert? The call is more insistent to-day than eight months ago, a thousand times over, for men, for Canadian men, the same kind that held the gap at St. Julien, and as French himself said three days after that glorious fight, in tones that broke and faltered, saved the day. It thrills our Canadian hearts to recall his words: "Canadians, I want you to know that when you held the line that day, you saved the British Empire—well, I will take that back, for we should finally have recovered what we lost, but for that day, at least, you saved the Empire's name and the army."

Women Must Make Sacrifices.

Canadian women, you will not hold back your men, your sons, and your sweethearts, but will send them forth where honour and safety bid them go. Men, and ever more men! Not the men only who can be spared! Not the men without ties of love to hold their hearts! Not the men whose going is easy! No, no! But the men whose going will imperil business interests, and will break hearts. These men, men of sacrifice, whose wives and mother will wave them away with mist-dimmed eyes, but with hearts that will not refuse to make complete the sacrifice.

Seriously, soberly, solemnly, let it be said that unless the Empire can furnish in overwhelming quantities munitions of war, and in overwhelming numbers men of war, the bitterness and humiliation of defeat will be our portion, and the shame and slavery of an infamous and tyrannous militarism will be the portion of our children.

SENDING MEN TO THE FRONT ONLY A MEAGRE PART OF DUTY

We Cannot Yet Realize all the Obligations That the War Will Lay on Canada—Must Not Forget the Men Who Have Risked Their Lives for King and Country.

As yet we cannot realize all the obligations which the war will lay upon Canada. We do only a meagre portion of our duty when we send men into battle. Obligations lie upon us who remain at home as urgent and onerous as any that the men carry who go to the field. Many Canadian soldiers will come back with health and vigour unimpaired. Many will not come back at all. Many will lose arms or legs and be incapacitated for the pursuits to which they were trained. Not a few will suffer from nervous strain and never again be equal to active or sustained exertion. For all who return crippled or incapacitated we must provide, and we must provide not as those who give grudgingly but as those who give with generous heart and open hand.

THE MEANEST FORM OF INGRATITUDE.

There is no meaner form of ingratitude than that which forgets the men who have risked their lives for King and Country. It is the fashion to sneer at the United States because of its heavy outlay for pensions. Probably the nation has been plundered by spurious patriots and conscienceless pension attorneys. Still it is better to have paid too much than to have paid too little. If the American people have remembered and cherished the veterans of the Civil War they have done something which is a glory rather than a reproach. So we in Canada who honour the uniform in the day of danger must not forget the soldier when peace comes.

PENSIONS SHOULD BE ADEQUATE.

We doubt if the scale of pensions provided under the Act of last session is adequate. The man who has been incapacitated should not have to sink to a lower level than that which he occupied before he went into battle. It will be better to improve the position of those who earned little than to prejudice those who had a fair income. No doubt there will be inequalities which cannot be overcome, and apparent injustices in the practical operation of any legislation that can be devised. All we suggest is that the country should be generous and not niggardly, and that the obligation which we now feel acutely should be a perpetual obligation to all those who are disabled in battle.

TRAINING FOR THE DISABLED.

Some of those who come back with limbs gone will not be able to return to the work at which they were engaged before enlistment. It will be necessary to give special study to such cases. There will be work in printing offices, in factories, at the desks of commercial and financial houses which with some training they could do satisfactorily. This training must be provided at the public expense. Already it is suggested that, either by the Dominion Government alone or with the co-operation of the Provinces, a fund should be set apart for the training of such people in technical schools. To do this would be only just to those who have suffered in the field and possibly would also have industrial advantages. In any event, the Federal Government, or some organization in close relation to the Federal Government, should consider this proposal, and determine the conditions under which a system of training could be established. It is desirable that as many as possible of those who return should continue to be self-supporting. If we could at once assure to these people a means of livelihood and relieve the burden upon private or public benevolence a double object would be achieved.

SOLDIERS' HOMES TO BE PROVIDED.

For those utterly incapacitated for any future work we must provide Soldiers' Homes and ensure beyond peradventure that they will live in enduring realization of the country's sympathy and gratitude. It is not too soon to plan for the location and the construction of such homes in various parts of the country. They should be so constructed as to ensure the inmates all the comforts and conveniences of which they can avail themselves. If the disabled soldier has a wife they should be kept together. The woman's sacrifice is equal to that of the man and both should go upon the honour roll of the country. Many people who cannot go to the front are only too willing to assist the Government in projects for the comfort and relief of wounded and disabled soldiers. It is essential, however, to guard against multiplicity of organizations and division of effort. It is desirable that the Government should sanction the organization of such agencies as we have been discussing, but there is no reason that patriotic men and women should not be associated with such enterprises and their services utilized by the Government for the public advantage.—Toronto News.

Russians Holding Out In Battle Of Warsaw

Austro-German Drive on Polish Capital Makes Little Headway—Russian Resistance Defies Enemy.

LONDON, July 29.— Although the Germans are using very strong reinforcements of men and guns, they have not yet succeeded in breaking the Russian resistance either around Warsaw or in Kovno and Courland provinces, in each of which sectors heavy fighting has been in progress for nearly a fortnight.

Except for the capture of the village of Goworowo, on the Narew front, and a number of prisoners and machine guns at that point and between Mitau and the Niemen, the German official report issued to-day does not claim any advance.

In fact General von Buelow, in the north and Field Marshal von Hindenburg, who crossed the Narew at some points, are being held up by Russian counter-attacks, which, although probably costly to the Russians, show that there is still plenty of fight left in them.

In the southeast, Field Marshal von Mackensen's attack on the Lublin-Cholm railway seems for the moment to have come to a standstill, although he, too, is receiving reinforcements and assistance from the Austrians, who succeeded in crossing the Bug at Sokal.

Not Much Progress.

To the west of Warsaw, the Germans announce the capture of the village of Piorunow, which is about fifteen miles west of the fort line of the city; so that not much progress has been made on this front.

There is a good deal in the Russian and German official reports which cannot be reconciled, but, on the whole, the British critics are more hopeful than for some days that the Russians will succeed in withstanding this effort to capture Warsaw, as they did during previous attempts. The stubborn resistance of the Grand Duke's troops, together with the fact that the battle is being fought on ground of his own choosing, has renewed the hope here that with a sufficient supply of munitions he will be able to inflict a strategic defeat on the Germanic allies.

German Casualties 500,000.

Though the Germans now hold a great lines from the Gulf of Riga sweeping southwestward around Warsaw, thence encircling the city and stretching away to the Galician frontier, near Sokal, it is estimated they have lost 500,000 men, perhaps more, in this, the most ambitious movement of the war, and the Russian front is not yet broken.

Big Turning Movement.

The German forces in the Baltic provinces advancing along a front approximately eighty miles wide towards Vilna, with a view to seizing the railway from Warsaw to Petrograd, are daily becoming a more potent factor in the fighting, for, linked up with the forces to the southwest, they give the Germans a front of three hundred miles with which to effect a vast turning movement north of Warsaw.

The troops operating against Riga, from which city they are only twenty miles distant, are considered in the nature of an independent column, and it is these forces which have come under the fire of the Russian warships.

Captured Village of Little Value.

The capture of the village of Piorunow, fifteen miles west of Warsaw, is of little effect to the Russians. The Germans, if they attempt frontal attacks in this direction, will have to face one of the most strongly entrenched lines ever constructed.

SATURDAY'S GAME MAY DECIDE CITY LEAGUE

A win for East City over the Thistles in the second game of Saturday's double-header will make Dan McCabe's team champions of the City League. On the other hand a Thistle victory may mean a tie-up between the two teams. With so much depending upon it the game should be a repetition of the last two battles, when East City beat Louis Yeotes' gang by the same score on each occasion, 2 to 1. Huycke and Kirn will have another pitching duel, and the battle should be a corker. Empires and Classics will meet in the first game.

FAMOUS OTTAWA HOCKEY STAR OFF TO THE FRONT

OTTAWA, Ont., July 29—Another famous Ottawa athlete, Harry Broadbent, better known as "Punch," has enlisted for active service. "Punch," who was the left wing for Ottawa's professional hockey team last year, and is recognized as one of the best goal-getters in the game, enlisted yesterday with the 7th Artillery Brigade, and will leave for Valcartier to join his battery Thursday night. It is understood that a number of other members of the Ottawa hockey team will throw in their lot with the artillery. If they do professional hockey will have to be dropped this coming winter in the Capital. It is not likely that Ottawa will be represented by a Rugby team in the "Big Four," as last year's team has already been shot to pieces by the war.

BASEBALL

A meeting of the Executive of the East City ball club will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in McCabe's tobacco store.

Cosy Dolan is one player on the Ottawa team who is out there trying his level best all the time, and yet he receives very little credit for it. Like everybody else, Cosy makes mistakes, but he has yet to make as many this season as several other players on the club. The Senators' first sacker was not hitting them out any too well in the first part of the season, but he is showing his true form right now by getting hits when they will do the most good, and those are the ones that count the most. It would be pretty hard to forget the fact that Cosy Dolan tried to give the club the best that was in him when he should have been in bed. Dolah played the first sack for several days with a foot and knee that would have kept the majority of players in bed. Dolan, right at this time, is the best first sacker in the League. — Ottawa Journal.

GOLF

A picnic supper will be held on Friday, July 30th, at 6 o'clock at the Club House, to which all members are invited. Will those who can be present 'phone one of the House Committee, Mrs. A. H. Stratton or Mrs. Roy, re refreshments.

Maj. Art Bernier Hockeyiest, Enlists

MONTREAL, July 28.—The Wanderer Hockey Club is now among the local sporting organizations represented in the ranks of the Canadian contingent on the firing line. Billy Bell, the substitute right wing player of the Red Band being now in France on active service. Bell was loaned to the Ottawa team last winter, but the previous season participated in many of the N. H. A. fixtures, being a graduate of the City Hockey League. Major Art Bernier is another player who was under contract to the Wanderers, and who is now in Halifax, training for the 57th Battalion.

Another Star Rugby Player Has Enlisted

Frank McGill, great swimmer, Rugby Football player and now military aviator arrived in town from the aviation school in the United States today.

He said:

"I am sorry I had to leave the boys for we had a good time, but I expect to be busy in my new and chosen profession soon.

I understand there are some orders by telegraph waiting for me now at home.

George Hodson will graduate in a week or so.

I am delighted with the work. The more you do of it the more you want to do.

Eggs in Lime Water

NOW is the time to begin preserving fresh eggs to sell for better prices in the fall and winter months.

Waterglass is often used, but one pound of air-slaked lime to five gallons of boiled water will do just as well and cost much less, according to M. E. Dickson, of the Poultry Department, University of Wisconsin.

Only clean, fresh eggs should be packed and the lime water level should be kept about two inches above the eggs.

It is best to pack in a common stone jar, and keep it in a cool, dry place.

Eggs which are in a good condition when placed in lime water have after six months' time the "bloom" of newly-laid eggs, and should be fully as palatable.

The Home of Our Ideal

IT is but natural that every homemaker should have an ideal of what she desires her home to be. For those who are seeking to cultivate such a high standard, a writer in "The Mother's Magazine" gives the following advice:

If you, busy mother, would make of your home an ideal home and send your family out into the world well equipped to meet life and its varied problems, get them now into the way of feeling that a sunny face and a sunny heart are two of the first requisites to health and happiness, as indeed they are, and that it lies in the power of each individual to succeed in any appointed task if he but bring to it will and determination, coupled with self-control.

Let each child in the family feel that you expect nothing short of the best. Make them understand that motives are counted, as well as results, and pass lightly over accidents, for many a child has formed the habit of untruthfulness through fear. Teach them politeness, all those little courtesies that are so easy to learn in childhood and youth, but so hard to acquire in after life, together with the habits of personal neatness and daintiness, if you would fit them thoroughly for an all-round happy life in the years to come.

"Please" and "thank you" are keys that have unlocked many a door to promotion in one walk of life or another.

Remember that a clean, well-appointed table, crisp cloth and napkins, good table manners and cheerfulness are as essential to right development as is the food itself; so put a little extra time into these things at the expense, if need be, of some of the pastry, fancy puddings, and cakes.

Don't think you must do it all yourself. It gives any child a dependableness and self-reliance to have simple tasks required of it and to know they must be done with neatness, willingness, and despatch; and it gives you a few minutes to read, study or rest that you may the better keep pace with the growing family about you, and discuss more intelligently with your husband the business problems of the day, and his own individual affairs.

If you would keep happy and young, do not let your mind deteriorate. Keep interested in the world—in life. Bear in mind that every home should have a daily paper, which should be read, and one or two good magazines which contain general articles as well as good, clean fiction.

Wanamaker Declares That His Plan To Give $100,000,000 For Belgium Is Entirely Feasible

PHILADELPHIA, July 28.—In the face of belief that he must have spoken jocularly or in metaphor when he suggested that the United States raise a fund of $100,000,000,000, buy Belgium from the Germans and set her free John Wanamaker to-day stood by his guns. He asserted he had spoken seriously and expressed his belief that the idea is entirely practical.

Few of those who heard Mr. Wanamaker's address at a meeting of business and professional men in the Racquet Club, assembled to organize a local branch of the National Security League, were willing to be quoted publicly in criticism of his suggestion, but without exception they spoke of it as visionary, impractical and Utopian.

Mr. Wanamaker gave out the following interview, in question and answer form:

"I have come to ask you whether you really said what the papers attribute to you last night at the meeting to organize the National Security League?"

"I certainly did, and I reaffirm it with great satisfaction. The war will go on indefinitely until the last dollar and the last man goes into the field, unless some brave souls, with a sense of what the destruction going on means to the whole world, make a beginning.

Would Mortgage Philadelphia.

"But you spoke of buying the country and paying $100,000,000,000."

"Yes, and I would pay more. I would mortgage the whole of Philadelphia for any sum necessary to stop the bloodshed and righting up the world again, each nation pursuing its mission. Mind you this, I made no suggestion of establishing the United States of Belgium or of the portion of France that has been cut off by the war or the Duchy of Luxemburg, and I expressly declared that it was not to put money in the hands of any nation to supply wealth or munition of war. I simply touched the commercial side of the needs of nations, which, no doubt, in the settlement of the war, would require immense indemnities that the already wrecked and ravished countries could not furnish.

Money For the World.

"I had in mind that the first scrap of paper that America would make would be when it would say, 'We will furnish the money to pay the indemnities and we will hold these countries until they are able to restore themselves and turn them back to them when they are ready to return the money we have advanced,' which I stated I believed America would be able to raise without interest for five years for such a purpose as stopping the most colossal war that has ever occurred on the face of the earth.

"If it be a question of good gold dollars and the lives and homes of millions of men, I would go to any length to sacrifice the dollars rather than the men and their homes.

"Hitherto all of these countries have been most friendly with the United States. A war among them I feel is a war among thousands of my personal friends, and so it become my war and my pain and my sorrow and inasmuch as America is the only country in the world that can stand up in the midst of all this carnage and say it must stop and we will do anything that is necessary to stop it I take the risk of being misunderstood and criticised by giving the country something to think about, to find the best way possible.

More Than "Dollar Chasers."

"Americans have the reputation o being chasers of the mighty dollar, but even in business there is something else in America. Our forefathers had a passion for liberty, for freedom of conscience, for the individual rights of man, as against the autocracies of Europe and the Continent. With all our tremendous energies in business in America, high ideals are not lacking, and there are greater things than the accumulation of wealth.

"It would be an everlasting glory to America to call off the great war and the great expenditures of money. We can afford to do anything rather than to do the one thing that we never will do, which is to lower the American flag by one-quarter of an inch for any nation in the world.

"There is certainly a great deal of mystery that surrounds the causes for the war and its continuation after a year and the deadlock that has existed for some time past.

"The business men of the world are paying the taxes of their respective countries. They are thoughtful and skilful men, with large responsibilities and much at stake, and they are entitled to a hearing by their respective governments.

"If representative bodies of each country would endeavour to secure a hearing on their position, regarding the war, I feel assured they would be able to do so. If there could be a united conference of the representative business men of each of the countries it seem to me that it would be possible to call a halt.

"There will soon be no business men left in the old countries, with this dreadful carnage that is going on, every one being taken to the front from sixteen to forty-five. It is a large question. It is a world question and worth thinking out.

"Somebody must do something, and that very quickly."

Warsaw, Many Times In Hands of Conquerors, Is a Beautiful City

For the first time in its history, Warsaw, which has been controlled at some time or other by most of the European nations, is in danger of falling into the hands of the Germans. Poland has owned it, Sweden, Austria, France and Russia — all have been in control of this city which, through its position and size, is one of the most desirable in Eastern Europe. Now, after witnessing the severest fighting in its history, the former capital of Poland may fall before a new conqueror.

Since its inception as away back in the ninth century Warsaw has appeared frequently and in different roles on the pages of history. Situated on the bank of the Vistula in a fertile country and a centre for commerce, the capital of Poland was desirable at a time when conquest was more the order of the day than at present. For a long time Warsaw was the capital of the duchy of Mazovia, but upon the Union of Poland and Lithuania in the early part of the sixteenth century, it became the capital of Poland.

For more than one hundred years afterward Warsaw flourished in comparative peace. At only one time was it seriously menaced, and then John Sobieski, the Polish hero, saved it from falling into the hands of the Turks. In 1655, however, Charles Gustavus of Sweden took the city, and for the first time since becoming part of Poland Warsaw found herself in the hands of a conqueror.

Only for a year, however, did the Swedes hold the city. In 1656 the Polish took back their capital and held it for nearly fifty years. When it fell into the hands of enemy the scond time Sweden was again the victor. For many years after that Charles II. remained the ruler, and the city yielded its profits to Sweden. Again, however, the Polish threw off the conqueror's yoke and became autonomous.

Under Russian Influence.

By this time Russia had grown strong enough to look around for desirable lands to conquer. Poland and Warsaw were nearest and therefore came under the Russian influence first. Upon the death of Alexander III. in 1763 Russia took a hand in Polish politics and succeeded in having Stanislaus Poniatowski chosen king. It was not until 1794, however, that the Russians came into actual possession of the city. Then it was taken by arms rather than intrigue. After an attack on Praga, a suburb across the Vistula, Warsaw surrendered to the Russians.

The Russians had only been in control of Warsaw for twelve years when, in 1806, Napoleon's army took the city. By the Peace of Tilsit a year later, the city was made independent as the capital of the duchy of Warsaw. In 1809 the city was again taken, however, and this time by the Austrians. Their occupation lasted only two months, when the city was again made free and independent. In 1813 the Russians finally took the city and held it, together with the rest of Poland.

Warsaw has been said to be the most beautiful and interesting city of the East of Europe. The streets are lined with picturesque buildings, which express the Polish love of splendour. The public gardens are among the most beautiful in the world. The chief pride of the residents, however, is the Lazienski Theatre, in the Lazienski Gardens. Its mural decorations are said to be among the most wonderful in all Europe.

The modern city has a population of about 750,000, of whom 25,000 are Germans and 200,000 Jews. It is a busy industrial centre and is the junction of six important railroad trunk lines, which connect it with all the important cities of the Continent. The city is divided into two parts by the Vistula, Warsaw on one side and Praga on the other. They are connected by the Alexander Bridge, built at a cost of more than $3,000,000.

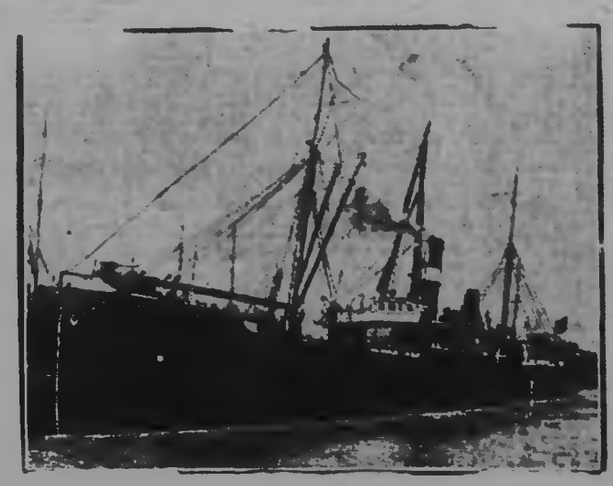
Defences of the City.

For fortification, the city proper depends largely upon the Alexander citadel, with its group of forts, which was built as a punishment of the Poles for an uprising in 1863. Most of the resistance, however, in the present attack, has been made from special fortifications erected to fend off the enemy.

Naturally lovers of liberty, the Polish people have always resented the Russian domination. As a result, severe methods have been employed by the conquerors. In 1830 there was an insurrection, which lasted for a year. When the city was retaken by the Russians in 1831 retribution was given the Polish inhabitants. There was much confiscation and destruction of property and many persons were sent to Siberia.

Another revolt occurred in 1863, but was much less important and was soon put down by the Russians. The most recent rioting was in 1905 and 1906, but the presence of a strong Russian garrison prevented serious trouble. Through the present conflict, however, the Poles have been strong in their support of the Russian cause and have served the Tsar loyally as a result of the promise of freedom and a united Poland.

The importance of Warsaw, both strategically and commercially, cannot well be overestimated. Through the Vistula as well as the railroads, the city has access to all sorts of commerce, and owes its eminence largely to this fact. The rich wheat belt has the city for its centre, and for this reason it may be particularly valuable to Germany if they are able to hold the territory while a crop is maturing. Warsaw figures largely in the wool and hops market. It has manufacturing facilities, which also enhance its value.



The Leelanaw, Torpedoed By Germa n Submarine.— The latest American vessel to fall a victim to German s ubs. She was en route from Archangel, Russia, to Belfast, with a c argo of flax, and was sunk on July 26th north-west of Scotland. The c rew was saved.

DO YOUR BIT.

Our readers are all rightly concerned in those times, each keenly watching the pendulum of the fortunes of war, gratified with pride that our brave contingents are doggedly, heroically fighting in the French trenches by the side of our Allies for which they have received the deserved admiration and highest of praises. It is true that many who have not had the privilege or been permitted the opportunity to do by their side have yet realized the importance of the Dominion, our Empire and Allies keeping trading. Our Navy has done her work fearlessly in freeing the seas of our enemy and with our King's most recent visit we are advised and assured 'it is fit and ready" for its still greater task, the result of which is not to be questioned. At the moment of going to press we learn that Mr. Thos. Brenan of 30 Front street east, Toronto, has just returned from the "Peerier" Natural Sparkling Table Water Spring" of Lor Ecuillons, Vergeze, France, and we are particularly happy to learn from him that nothing is preventing free shipment of these waters, surely an opportunity for each of us to be practical in the motto of our Allies, "Shoulder to Shoulder in War and Trade." Let us uphold the Dominion's key-note for trade with our Allies and thereby send a direct message to France that those who are permitted are trading with her, drinking her beautiful country's natural sparkling waters with real benefits to all, and thereby each doing their bit for France without let or hindrance of the Huns with all their vile resources.

THE BOARD OF WORKS HOLD A BUSY SESSION

Number of Recommendations Made Which if Adopted Will Effect a Public Improvement—Board of Works Committee Will Formulate Its Own Policy in Respect to Oiling the Streets.

Ald. Weir is of the opinion that the streets are not properly cleaned before being treated with road oil. He cited a number of cases in support of his contention which was aired at last night's meeting of the Board of Works. Ald. Green, chairman of the Board, believed that the city had been fairly successful in its efforts to cope with the dust evil. In a letter to the Board, the Peterborough Automobile Association suggested that all streets be closed for ten days or two weeks following each application of road oil. They also asked the Board to refrain from using an inferior brand of oil and to purchase the necessary supply from one company only. The aldermen were unanimous in their decision to leave the matter in the hands of the Board.

Robinson Street Sewer.

A petition asking for a sewer on Robinson street from Roger street to the G.T.R. tracks was submitted to the Board. It was pointed out that the petition was insufficiently signed. Ald. Weir supported the claim of the petition for the sewer, which consisted of one man who owns one side of the street. The petition will be asked to refer his case to the Board of health who will bring it to the attention of the Council in the regular way.

Ownership of Lane.

A lane running oz Oxford street, East City, is said to be in a dangerous condition. As the city disclaims ownership of the lane is likely that steps will be taken to have it closed up. The matter has been left in the hands of City Engineer Parsons and the chairman of the Board of Works to deal with.

City Not Liable.

Four houses said to have been constructed in a creek bed on Rogers streets was the topic of a brief discussion in which the city's liability in event of a flood, was the vehicle. The City Solicitor was of the opinion that the owner of the houses would be liable, as the buildings in question were constructed on private property. A letter explaining this will be forwarded to each of the petitioners who signed a petition which, among other things, threatened to hold the city liable for the obstruction of the creek bed.

Sprinkling Carts.

Toronto has a number of sprinkling carts that they would like to dispose of to Peterborough or any other municipalities in need of such equipment. The reason given was that Toronto is substituting motor driven apparatus for the horse drawn type. The street cleaning department of Toronto will be advised that this city is not in need of additional sprinkling carts at the present time.

To Extend Sidewalk.

The sidewalk adjoining Robinson's livery, the Peterborough Creamery and O'Donnell Bros., grocers, all on Aylmer street, will be extended to the street curb. At the present time there is a narrow strip of boulevard. This will be obliterated with concrete. Ald. Edgar was in favour of having all sidewalks located outside of places of business, similarly treated.

Question of Trees.

Mr. J. J. Turner and Sons, 778 Water street wrote to the Board asking for permission to transplant a tree on the above property. The request was granted in consideration of the explanation set forth in the letter. City Engineer Parsons wanted a ruling as to the course to adopt in cases where trees are obstructing sewers or any other other public service. The city claims joint ownership of all trees planted on the citys streets. Information concerning this matter will be sought from other cities.

Tenders For Castings.

The City Engineer was instructed to prepare specifications for tenders on castings for the city up to March 15th of next year. The tenders to be in by Wednesday, August 11th. Some of the aldermen were in favour of dividing the work up equally but others were of the opinion that it would be better to call for tenders in the regular way.

Expenditure For Cartage.

A report was presented to the Board which concerned a complaint that was made at a previous meeting when it was alleged that the city showed discrimination in that one express company received a greater proportion of work than the other. The report showed that from January 1st to July 1st of this year, the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company received a total of $138 for cartage and the White Bros. a total of $196. It was also found that the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company received the sum of $292 for soft coal supplied. While the latter was not considered in the same light as cartage business it was felt that the work as a whole was pretty well divided.

UPPER STONEY LAKE SUMMER RESORT NEWS

Cottages Nearly All Open—Belvidere Has Large Number of Guests

"Belvidere" Resort, Crowe's Landing, is still in the ring. Early in the season Mr. R. J. Lennox, the proprietor, was inclined to be a little skeptical about the prospects of the season nineteen-fifteen, but now he is wearing that broad, satisfied smile indicating "Business as Usual."

Mr. Lennox is a firm believer in the principle that a well satisfied customer is the best advertisement. His guests keep coming back year after year. The following are a few of those who have registered this season: Messrs. A. F. Boehm, W. R. Boehm and R. Brittain, Toronto; Misses Moffat and Starr, Toronto; Messrs. Archibald Davidson and Fred N. Shearer, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Herrick, Cleveland, O.; Mr. W. H. Parker, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. A. Renof, and Master Jack, Miss Edwards and Mr. A. Edwards, Norwood; Mr. K. Hockin, Toronto; Mr. R. S. Embury, Rochester, N.Y.; Mr. M. J. Vereen, Toronto; Dr. Jory and family, St. Catharines; Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Slocum, Rochester, N.Y.; Rev. R. and Mrs. Wallace, Masters Hudson and Reginald Wallace, Toronto. Messrs. J. A. Bolger and L. F. Young, Peterborough; Mr. W. J. Petty, and Mr. and Mrs. E. M. BURLEIGH FALLS SUMMER RESORT

Fishing Unusually Good—A Few Big Fish That Have Been Hooked Within the Past Few Days

Fishing is unusually good around Burleigh Falls this season. Several large lunge have been caught recently. Mrs. Darcy succeeded in landing a beauty weighing 21½ lbs. Two more, tipping the scales at 18 and 16, were caught by two disciples of the rod from Akron, Ohio.

Mr. Darcy, the proprietor of the Park Hotel, is well pleased with the season's business thus far, and is looking forward to a bumper crop in August.

The following are a few of the recent registrations: Messrs. D. W. Kehoe and William Quinn, Peterborough; Messrs. P. D. E. Strickland, O. K. Carpnel, W. D. E. Extraordinary Provisions Made to Supply Men at The Front With Munitions

Sixteen National Munition Factories Established and Ten More Will be Set Up—British Forces Will Soon Equal Any on Continent.

LONDON, July 29.—Sixteen national munitions factories have been established in Britain, and, after consultation with the French Ministry, the British Government has decided to set up an additional ten large establishments.

This announcement was made in the House of Commons this evening by the Minister of Munitions, David Lloyd George, who told of the progress made by his department in overcoming the shortage of shells that had prevented the army on the continent from doing all it might otherwise have done.

Will Double Shell Output.

These new factories are being erected in the vicinity of the arsenals and the existing armament establishments, and, according to Mr. Lloyd George, when the Government has completed in a few weeks the developments it is now engaged upon, the supply of shells will be doubled.

The Government has taken over the control of the machine tool factories, so that no delay would arise in equipping the new establishments. This would tax the engineering resources of the country, but when all was completed within a few months, the Government would be able to equip the armies in a way which would leave them in no way inferior to the best equipped armies on the continent.

"This," said the Minister, "will not merely enable us to support our men, but will enable them to cleave their way through to victory."

Warns the "Plot Mongers."

"I warn those whom it may concern—plotters and plot mongers—to keep their hands and tongues off the Minister of Munitions," he added, shaking his fist dramatically in the direction of the Press Gallery.

The new munitions factories are to be established in the vicinity of those already existing. Further special factories are to be established to increase the production of component parts essential to complete shells and also to make machinery and tools, "whereof," said Lloyd George "there has been an alarming shortage."

Regarding the workers, he said: "A solemn undertaking has been given that trade union rules which are relaxed during war shall be fully restored upon the declaration of peace. The Government have given an undertaking that wages shall not be reduced if the output is increased."

Mr. Lloyd George explained that until the new factories are built the work of his department will be directed to speeding up existing contracts. At first the Government had been faced with a grave labour shortage, and some machines were lying idle because no one could be found to work them. One-third of the machines engaged in Government work at the outset were not being utilized at night.

Enroll 100,000 Volunteers.

During three months his department had secured forty thousand additional men for ammunition work and they were pouring in further supplies. His department had also enrolled 100,000 volunteers, but it had been found difficult to remove the majority of these from their present employment. However, scores of thousands of skilled men who had enlisted had been traced, and arrangements were made with the War Office for the return of these men to the factories.

While the trade union leaders had agreed to the relaxation of trade union restrictions, he had not been able to convince the men without giving figures which he dare not give. Were all restrictions relaxed hundreds of thousands of men could be added to the works.

Stops, Mr. Lloyd George said, had been taken to increase the supply of machine guns and hand-grenades for trench warfare. The country had been divided into two great cooperative areas so that all available machinery could be used for turning out supplies. The national factories erected and those to be erected would be under Government control, and he believed that this would have an influence on the men, who would not object to a temporary relaxation of their trade union rules when the Government, and not an individual was profiting.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles--Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

A letter has been received by the Board of Works from Mr. T. F. Matthews, saying that in his opinion, Water Street, from McDonel to Dublin streets, did not need paving at the present time.

The Taxes.

The last day for the payment of the first instalment of taxes will be Monday, Aug. 2nd, owing to the fact that August 1st falls on Sunday. Taxpayers can avoid the rush by visiting the Tax Collector's office between the hours of eight and ten in the morning. By paying your taxes now you save seven per cent.

Relaying Rails.

City Engineer Parsons has inspected the streets to be paved in company with the Engineer of the Radial Railway Company with a view of arranging for the relaying of the tracks.

Laying Conduits.

A letter has been received from the Bell Telephone Company stating that they have decided to lay conduits on a number of streets throughout the city.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES

Mr. T. H. Pratt was elected chairman of the Hamilton Board of Hospital Governors.

Ten Machine Guns.

The Wentworth County Council has donated 10 machine guns to the Hamilton contribution.

Honorary Freedom.

Bristol City conferred honorary freedom on Premier Borden, who telegraphed his appreciation of the honour.

A Hamilton Contribution.

The outside section of the Hamilton Works Department decided to purchase a machine gun as a contribution to the equipment of the Canadian overseas forces.

Have Petitioned the Council.

The rural residents of Amherst Island have petitioned the Council of their municipality to provide an amount sufficient to purchase a machine gun for the Canadian troops.

Deserted Town In Colorado Has Lone Resident

TOPEKA, Kan., July 24.—Living only in the memory of a distant past, isolated from the rest of the world, yet living in a city of a thousand homes, sitting idly hour by hour at the front of a small saloon where twenty years ago prosperity and excitement were on every hand, Sam Bolzer, former Topeka bartender, later an adventurer, gambler and Colorado saloon owner, is residing in the deserted mining town of Gillette, Colo.

The life of Sam Bolzer reads like a romance, tinged with all the vicissitudes of life, livened by the carefree days when gold was more plentiful in Cripple Creek than today, shadowed by more sorrows than fall to the lot of the average man.

A newspaper man and party visited Gillette. They found the town deserted except by one man, Sam Bolzer. An inquisitive Nomad put the following question to the old relic:

"Where are the rest of the voters?"

The faded old man did not answer at first, but then he replied:

"They are everywhere but here."

He then relapsed into silence, but another Kansan spied a table and a few suspicious looking bottles within the place. He called the ancient gentleman and together they entered the poorly kept saloon. When the old man came out, some ten minutes later, he was in a more talkative mood.

"I hear that you fellows are from Kansas," he said, "but you don't know Kansas as I knew it. The men who were young then are now in their dotage. When I lived in Topeka it was a wide-open town, and it was my business to furnish beer and whiskies to its progressive citizens."

"I was a fool for ever leaving Topeka. It was in 1880, not long after the prohibition amendment went into effect. I had lost my job. I had no money. So I just naturally drifted West, and for the next ten years I roamed around California, New Mexico, Arizona and Old Mexico. But it was in 1890 that I came to Cripple Creek. The first real strike had been made. With thousands of others I fell a victim to my ambition to be rich. Out of all those who went to Cripple Creek in those years, only a few remain today, who have wealth

"I just naturally had no luck. I sweated my life away in the mines. I gambled and drank away my wages in Cripple Creek. There never was a city yet that could equal it. Money flowed like water. I believe it was the wickedest spot on the map.

"I was in the great Cripple Creek fire of 1896. By that time I was part owner of a small saloon. The fire destroyed my place and I was broke again.

"Then I heard rumours of Gillette. The town became a city in a night. The rush of men here at that time was heavy. Being one of the first on the ground, I started a saloon in a shack and a boarding house in a tent. Then I leased the upstairs of a building and owned the first dance hall here. For several month Gillette was fast becoming the centre of the Cripple Creek region. Then the gold gave out. It was shallow. People left there in a single night. Many did not take even the precaution of shutting their doors. Gillette started like a whirlwind and in a like manner it became deserted.

"Only a few of us remained, firm in the belief that the country was plentiful in gold. My business was limited, yet I kept it up and still have it today. Gradually my friends left Gillette, but I remained and have lived in a solitary grandeur since 1908, when the last of my family moved away.

"Why don't I leave, you ask. Why should I? I have nothing especially to live for. I have formed an attachment to Gillette. I will die here. I am emperor of the place. My word is law, having no one to dispute it."

CIGARETTE TOBACCO FAMINE THREATENED

War Cuts Off Levantine Supply and Greatly Reduces Acreage Planted

A shortage and an advance in the price of Turkish tobacco are predicted by James M. Dixon of the Tobacco Products Corporation, who has just returned from a tour of Asia Minor, Turkey and Greece.

"The available supply from the crop of 1914 now being sold up," said Mr. Dixon yesterday, "is only half what it usually is, and of the high grade tobacco such as is used in America there is only 40 per cent of the normal. The crop of 1915 is small in acreage, having been curtailed on account of the planting of grain, and cannot receive proper attention, so that there is no relief in sight. Furthermore, Egypt is entirely cut off from its ordinary source of supply, the Black Sea and Asia Minor and she has been compelled to buy in Greece and Macedonia this year, thus increasing competition.

"Owing to the war it is difficult to make shipments even when purchases are made. Unless the war ends soon or unless the Dardanelles are taken by the Allies, the situation in the tobacco leaf market will be extremely interesting before long. Turkish tobacco, so called in that famed in Macedonia and adjacent places, most of which are now parts of Greece. Tobaccos used in connection with Macedonian Greek, are raised on the southern shore of the Black Sea in Asia Minor from Samsun east and on the north shore of that sea in Russia, from Sebastopol east. Egypt cuts three-fourths of its supply normally from the Black Sea, and owing to the war not a pound can be had from that section, although the 1914 crop was ample.

Crop Reports From West Are Favourable

Favourable telegraphic advices on the condition of crops and live stock in Manitoba and Alberta were received today at the head office of the Canadian Northern Railway here from the Departments of Agriculture of both provinces. That from Manitoba reads:

"Winnipeg, Man., July 29. — Weather all week has been ideal, warm and clear. Grain filling well and some early varieties just changing colour. No signs of black rust, and injury from hail much less than usual."

From Alberta the news is as follows: "Southeast district — Weather warm with showers; wheat, oats, barley growing rapidly; alfalfa showing good second crop; stock perfect.

"Southwest district — Weather hot with some hail; one had storm, damage about 30 per cent.; wheat headed out, sixty-two inches high; oats headed out.

"Central district — Weather still too moist, but improving; grain growth very good; ripening conditions needed.

"Northern district—Weather dryer and warmer; crop prospects correspondingly improved; live stock in good condition."

"Nothing So Up-to-date As Is The Bible"

Evangelist Sharpe's Pungent Remark at the Hunter Street Tabernacle.

While there have been a great many sermons preached on the "Prodigal Son," the one given by Evangelist Sharpe last night at the Big Hunter street Tabernacle was unique in three ways: It was dramatic, it was intensely interesting and it hit the mark.

They try to tell us in this enlightened age said the preacher that the Bible is out of date. It would be just as sensible for the people of Peterborough to say we want something a little more up to date than the sun and therefore we will light our city in the day time with electric lights' as for the people to ask for something more up-to-date than the Bible. When you can give me something as up-to date as the word of God I'll throw it away. Ah, I'm going to hang on to the dear old Bible."

What about the story of the Prodigal Son? Have you got anything so up-to-date as this story? We see it lived out around us all the time. The preacher who preaches in Peterborough one thousand years from to-night will find this story up-to-date."

In the course of his remarks the Evangelist took a shot at the young man who is too proud to adhere to his mother's advice. He said, "show me the young man who is too proud to be tied to his mother's apron strings and I'll show you a young man who, if his body was as small as his soul he'd have to get out of the bath-tub before he pulled out the plug or he'd be sure to fall through."

"When you've got lots of money you can have friends. And say, you can get into society if you've got money. Your character may be as black as a piece of coal, but if you've got the doe in your pocket they'll take you in."

At the close of his address Mr. Sharpe related the circumstances under which the familiar hymn, "Where is my wandering boy to-night" was written, after which he called upon the Stringer Sisters to sing this hymn, which they did in a most touching manner. He then closed the service without calling for seekers, for he said he wanted the thoughts of the hour to remain with his audience without being interrupted even with an invitation.

Mr. Sharpe announced that Rev. T. G. McAteer, who took part in the revival last Thursday and Friday nights would be passing through Peterborough on his return to Parry Sound from his summer cottage at Round Lake and would be present to take part in the service to-night which will begin at 8 o'clock.

KING VICTOR'S HEAVY ARTILLERY HIGHLY EFFECTIVE IN ITALIAN ADVANCE

LONDON, July 29—Despite the desperate resistance of the Austrian troops the Italian offensive is progressing favourably, although the infantry attacks have showed some slowing down. Never in the history of war has the terrific character of the artillery fire of the Italians been surpassed, and it is freely predicted that it will shortly result in the occupation of Gorizia.

The Austrians in the announcement issued to-night claim that the second battle in the district of Gorizia has terminated in the complete failure of the Italians, who attempted to break through without regard to men or material.

An official note published in Rome by the War Office this morning describes at length the operations on the Carso plateau. It says, among other things, that in the bloody engagements of the last few days, the heavy artillery of the Italians gave the best results. The trenches taken were invariably found to be full of dead, and the effective co-operation of the artillery and the infantry caused the failure of the Austrian offensive undertaken with fresh troops a few days ago.

A Hungarian officer who was taken prisoner is quoted as expressing the amazement of the Austrian high command at the Italian field gun fire. Its rapidity resembles the fire of the mitrailleuses. The note says the friendship between the officers and the troops is most touching, and the presence of the King on the firing line is responsible for many acts of heroism.

Italian Official Statement.

The following official statement was issued Tuesday night at the headquarters of the Italian general staff:

"In the Aione Valley we now are in full possession of the heights on the right slope, having occupied Monte Lavanesch and the Pissona crest. From points dominating the opposite slope the enemy's artillery attempted to hinder our operations, but without success. After a long preparation by artillery of medium calibre the enemy attacked with several detachments of infantry during the night of the 26th. Although supported by numerous machine guns these troops were repulsed.

"In the Monte Nero region the struggle continues unabated, notwithstanding a fog which prevents the artillery from assisting in the operations.

"At Plava the second operation undertaken to enlarge the bridgehead is developing favourably.

"In the Carso plateau the battle continued yesterday. Our troops advanced along the whole front with great dash and boldness, conquering towards the left wing a strong position on San Michele, commanding the greater part of the plateau. After being subjected, however, to a violent cross-fire from the enemy's artillery of all calibres, our forces were obliged to fall back below the crest, where they are maintaining their positions. On the centre we progressed towards San Martino, carrying with the bayonet trenches and a redoubt covering it. On the right wing, by the perfect timing of an infantry advance with the accompanying fire of artillery, we completed at nightfall the conquest of a position on Monte Bei, driving out inch by inch the enemy, who was strongly entrenched there. We made about 3,200 prisoners, including one lieutenant-colonel and 41 other officers. We took five machine guns, two small cannon, trench mortars, quantities of rifles, ammunition, war materials and food as trophies of a day of fierce fighting."

THE GERMAN ATROCITIES AS OFFICIALLY REPORTED BY BRYCE COMMISSION

PART I.

The Conduct of the German Troops in Belgium.

Although the neutrality of Belgium had been guaranteed by a treaty signed in 1839 to which France, Prussia and Great Britain were parties, and although, apart altogether from any duties imposed by treaty, no belligerent nation has any right to claim a passage for its army across the territory of a neutral state, the position which Belgium held between the German Empire and France had obliged her to consider the possibility that in the event of a war between these two Powers her neutrality might not be respected. In 1911 the Belgium Minister at Berlin had requested an assurance from Germany that she would observe the treaty of 1839; and the Chancellor of the Empire had declared that Germany had no intention of violating Belgium neutrality. Again in 1913 the German Secretary of State at a meeting of a Budget committee of the Reichstag had declared that "Belgian neutrality is provided for "by international conventions, and "Germany is determined to respect "those conventions. Finally, on July 31, 1914, when the danger of war between Germany and France seemed imminent, Herr Von Below, the German Minister in Brussels, being interrogated by the Belgian Foreign Department, replied that he knew of the assurances given by the German Chancellor in 1911, and that he, "was "certain that the sentiments expressed at that time had not changed." Nevertheless, on August 2nd the same Minister presented a note to the Belgian government demanding a passage through Belgium for the German army on pain of an instant declaration of war. Startled as they were by the suddenness with which this terrific war cloud had risen on the eastern horison, the leaders of the nation rallied round the King in his resolution to refuse the demand and to prepare for resistance. They were aware of the danger which would confront the civilian population of the country if it were tempted to take part in the work of national defence. Orders were accordingly issued by the civil governors of provinces and by the burgomasters of towns, that the civilian inhabitants were to take no part in hostilities and to offer no provocation to the invaders. That no excuse might be furnished for severities the populations of many important towns were instructed to surrender all firearms into the hands of the local officials.

This happened on August 2nd. On August 3rd the German troops crossed the frontier. The storm burst so suddenly that neither party had time to adjust its mind to the situation. The Germans seem to have expected an easy passage. The Belgian population, never dreaming of an attack, were startled and stupefied.

Liege and District.

On August 4th the roads converging upon Liege from north-east, east, and south were covered with German Death's Head Hussars and Uhlans pressing forward to seize the passage over the Meuse. From the very beginning of the operations the civilian population of the villages lying upon the line of the German advance were made to experience the extreme horrors of war. "On the 4th of August," says one witness, "at Herve" (a village not far from the frontier), "I "saw at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, near the station, five Uhlans; "these were the first German troops "I had seen. They were followed by "a German officer and some soldiers "in a motor car. The men in the car "called out to a couple of young fellows who were standing about 30 "yards away. The young men, being "afraid, ran off, and then the Germans fired and killed one of them "named D——." The murder of this innocent fugitive civilian was a prelude to the burning and pillage of Herve and of other villages in the neighbourhood, to the indiscriminate shooting of civilians of both sexes, and to the organized military execution of batches of selected males. Thus at Herve some 50 men escaping from the burning houses were seized, taken outside and shot. At Melen, a Hamlet west of Herve, 40 men were shot. In one house hold alone the father and mother (names given) were shot, the daughter died after being repeatedly outraged, and the son was wounded. Nor were the children exempt. "About August 4th," says one witness, "near Vottem, we were pursuing "some Uhlands. I saw a man, wo"man, and a girl about nine, who had been killed. "They were on the "threshold of a house, one on the top "of the other, as if they had been "shot down, one after the other as "they tried to escape. The burning of the villages in this neighbourhood and the whole sale slaughter of civilians, such as occurred at Herve, Micheroux, and Soumagne, appear to be connected with the exasperation caused by the resistance of Fort Fleron, whose guns barred the main road from Aix la Chapelle to Liege. Enraged by the losses which they had sustained, suspicions of the temper of the civilian population, and probably thinking that by exceptional severities at the outset they could cow the spirit of the Belgian nation, the German officers and men speedily accustomed themselves to the slaughter of civilians. How rapidly the process was effected is illustrated by an entry in the diary of Kurt Hoffman, a one year's man in the 1st Jagers, who on August 5th was in front of Fort Fleron. He illustrates his story by a sketch map. "The position," he says, "was dangerous. As suspicious civ"ilians were hanging about—houses "1, 2, 3, 4, 5, were cleared, the owners "arrested (and shot the following "day.) Suddenly a village A was fired "at. Out of it bursts our baggage "train and the 4th company of the "27th Regiment who had lost their "way and been shelled by our own "artillery. From the point D. P. "(shown in diary) I shoot a civilian "with rifles at 400 metres slap through "the head, as we afterwards ascertained." Within a few hours Hoffman, whilst in house 3 was himself under fire fro mhis own comrades and narrowly escaped being killed. A German, ignorant that house 3 had been occupied, reported, as was the fact, that he had been fired upon from that house. He had been challenged by the field patrol, and failed to give the countersign." Hoffman continues: "Ten minutes later people approach "who are talking excitedly—apparently Germans. I call out 'halt, who's "there?' Suddenly rapid fire is opened upon us, which I can only escape "by quickly jumping on one side—"with bullets and fragments of wall "and pieces of glass flying around me. "I call out 'Halt, here Field Patrol.' "Then it stops, and there appears "Lieutenant Romer with three platoons. A man has reported that he "had been shot at out of our house; "no wonder, if he does not give the "countersign." The entry, though dated August 5th, was evidently written on the 6th or later, because the writer refers to the suspicious civilians as having been shot on that day. Hoffman does not indicate of what offences these civilians were guilty, and there is no positive evidence to connect their slaughter with the report made by the German who had been fired on by his comrades. They were "suspicious," and that was enough.

The conduct of the German troops in Belgium continued, Thursday, July 29th in the Evening Examiner.

MASSES IN GERMANY TALKING OF PEACE

But they Also Want to be Distributors of the Spoils They Have Been Hoping For--Can't Land Knockout—Want to Keep Belgium

BERLIN, July 1. — (Correspondence.)— There are many indications that Germany is fast ripening toward "peace with honour and safety" — on her own terms — although one would probably never suspect it if he confined himself to reading the German papers unless he read between the lines of certain inspired articles and semi-official statements.

Sounding public opinion personally—the only satisfactory way of getting information here —I find that next to "American ammunition" the question most frequently asked me by Germans is "When are we going to have peace?" "How long is it going to last?" Often the hope of an early —and favourable—peace is veiled in the volunteered remark, "It can last a long while yet."

These spontaneous opinions and questions about the probable duration of the war I encounter chiefly in talking with working men and women, small shopkeepers, employees, etc. When you seek your sources of information higher up the social scale you yourself have to do the questioning, and the higher you go the more persistent you must be in order to turn the conversation into peace channels. Under the surface reticence, however, you discover that big business men, financiers, professional men, and even members of the military caste are doing some hard thinking—and in not a few cases constructive speculating—on the subject of peace. You get the impression from your investigations that the dove of peace will get a great ovation any time it turns up; always provided that it's a pro-German dove, bearing in its bill not only an olive twig but a fat indemnity, choice colonies, chunks of France, Russia and Belgium. It cannot be put too strongly that while not only the masses, but the classes as well, are eagerly looking forward to a return to the normal condition of peace, it must, according to the present temper of the German people, be a peace favourable to Germany, with Germany the principle judge in pronouncing on its quality.

Can't Land a Knockout.

Most Germans with whom I talk display a hard common sense in thoroughly realizing the great odds against them, and that Germany cannot hope to give the "knockout blow" to all her enemies. What they feel is that the world championship is going to be won on points, and that even if they were only to break even in the succeeding rounds, they still have the decision clinched. The difference of opinion seems to be on the question of whether they can increase the winner's share of the purse by accumulating more "points." In the opinion of many well-informed Germans it all simmers down to the proposition that the length of the war now is "up to England." "What will England do?" is the question which most interests them.

Want to Keep Belgium.

A symposium of talks with all kinds and conditions of Germans shows, of course, a unanimous agreement that Germany is going to win in the end, and will have the chief voice in the peace negotiations, though the neutrals will also have much to say. There is, however, no agreement on the subject of a large cash indemnity to cover all or even part of the huge cost of war. Many Germans in fact have serious doubts as to any large amount of spot cash being forthcoming. There are only hazy opinions as to how the choice colonies will be reshuffled and which ones Germany will or ought to get. On the other hand there seems to be a very considerable body of public opinion which would like to see Germany tuck the coast of Belgium under her belt. Many too, think that most of Belgium should be Germany's by right. They argue in support that the Flemish population is really of low Dutch stock and logically ought to be annexed to the Fatherland.

C.P.R. Assessment In Havelock

The Company Was Assessed for $22,000—Equalization Next Year

HAVELOCK, July 29.—The C. P. R. Company's appeal was heard before Judge Huycke, the company being represented by G. N. Gordon of Peterborough and Mr Jeffrey of Montreal, the C.P.R. cost expert, while the village was represented by E. A. Peck, of Peterborough. The company was assessed for $26,500 and claimed that this was not the right year in which to equalize their assessment, and in addition that the coal shutes, bunk house and cattle sheds were not assessable under the Act. The town claimed that it was the proper year and rather than have the court adjourned for new evidence to substantiate the town's claim, the Company offered to compromise an assessment of $23,000, and to authorize the Judge to make a note on the roll to the effect that an equalization could be made next year.

Ex-President Taft at His Summer Home

Likes Canada and Enjoys the Delightful Climate of Murray Bay

Hon. William H. Taft, ex-President of the United States, is now enjoying the delightful Canadian climate at his summer home at Murray Bay, Province of Quebec. Here he plays his favourite golf on one of the finest links in all Canada, that of the Hotel "Manoir Richelieu."

Mr. and Mrs. Taft with other members of the family will leave Murray Bay on August 12th, for a combined water and rail trip to the Pacific Coast, starting from Murray Bay on steamship "Saguenay," of the Canada Steamship Lines, to Montreal, where Mr. Taft will leave the party and proceed to New York. His family will continue by rail to Sarnia, Ontario, there connecting with steamship of the Northern Navigation Company to Fort William, and then by rail again to the coast.

The itinerary includes the most picturesque water and land route in all Canada, which is the equal of any on this continent or in Europe.

Murray Bay, Mr. Taft's summer home, is the favourite resort of many prominent Canadians and Americans. Those stopping at the palatial summer hotel of the Canada Steamship Lines—The Manoir Richelieu — are Lady Williams-Taylor and Miss Brenda Williams-Taylor, Mr. Duncan McIntyre and family, Mrs. Godfrey Weir and daughter, Sir Herbert and Lady Holt, Mr. Justice Chauvin and family, of Ottawa; Mr. Geo. Amyot and family, of Quebec; Major Hooper, of Montreal; Mr. D. S. Tweedie and family, of New York; Admiral Speyers, of the United States Navy (retired); Mr. W. S. Gladwin, of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. McIvor and family, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and many others.

Death of Former Peterboro' Man

Sudden Passing of Mr. John Oliver Fitzgerald in San Francisco.

Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald is in receipt of a telegram from San Francisco informing him of the sudden death of his brother, John Oliver Fitzgerald, in that city. Death was caused by heart failure, following an attack of pneumonia.

The deceased, who was fifty-four years of age, was born in this city, and was well known to many of the older residents.

The remains of the late Mr. Fitzgerald, which are expected here on Monday next, will, at the request of the deceased, be laid to rest with that of his father and mother, in St. Peter's cemetery.

OBITUARY

MRS. ROBT. NORTHEY.

A highly respected resident of Smith, in the person of Mrs. Robert Northey, passed away Monday morning, July 5th. She had been unwell over a year. Deceased was in her seventy-first year, and was one of Smith's well known pioneers, where she was loved and respected by a large circle of friends, who will miss her meek and quiet spirit. The late Mrs. Northey was born in Smith township.

There are left to mourn her loss a loving husband, six sons and three daughters, all residing in Smith, except one daughter, Mrs. J. H. Davis, who resides in Peterborough.

The funeral service was held at the family residence, 16th line of Smith. Mr. John Gilchrist, evangelist, of Peterborough, officiating. Many friends and acquaintances came to the funeral and followed the remains to Lakefield cemetery, where interment took place.

The deceased lady had personally received the sure knowledge of salvation for Eternity, through the Lord Jesus Christ. Her message to the bereaved ones was, "Meet me in Heaven. Come to Jesus.'

Farewell, for the present, farewell,
At most for a few fleeting years.
For soon with our Lord we shall dwell,
And know neither sorrow nor tears."

—Com.

MRS. HUGH BRADY.

The death occurred at her residence in Waverley street, Montreal, this morning, of Mrs. Hugh Brady, (nee Minnie Welsh.) This intelligence was received with feelings of regret and bereavement by the many friends of the late Mrs. Brady. She had lived continuously in Peterborough up to the day of her wedding, about two years ago. Having grown up from childhood in this city she had a wide acquaintance and the circle of her friends was exceptionally large. For a number of years she was engaged with the legal firm of Hall and Hayes. Unassuming, considerate, and interested mostly in her friends, Mrs. Brady richly deserved the esteem and affection of her friends, who feel a deep personal loss in her death. The members of the family and her sisters, Miss Deborah Welsh and Mrs. E. Hiland of this city, and three brothers, Joseph of Oshawa, Harry of Chicago, and William of Ashland, Wis. The remains will be brought to Peterborough for burial, the funeral announcement to be made later.

CHOIR PRACTICE.

ANOTHER CAR DIGS ITSELF INTO DITCH

Another automobile was dragged from the ditch along the Chemong road yesterday, almost in front of the Blewett home. It was a Toronto car, with two young men and two girls in it. The driver said he had struck a stone, which to others was not very manifest. However, he explained that he had thrown it over the fence. The car was a new one, but it was practically undamaged, in spite of its decent into a rather deep declivity alongside the highway.

Been Through All The Scraps

Son of Mr. Geo. Green, Rogers St., Has Seen Lots of Fighting.

The East Kent (England) Gazette has the following item of local interest:

Pte. William Green of the 20th Hussars, a brother of Mr. Geo. Green, Jr., of High street, and the youngest son of Mr. Geo. Green, senior, of Peterobrough, Ont., has been on a visit this week from the front. The young man, who was on the reserve, was called up on the 4th of last August for active service, and on August 8th, he was on the firing line. Pte. Green has been through the severe fighting at Mons, the Marne, the Aisne, Neuve Chapelle and other actions, and although he had some of his uniform shot away by shrapnel, he arrived at Rainham straight from the trenches without having sustained a scratch. Pte. Green underwent an exciting adventure on Oct. 18th. He formed one of a party of nine men acting as advance guard to the regiment, and on turning the corner of a road at the entrance to a village, they encountered a party of Uhlans. The Hussars immediately dashed at the foe. The Uhlan officer, who was in the act of drawing his revolver to shoot Pte. Green, who was nearest to him, but the Rainham Hussar, who is a left hand shot, proved the quicker man, for a well aimed shot from his rifle struck part of the revolver and glancing into the officer's heart, killed him instantly. The Uhlans were cut up and dispersed, and Pte. Green brought home the Uhlan officer's automatic revolver as a trophy of war. The young Rainham soldier looked very fit and although he has had to rough it, he was in the best of spirits. His many Rainham friends were glad to see Pte. Green returned to the front on Wednesday.

The Pte. Green mentioned is a son of Mr. Geo. Green, Rogers street, and a brother of Mr. A. Green, Concession street.

THE THINGS WE CAST ASIDE

We have just been reading the story of a youth who was the apprentice of a famous maker of windows in stained glass. Both the window maker and his apprentice with rare skill wrought out great and small squares and circles and triangles of many-colored glass, through which the sunlight shone into dim old cathedrals and ancient abbeys. The excellence of their handiwork was known far and wide, but always of course in the name of the lad's employer.

As they worked on these beautiful windows from day to day, many a piece of choice hue was cast aside because it did not fit into the space for which it was intended. These discarded pieces were thrown in a pile in one corner of the workroom and there they lay from year to year.

It suddenly occurred to the young apprentice one day when gazing on this ever increasing mound of color, that he could make a window from these pieces. In order that his master might not know anything about his experiment, he would hide his work by day, then work at it far into the night. At last it was finished and the window proved to be of fairer mold than any which ever came out from the place.

There is much in this tale which we can apply to our own lives. Each broken piece of glass which was thrown aside and considered useless, might be compared to the opportunities for doing something worth while of which we fail to take advantage. Just as these apparently worthless pieces of glass were gathered together by a master hand and made vastly beautiful, so to-day, if we were to avail ourselves of every opportunity of doing a kind deed or saying a kind word, the world and we ourselves would be made much better and happier.

We are all engaged in character building. Are we making use of the opportunities for strengthening character that are scattered around us or are we casting them aside as broken and useless bits of glass?—M. M. R.

MARRIAGES.

WOOD—LOUNT— At the residence of the bride's parents, Welland, on Wednesday, July 28, 1915, by the Rev. James Thompson, rector of Holy Trinity Church, Edith Marion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Lount, to Gerald Allan Wood of Peterborough, Ont.

Experiments in Jamaica have converted the banana into flour, the wholesale price of which is said to yield a profit so fair that the making of this flour may soon be a regular enterprise.

NICE CHOCOLATE ECLAIRS.

Weigh four eggs in the shells, take their weights of sugar, half their weight of flour and 3-4 teaspoon of baking powder. Beat sugar and egg yolks thoroughly, beat whites stiff. Alternately beat these and the flour into the sugar and eggs, flavour with vanilla. Make little canoes out of stiff white paper, and stick together along the sides. Grease and drop a spoonful of the mixture into each, bake in a rather hot oven. Frost with this frosting. Three squares of melted chocolate, beat two egg whites stiff, add 8 tablespoons of confectioners' sugar, then the chocolate. Flavour if desired.

Make It a Montserrat Circingle

What do you mean when you say "Make it a Montserrat Circingle?" asked the visitor on the golf links.

"It is the favored drink just now," said the host.

It is made with a little Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice, and a little syrup or sugar, in ice water. I tel. you it is a grand drink."

The visitor tried it. "My eye, it is good," said he.

MAY EVACUATE WARSAW FOR THE RE-GROUPING OF TROOPS

Turks' Ammunition Cannot Last More Than A Month

Warsaw May Be Evacuated To Allow Regrouping Of Russian Armies

Turks' Ammunition Cannot Last More Than a Moat nd the Dardanelles Must Then Fall---French Troops Carry More German Trenches

Special Morning Cable:

PETROGRAD, July 30.—Newspapers officially hint that Warsaw may be evacuated to allow the regrouping of the Russian armies.

LONDON, July 30.—Five vessels were sunk and several lives were lost in recent submarine attacks in the last few hours.

LONDON, July 30.—Ten more alleged spies are under trial here.

ROME, July 30.—News reaches here that the Turks' ammunition cannot last more than a month and the Dardanelles must then fall.

PARIS, July 30.—French troops have carried more German trenches. British are inactive.

TOKIO, July 30.—Count Okuma, the Japanese Premier, has tendered the resignation of himself and the cabinet as a result of scandals. The Emperor is considering Okuma's action, and has not yet accepted the resignations.

COPENHAGEN, July 30.—The Swedish Brig "Fortuna" was torpedoed in the North Sea. The crew was saved.

BERLIN, July 30.—Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg and United States Ambassador Gerard conferred to-day on the Lusitania affair.

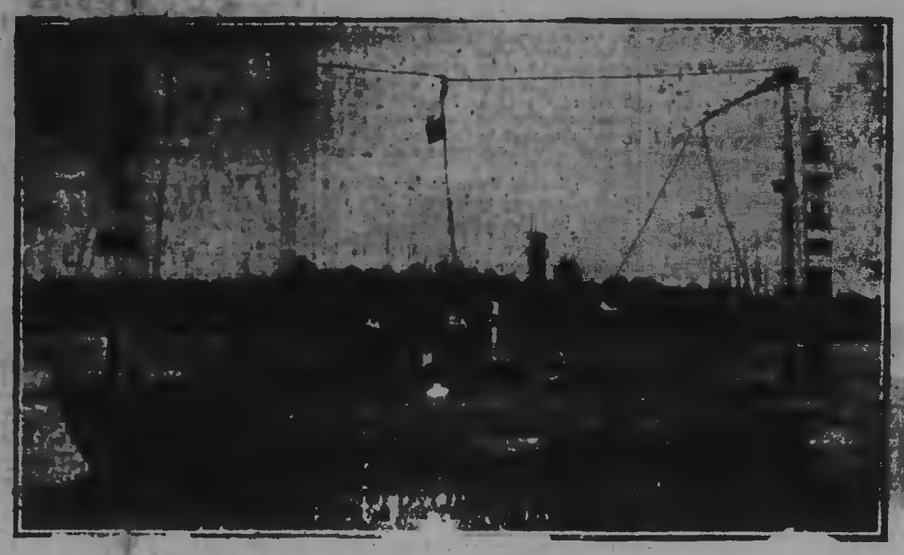
LONDON, July 30.—Further news from Petrograd last night was very hopeful of a definite defeat of the Germans on the front of Warsaw.

ATHENS, July 30.—The bombardment by warships and assaults by the Allies' land forces on the Dardanelles was resumed to-day. Engagements continue.

ROME, July 30.—It was reported last night that Goritz has been taken by Italians, but it is not officially confirmed.

LONDON, July 30.—Germans made heavy assaults on the British lines near Ypres this morning, but were repulsed with extreme losses.

PARIS, July 30.—News despatches say the French captured more ground in Alsace yesterday.



Torpedo Boat Destroyer Driven by Wireless.—Torpedo boat Nathalie, which the American inventor, John Hammond, Jr., has fitted with wireless apparatus by which the boat can be operated 28 miles from the shore with no one aboard. Radio waves transmitted through the masts, are used. It could carry enough explosive to destroy any ship it touched, without damage to its navigators.

RUSSIAN MILITARY CRITICS FORECASTING BIG RETIREMENT

PETROGRAD, July 30.—The military critics of the newspapers of Petrograd, after conversations with "competent military authorities," yesterday called upon the Russian public to view the events which are about to transpire with confidence and tranquility and to "maintain their faith in the glorious Russian army until such time as it shall undertake a decisive aggressive to break once for all the power of the stubborn enemy."

The Rech says: "Until such time as our armies receive the needed military supplies, the most sensible thing is to avoid a battle and retreat to previously-prepared positions, even though such retirement carry with it the occupation by the enemy of more extensive territory than they previously had held. It is better to give up territory which may be regained than to sacrifice an army which could be replaced only with difficulty."

Quoting a military authority, the Rech goes on to say it is possible that Russia is on the eve of a manoeuvre, which will consist of the retirement of the army from the line of the Vistula to new defensive positions marked by the strong fortresses of Kovno, Grodno, and Brest-Litovsk.

In conclusion, the Rech lays emphasis upon the necessity of giving greater weight to strategic than to political considerations.

The Bourse Gazette directs attention to an interview secured by its military wirter, who says that seventy German divisions, all the German cavalry, and a big part of the Austro-Hungarian army is at present operating against Russia, thereby preventing such concentration of the Russian army on the northern front as would be necessary if Russia undertook at this time a decisive aggressive movement. This paper points out that until Russia has completed the mobilization of her industrial forces, her army cannot meet the German artillery on equal terms. It argues furthermore against the retention of fortresses on the Narew-Vistula line which are the objective of the present German advance.

The Mightiest Battle Of The World War

Special Morning Cable:

BERLIN, (via London), July 30. — The battles between the Italians and Austrians along the Isonzo River are described by the correspondent in the Tyrol of the Lokal Anzeigen as the "mightiest and most frightful of the world war."

The great struggle has lasted a week, the correspondent says, without any decision having been reached. The principal Italian onslaught has been directed against the Doberdo Plateau, where the artillery fire exceeds in intensity that of the battles at Tarnow and Gorlice, in Galicia. The correspondent adds:

"The conflict, which is being directed from captive balloons, lasted three days without any interruption, and after only a few hours' pause was resumed. The Austrian army, which is composed of soldiers of nearly all the nationalities in the dual monarchy, endures the terrible fire bravely, and when the Italians gain a position they are soon thrown out of it.

"Italian aviators are continually seeking to destroy the railways at the rear of the Austrian lines, especially around Nabresina, but thus far they have done no great damage."

Rumania Is Staunch Friend Of The Allies

PARIS, July 30.— A report from Bucharest that orders had been issued to the Rumanian officials at all frontier stations to make the most thorough examination of all freight cars owned by Austria-Hungary, Germany and Turkey, to prevent any possibility of the passage through Rumanian territory of munitions and arms, was officially confirmed to-day at the Rumanian Legation in Paris.

It is reported that car loads of beer barrels packed in ice sent from Germany to Turkey were examined and the barrels found to contain war munitions. The freight cars are reported to have been provided with false bottoms and walls, behind which arms were hidden. Every device known to modern smugglers is said to have been used to pass arms and munitions through Rumania for the Ottoman troops.

Because of this state of affairs, the advices from Bucharest say, the Rumanian Government has requested the Entente allied powers to lend it experienced customs examiners and detectives to assist in enforcing the prohibition of transit in munitions.

Germany Needs Potatoes More Than Soldiers, Says Hollander Who Knows Real Conditions

Vegetables and Canned Goods Have Increased So Much In Price That Labourers and the Poorer Classes Cannot Buy Them---Prisoners Are All Underfed

Special Cable to The Examiner:

Is there a shortage of food in Germany? A Hollander, who has travelled extensively in that country since the war broke out, and who has had unique opportunities for seeing the real state of affairs, answers the question. Correspondents of neutral countries, he says, travelling through Germany and putting up at the best hotels, are quite right in saying they get just as good meals as used to be served for about the same price. "But," asks the Hollander, "can the price or amount of such articles be judged by a dinner or supper served in a restaurant for the better class? Far from it. The profit for the hotelkeeper comes largely from the wine, or, as is more common in Germany, from the beer served and drunk after meals, and a nickel on a glass of beer and a quarter on a bottle of wine squares easily the advanced price of the food."

WHERE BURDEN FALLS.

It is the labouring classes and the poor who carry the burden in case of shortage. Germany is killing three-quarters of her hogs because of lack of feed, but the price of pork increased just the same. The same applies to beef. Vegetables are all used for army purposes, and canned goods have gone up greatly in price. Lard costs over one-third more than in normal times. Potatoes, with the "K" bread, the main food, have almost doubled in price. Peas and beans for soup have increased so much in price that they practically are cut out of the labourer's bill of fare. There is only a small stock and no immediate supply available. Flour of the mixed kind is not to be had unless one drops his daily ration of bread. One of these only is available. If there be any doubt left then the advance in price for monthly board from $10 to $12 to $17 or $19—with less to eat—speaks for itself.

SHORT COMMONS.

That half a pound of "K" bread is sufficient for a labourer the writer doubts. It amounts to four thin slices, two for lunch at 9 a.m. and two for afternoon lunch, and this in a working day running from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. As a rule, breakfast is cut out now. Meat is for those who can pay for it.

In Cologne and Dusseldorf, the two biggest industrial centres of Rhineland, there are many mutterings of discontent among the labouring classes. If there is an uprising it will be sure to start in Rhineland.

FASTING FIGHTERS.

As to the soldiers' rations, the writer says he has spent many nights with them. They receive six-tenths of a pound of bread a day—six pounds for ten days. Soldiers who have returned from the front shrug their shoulders when asked about the rations; others, newly drilled and ready to leave, willingly agree that they are hungry and don't care about the small feeding.

The time of plenty and abundance has gone for the field army, too. The wine is drunk, spilled and wasted in the devastated territory of Belgium and France; the constant slaughter for the German soup kettles, together with shell fire and disease, have entirely wiped out the stock of cattle and other animals. Many of the soldiers used to buy cake and pastry, but the Government stopped the cheaper cake baking, so the soldiers had to tighten up their belts and go without.

CRITICAL SITUATION.

Summarizing, it would be an exaggeration to say that there is a famine in Germany, but that the bigger part of the population is suffering more are less is a matter of fact.

That Germany will pull through it seems likely, as the crop of early potatoes can be expected a month from now. However, the last act, fixing a daily ration of potatoes, shows that the situation is very critical. The anxiety of the Government for the new crop will be readily understood. It means Germany's only salvation.

UNDERFED PRISONERS.

Germany, the writer says, now needs potatoes worse than soldiers, since Britain has closed the seas. It is certain that Germany underfeeds her prisoners, both civil and military, but she has an excuse—she has not the food to feed them better.

One of the guards told the writer he would like to see the prisoners get more to eat, "but where are we going to get it? There is hardly enough for ourselves."

LIEUT. BECKER ELECTROCUTED THIS MORNING---PROTESTED HIS INNOCENCE TO THE LAST

Special to The Examiner:

OSSINING, July 30.—Lieut. Becker was electrocuted and pronounced dead at 5.55 a.m. He protested his innocence till the last.

At peace with his Maker, a prayer on his lips, but with never a faltering of his iron will, former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker expedited the murder of Gambler Herman Rosenthal at 5.55 a.m. to-day.

Pinned on his shirt, above the heart, the former Czar of the tenderloin carried with him in death, the picture of his devoted wife. In his hand he clutched a crucifix.

The death current cut off in his throat the whisper "Jesus, have mercy."

Just before he entered the death chamber, Becker declared to Father Curry: "I am not guilty by deed, conspiracy or in any other way, of the death of Herman Rosenthal. I am sacrificed for my friends."

Previously the former Police Lieutenant, at 4 a.m., had issued "my dying statement."

Becker walked unassisted from his cell to the death chamber.

His nerve was unshaken even as the guards stepped forward and adjusted the electrodes.

The last statement of Charles Becker made public at 4 a.m. is as follows:

"Gentlemen, I stand before you in my full senses, knowing that no power on earth can save me from the grave that is to receive me. In the face of that, in the teeth of those who condemn me, as in the presence of my God and your God, I proclaim my absolute innocence of the foul crime for which I must die. You are now about to witness my destruction by the State which is organized to protect the lives of the innocent. May Almighty God pardon every one who has contributed in any degree to my untimely death, and now on the brink of my grave, I declare to the world that I am proud to have been the husband of the purest, noblest woman that ever lived, Helen Becker. This acknowledgment is the only legacy I can leave her. I bid you all goodbye. Father, I am ready to go. Amen.

(Signed.) "Charles Becker."

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

"Why," sez he, "they've got a small ranchers' organization up north of the Canadian, and Happy Hawkins, the foreman at the Lion Head, put 'em up to it. One o' Big Jeff's men belong, and he has fixed it up on 'em. They have drifted in some stuff in the brakes o' Beaver Crick and word was sent to Lion Head to send up all the men they could to round up the rustlers after the rustlers had finished with their round-up. Well, as soon as this word began to work, all of Panther's and Big Jeff's crowd were to make for the Lion Head, and they intend to put it out of business. The Englishman is supposed to have a lot of money but if he tries to start in again, why Panther brags that he has a way to drive him out of the country sure pop."

"How does Corrigan know all this, if he's livin' within the law?" asked the girl.

"He's square and they all trust him," sez Bud. "He's plumb soft since he killed Harve; they all go soft in time. Buck has, and he's taken a lot o' starch out of the rest of us. Corrigan never gives up any news that'll hurt any one, but he's in with all sides. He sez that Dave Kensington's sister is livin' at Elliot, now, and that she has had word of the Kid bein' in this neighbourhood and has sent in word to Leavenworth and that a couple o' deputies have been scoutin' Corrigan for he allus seems to have plenty o' stock, an' money, too, but anyway Corrigan's got more friends 'n airy man in this country; but he's down in the mouth, now, on account of his dog. It's a curious thing, but it was this dog that killed Big Jeff's."

"What did you find out about the deputies which are after the Kid?" asked Belle.

"Why, the's a tall feller from over near Paris, and a short one from Kansas; but they've never caught up with the Kid yet, and Corrigan he sez he thinks they're gettin' purty well discouraged."

"Is that all your news?" sez she.

"Oh, I heard somethin' about Panther havin' it in for a feller named Cooper who lives near the Lion Head, sez Bud. "Cooper does some teamin' and he's got on to some o' Panther's doin's, and Panther wants to add him to the general cleanup."

"If Panther could fight as well as he can hate, he'd be a bad one," sez Belle Stern, with a sour grin. "I wish Buck had killed him that time. We have got to move north to be ready to help the Kid if he needs us."

"I think even Buck 'll agree to that," sez Bud.

"Well, Buck is right," sez Belle; "it's a wolf's life at the best; but I wish to my soul it would give me a chance to die fightin'."

"Aw, we're all gettin' soft, from hidin' out too long," sez Bud. "What we need is another good job."

"And I hope it'll be the last," sez she.

They went towards camp together, and I couldn't stand it any longer. The three men at the camp were beginnin' to fuss at the fire again, for the shade had struck 'em and it got cold quick except where the rocks held the heat, and anyway, outdoor men never lost a chance to build 'em a fire whether they need it or not. I wriggled to the edge of the crag and was just about to swing over when, I heard a shout, and froze stiff. It was only Bronco yellin' at Bud, but it took the jump out of me for several minutes.

They got into a discussion purty soon, and it was plain to see that Belle and Buck were on opposite sides I waited until they were in a heat, and then I took my slide. As soon as I hit the ground, I started to run, and after a time I came to the trail up. With the settin' sun shinin' down into it, I was able to make a purty fair guess of what that canon must be; but I didn't waste any time makin' sketches. I found my saddle and bridle; but the Kid was gone, and both horses and his leather with him. It was somewhere around seventy miles to where I had left my own hoss near Tom Smith's mound, and if ever a man felt like a busted lookin'-glass, I was that man.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT.

In Times of Peace.

All durin' the previous winter we had wollowed in different kinds of discussions, Isaac bein' forced to scrap with the rest of us, but Jim, old Josiah, and anything in print bein' regarded as authority. We had had a long wordy war, once, about the difference between rebellion and revolution, and the old hermit had been the one to settle it. "If you're takin' a long journey on the back of a mule," sez he, "and you get down for a minute and stoop over for somethin', and the mule sees fit to kick you a few, why, that's rebellion, just as soon as the mule gets up in the saddle."

I sat on a stone lookin' at my saddle while a whole procession of thoughts marched along and each one paused long enough to give me a kick until I was sore to the marrow of my soul. I had heard that revolution was frequently war and war was generally hell, but at the thought of pacin' off seventy miles in a pair of high-fifty-pound saddle on what would have been my head if I'd been lucky enough to 'a' had one, all these hearsays became facts and I groaned aloud.

From the tale Bud Stern had put out, it sounded to me as though the whole country had gone to war, and I was some surprised that the sky to the north wasn't lit up with burnin' ranch buildings. Time was what I ached for. I knew that if I had time enough I could get anywhere, but with all those scoundrels puttin' their cussed plans into action and me ploddin' along through the night with a load o' leather that got heavier every minute I was about ready to burst into sobs. We hadn't so much as caught sight of a dug out on the trail Tom Smith had brought me, and the sinkin' of the sun wasn't worth speakin' of beside the sinkin' of my own heart.

And then a voice close to my left, sez: "Put up your hands, there, stranger."

"Did you find out where the Kid's been hidin' out after plantin' the gel with old Cornell?" asked Belle.

"No, that's what none of 'em was able to find out," sez Bud; "but it was suspicioned that he was kept in hidin' at the Lion Head. Panther come near gettin' his one night, prowlin' around to find out. Why do you reckon Panther has such a hate for the Kid?"

Belle looked down at her hands a minute, openin' and closin' 'em, and lookin' at the brown strength of 'em. "Before I got to be more man than woman," sez she, "men used to be fools over me, and Panther Emmons was one of 'em.- He had built up to me before ever the Kid joined the gang, but even when the Kid was seein' the whole United States Army in every shadow, he was more to me than every one else in the world, and so I told Panther Emmons when he accused me of it. He threatened what he would do to the Kid, and to me, both, and Buck heard him, and Buck made him show up all the coward the' was in him and then drove him out. That was the real start of it; and now Buck has gone soft and the Kid wants to carry and get back inside the law."

"Well, he stands a blamed poor chance," sez Bud. "Panther is all for cleanin' out the Lion Head outfit in the hope of flushin' up the Kid; but Big Jeff is crazy to get the girl."

"Why don't he go and get her, then?" sez Belle. "He can surely

"Corrigan sez old Josiah Cornell is mighty bad medicine," sez Bud. 'He sez he's the outshootin'est feller in these parts when he does go on the prod, and that he allus has an Injun or two scoutin' for him. They claim he was genuine quality before the war and he keeps a slave yet, right there on the Hor-se-shoe. A feller by the name of Duffield saw him one time when he was turkey-huntin'; but the old man don't trouble nobody 'at don't trouble him, and ainybody 'at does trouble him, disappears, so he does about as he pleases."

Belle Stern doubled up her fist and struck the palm of her hand. "I wish I'd known this before," sez she. "We'd have thrown in with Big Jeff and helped him to get the gel and take her out of the country. I hate her!"

"Well, he's liable to swing Panther yet. He hates the Lion Head crowd as Panther does, for killin' his dog, and he wants to set fire to some of the ranch buildings, then get the gel, and then come back and clean up the Lion Head crowd while they're fightin' fire. Panther can't figger with Big Jeff, and he'll probably lose control of his own crowd when they bunch together."

Belle got up and paced up and down while I lay on the crag and wished I had barrel-hoops around me to help keep me from blowin' up. All these clouds gatherin' and me layin' out on a rock in the sun.

"I don't believe Corrigan can know all this," sez Belle after a time.

Alaska.

Alaska, the purchase of which by the United States was ratified by the Senate on April 9, 1867, was suggested for the new possession, among them Walrussia, American Siberia, Zero Islands and Polario. The name now used was proposed by Charles Sumner, who stated it to be that bestowed by the Indians themselves and given to Captain Cook with the information that it signified "the great land."

Ptolemaic Astronomy.

According to the Ptolemaic theory, the east was the center of the universe and was motionless. The surrounding ethereal region was composed of eleven skies or firmaments, which revolved around the earth as a common center. All the celestial bodies moved around the earth. This system lasted from about 200 B. C. to the time of Copernicus.

Asking Too Much.

He was a member of a regimental band, and he did not forget to brag about it.

"Prolonging" the Rabbit.

At chafing dish suppers it is almost impossible to serve a second portion of Welsh rarebit because it gets tough as soon as it cools. If a beaten egg is stirred into what remains and it is covered closely and reheated a moment over a small fire, using the hot water pan, it will be found quite as good as when first made.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Literary.

Dicky was just beginning to write compositions, when he produced his first literary review:

"My mother reads to me every night before I go to bed. I like the stories that my mother reads to me before I go to bed. Of all the stories that she reads I like 'Pilgrim's Progress' the best. He had a hard time, but he got by."—New York Post.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Carrington

A Story of Ranch Life

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Not only boys read stories of deeds of heroism. Girls sometimes absorb them and fall in love with the heroes. When I was a girl I doted on such stories. Soldier boys were my favorites, but I conceived a great admiration for the western cowboy. Having come from a refined family and lived in the east, where I never saw a cowboy, it is quite possible that had I met one of them my illusion would have disappeared like thin mist before the sun's rays.

The typical cowboy or cowpuncher, as he is called, I was told later, murders the king's English, the corners of his mouth are gummed with tobacco juice, his every third word is an oath, and he gets drunk whenever he finds an opportunity. I don't mean to say that there are not quiet, respectable young men among them, but the majority don't pretend to be carpet knights.

When I was nineteen years old my brother, after graduating at college, concluded to make a ranchman of himself and, going to the west, purchased and stocked a ranch. He wrote glowing letters about the life he led, his herds increase, and seemed rather pleased with the lawlessness of a country wherein every man was his own attorney and his revolver his constable. He sent home a photograph of himself on horseback, a sombrero on his head, a lariat at his saddlebow and a revolver at his hip. It fired my imagination, and I thought how fine it would be for me to have a lover rigged out in the same fashion.

A time came when he wrote me to make him a visit. I was wild to go, but my parents objected. However, I was so persistent in my entreaties that they at last consented. Having no escort, I was obliged to travel most of the way alone. My brother wrote me that he would send some one to escort me over the last sixty miles since the journey was through a rough country and he was unwilling that I should pass over it alone. This distance was made up of fifty miles of railway and ten of wagon travel. The man I was to meet would wear a yellow ribbon in his buttonhole. He would pass through the train and I was to stop him when he reached me and ask if he was John Carrington.

When Mr. Carrington came slowly walking down the aisle of the car I saw that he fulfilled my ideas of the man I would like to love and be loved by. Though roughly dressed in flannel shirt and trousers and a light coat, he showed unmistakable signs of being to the manner born. How many pistols and knives he carried on his person I did not know, but one huge revolver was stuck in his belt in front.

In a buttonhole of his coat he carried a yellow ribbon which I recognized at once as having held together a bundle of cigars. This assured me that he was the man I was to meet, and I addressed him, asking him if he were not Mr. Carrington. His face broke into a beautiful smile, and he lifted his sombrero and took a seat beside me.

Mr. Carrington told me that he had a ranch near my brother's and that they, being the only two gentlemen in the neighborhood, had become fast friends. My brother had mentioned my coming, and Carrington had asked permission to be my escort over the latter part of the journey. Of course I realized that he would relish the care of a young girl, since he had probably not seen one of his own class for a long while.

I found Mr. Carrington a very agreeable conversationalist. I asked him why he wore a revolver in front instead of at the hip, where the heroes I had read about carried their weapons. His reply was not very satisfactory. I learned afterward that the trains had been often robbed, and he desired to have his "gun" where he could grasp it in the shortest possible time. The reason why he did not tell me this was because he did not wish to frighten me. Nevertheless his being thus armed naturally suggested danger to me, and I felt how fine it would be to be protected by him.

We had passed over the principal part of the journey. The train was by no means full, and my escort in order to give me more room turned over the back of the seat in front and sat there facing me. I was looking out through the window when I heard the forward door thrown open with a bang and the words pronounced in a quick, sharp, angry tone:

"Hands up, all!"

A man entered the car, while another immediately closed the door and stood with his back against it, a carbine at his shoulder, pointed down the aisle. The first man had no arms in his hand whatever. Only a few seconds elapsed before I heard the same banging of the rear door and, turning, saw a man standing in the same relative position as the one in front, also with a rifle sweeping the car.

I looked at Mr. Carrington, expecting to see him draw his revolver and open fire. He did no such thing, but sat without making a motion for defense. The man whose hands were free advanced, calling on the passengers to give up their valuables, which they did very quickly. If any one lagged the robber had only to put his hand to his hip to hurry him. There were but few persons in advance of Mr. Carrington and myself, and the collector was upon us almost immediately. Catching sight of the revolver in Carrington's belt, the robber jerked it out and thrust it in his own belt. Carrington gave up all the money he had in his pocket, which was merely enough for the journey's expenses.

"You're pretty enough to kiss," said the robber to me, "and I'm going to have one."

With that he stooped and kissed me. I shrank as far as I could, but dared not offer any further resistance. I saw that Carrington winced at this treatment, but he did not raise a finger to protect me. The robber passed on without asking me for my valuables, and both I and my escort sat perfectly still, as did the other passengers, till I saw the man with the carbine in front step out on to the platform and jump off the car. Then I heard the rear door open and shut and surmised that we were free of the robbers.

I was so filled with anger and contempt for my escort that without a word I arose from my seat and took another. Had he made any protest whatever against the insult the robber had put upon me by kissing me I might have been less pronounced in showing my feelings. Besides, the episode completely changed my admiration for the western fighting man, especially one who had been charged by my brother to protect me.

What Carrington did after this I knew not at the time, for I made the rest of the journey alone. When we reached the station at which I was to leave the train the news of the robbery had preceded us. When I stepped on the platform my brother was there listening to Carrington, who was talking to him in a very earnest and rapid manner. As soon as I stepped down from the car Carrington left him, and I heard the latter say, "Not a word till I see you again." Then he made off, and Bob came up and took me in his arms.

"Poor girl!" he said. "This has been a sad introduction for you into this lawless country. I should not have brought you out here."

"You should have sent a man and not a coward for my escort." I replied, still burning under the insult I had received and the absence of resentment on the part of Mr. Carrington.

Bob led me to a four mule team he had in waiting, then went off for my baggage, and when he returned I conversed with him, principally about the holdup, ignoring Mr. Carrington's action, or, rather, want of action. Bob not mentioning it himself. On reaching the ranch house I was shown to my room, and the reaction from my excitement brought on a flood of tears.

However, a rest brought back my composure, and I tried to look forward to enjoying ranch life, though my first experience in the region had been by no means pleasant. Mr. Carrington did not appear, and I felt quite sure that I would see nothing of him after the cowardly manner in which he had permitted me to be insulted. I did not ask Bob what had become of him, and Bob did not mention him to me. I inferred that Bob had been disappointed in him, but that he did not wish to make the matter worse by discussing it.

On the third morning after my arrival Bob came to my door earlier than I had been accustomed to rise and called to me:

"Get up, Bess. Ned Carrington is here and wishes to see you."

"Indeed!" I replied. "If Mr. Carrington wishes to see me he can call at a proper hour."

"He has something to show you. Don't keep him waiting."

My curiosity being aroused, I got out of bed, dressed myself and went downstairs. Bob met me in the great hall and led me out on to the veranda. There stood Mr. Carrington [illegible] en other men, some of whom were mounted and some holding their horses by the bridle. There were three others loaded with chains. One of these I recognized as the robber who had kissed me. Carrington turned to me and said:

"I have brought this villain here to apologize for insulting you. If I had lifted a finger to protect you at the time I would have been shot dead by a man at one end or the other of the car, besides causing these men to shoot up the car, possibly killing you, among others. On reaching the station I called together a posse. We made after the robbers, got wind of their whereabouts, tracked them there and succeeded in getting them." Then, turning to the robber who had kissed me, he said:

"Apologize."

The man stood mute. Carrington struck him on the head with his revolver, causing a stream of blood to flow down his face.

"Apologize!" roared Carrington again, cocking his revolver.

I ran down the steps, caught Mr. Carrington's arm and took his revolver out of his hand.

"Take them away, boys," said Bob. "We have no use for them around here."

The robbers were led away, I supposed, to jail, but I question if they ever saw a jail, for this was the third robbery they had committed, and when Bob said "we have no use for them" I fancy he meant to shoot them.

Mr. Carrington had evidently not relished my treatment of him, for he immediately withdrew and could only be induced to appear again at the ranch after a letter of apology from me, in which I approved his action in the car and begged his forgiveness.

That was a good while ago. We are none of us ranchers now. We all live in the east, and I am Mrs. Carrington.

An Island Wilderness.

Andoro island, among the Bahamas, is ninety miles in length and twenty to forty miles in breadth and most of its extensive area has never been explored. It is an unbroken wilderness, inhabited solely by about 3,500 negroes. It has great forests, seldom penetrated by white men, of mahogany, mastic, ebony, logwood and cedar; swamps, creeks and bayous teeming with wild fowl, including the flamingo, which is found here in vast numbers. No real effort has been made to exploit its resources. It is said to be the only one of the Bahamas which has running streams of water and is surrounded by a series of barrier reefs which provide sheltered water ideal for yachting.

Iceberg Lake.

The lakes in Glacier National park that are fed by glacial water are milk white, but others are clear and pure and reflect all the varying aspects of the sky and clouds above. On a clear day the water is beautifully blue, but when storm clouds gather it assumes darker shades, which make it appear dangerous and forbidding. One of the most attractive lakes in the park is Iceberg lake, so called because the glacier at its edge discharges bergs into its waters at intervals, after the manner of the glaciers found in the arctic region. The crest of the wall around this lake is as high above the water as four buildings like New York's skyscrapers atop one another.

Sense of Humor.

"What is a sense of humor?"

"A sense of humor," replied Mr. Growcher, "is what makes you laugh at something that happens to somebody else which would make you mad if it happened to you."—Washington Star.

Havana's Water Supply.

For more than 300 years the water supply of the city of Havana was carried through an open ditch, built in 1592. The supply originated at the springs of the Almendares river, nine miles south of the city, and this source still provides an adequate flow, for the springs, which have since been fully developed, number 400 and are inclosed by a heavy wall of masonry which is constantly under military guard. An aqueduct has long since supplanted the ditch.

Verdi and Bismarck on Titles.

The composer Verdi was offered a title of nobility by King Victor Emmanuel. It was intended that he should be created Marquis or Comte de Busseto, after the estate upon which he lived. The composer refused the offer energetically. He considered that Verdi was somebody and that the Marquis de Busseto would be nobody.

Even Bismarck was unable to parry a blow of this character. When the young emperor broke with him he conferred upon him the title of Duke of Lauenburg. Bismarck received the parchment with this exclamation:

"A pretty name! It will be handy for traveling incognito."

Some days after a parcel arrived at Varzin bearing the address "Mme. la Duchesse de Lauenburg."

Bismarck, to whom it was delivered, being then at table, arose and, offering the letter to his wife, remarked ironically:

"Duchess, enchanted to make your acquaintance!"

Never Really Grow Old.

The outside of the man or the woman waxes and wanes, but the "I myself within me," that something of which we are conscious, that spark of the infinite flame, seems as changeless as eternity. To himself and to those who know him very intimately and most completely, the man is and seems just as young and just as old at twenty as at fourscore. We were a family of seven children, of the old New England stock, and Puritan. We have all lived to be several years beyond seventy. We grew up together and have continued to dwell in our native land in concord and harmony. Each has read the others, as the saying is, like the pages of a book. Changes have come—the usual changes. And these have been many. But the dispositions, tendencies, tastes, preferences, loves, hates and all the long catalogue of personal qualities, have remained the same, and seem bound to continue unchangeable forever.—P. Deming in Scribner's.

His Indifference.

"A stranger of good appearance and [illegible] our midst for several days last week," related J. Fuller Gloom, "radiating good cheer and sunshine like the otter of roses is said to radiate from the otter. He shook hands with me cling[illegible]y on several different occasions and called me brother in sugared accents. However, as I was fairly busy every time I met him and have use for what little money I can rake and scrape and possess such a mean disposition that I am making no new acquaintances and fighting as shy of the old ones as possible, I didn't learn whether he was selling oil stock; organizing a new fraternal order, canvassing for valuable literary works, boosting a new fund, inculcating another cult or consenting to run for office at the earnest solicitation of his many friends."—Tom P. Morgan in Judge.

The Man Who Snores.

Where to Write To Peterborough's Soldier Heroes

Addresses of Local Boys Who Are Wounded, Ill or Prisoners

In order that their friends and citizens generally may have an opportunity of writing to the Peterborough soldier boys who are wounded, or ill in hospital or prisoners, the Examiner will publish a list daily giving the names and addresses, where the information is available. Relatives can help by letting the Examiner know the addresses as soon as possible:

Victor, Sergt. Peter, 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, Hampstead Military Hospital, London N.W., England, (wounded).

Powell, Pte. Chas., 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, British Red Cross Hospital, Hawkhurst, Kent, England, (ill.)

King, Gunner Harry (548 Downie street), Canadian Field Artillery, 1st Canadian Division, Oaklaw Manor Hospital, Shrewsbury, London, Eng., (wounded.)

Mullin, Pte. Chas., 5th Battalion, 1st Canadian contingent, St. Vincenz Hospital, Paderborn, Germany. (Prisoner of war and wounded.)

Pte. H. Caillaird, 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, London Military Hospital, Lower Clapton, N.W., Eng., wounded.

Sergt. A. F. Field. Prisoner of War, 2nd Battalion, Canadians, Hopital des Soeurs Evangeliques, Oberhausen, Rhineland, Germany; prisoner of war, and wounded.

Mongour, Pte. Chas., 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, 1st Southern General Hospital, Edgbasten, Birmingham, Eng.

Fallen, Pte. Gordon J., 14th Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, 2nd Southern General Hospital, New Southmead Infirmary, Bristol, Eng.

Saunders, Pte. Harold, 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, Hut 32,

How He Accounted For It.

A man who was presented for naturalization said he had six children, all born in this country, that the oldest was sixteen and that he had lived in this country nine years. This led to a little cross questioning on the part of the examiner, who could not understand the arithmetical mind of a man who declared that he had been here but nine years, but his oldest child, sixteen, was born here.

"How do you account for it?" finally asked the examiner, willing to give the man a chance to get out of his apparent mistake.

"Why," declared the would be citizen, "I married a widow with four children."—Boston Record.

Evil of Worry.

The man or woman who worries kills in himself or herself one of the greatest sources of happiness—that is, the power of observation. He is like the person who, looking out of a window upon a glorious and inspiring view, sees only a speck on the pane of glass. He is so busy inspecting the mark he fails to see the beauty beyond. Are you going to shut out all the possible beauty of the future by fretting over the anxieties of the present? Don't allow yourself to become a victim to such a warped view. Look out and over the disagreeable specks which may blot your present lookout into a beyond diffused with hopes, trust and cheer.—New York Telegram.

THE DISTANT CLOUD.

You have a disagreeable duty to do at 12 o'clock. Do not blacken 9 and 10 and 11 and all between with the color of 12. Do the work of each and reap your reward in peace, so when the dreaded moment in the future becomes the present you shall meet it walking in the light, and that light will overcome its darkness.—George Macdonald.

Name to Fit the Trade.

Old newspapers give us many instances of men's names fitting their callings. Thus we have Last, a shoemaker of Exeter, and Treadway, who plied the same trade in Hammersmith. There was a Bristol schoolmaster named Bod. Dodge and Wynne, attorneys at law of Liverpool, must have been the butts of their fellow townsmen, while few could have a more appropriate name than the Primitive Methodist preacher River Jordan.—London Chronicle.

The Sun.

It has been stated that no one has ever seen the sun. A series of concentric shells envelops a nucleus of which we know nothing except that it must be infinitely hotter than the fiercest furnace and that it must amount to more than nine-tenths of the solar mass. That nucleus is the real sun, forever hidden from us. The outermost of the enveloping shells is about 5,000 miles thick and is called the "chromosphere." It is a gaseous fluid.—Exchange.

The Old Chinese Way.

In its wars with England and France in 1859-60 China was easily conquered and forced to a humiliating peace. The Peking Gazette, the official organ of the government, however, reported the following concerning that treaty of peace:

"As the western barbarians have admitted their wrongs and humbly solicited for peace, the emperor in his infinite goodness has granted their prayer and, moreover, has made them a present of a large sum of money (indemnity of war) to enable them to begin an honest life, so that they may not again be driven to murder and rapine."

It Was Funny.

"Something very funny happened the other day," said O'Beetle to his friend McFoo. "I was downtown and found myself without car fare. Before I had a chance to worry over the thought of walking a few miles in the hot sun along comes Binker, who writes jokes. I know him well, and I had the nerve to ask him to loan me a quarter. He told me he was glad to accommodate me and handed over the coin."

"Is that all?" asked McFoo.

"It is."

"Well, what's the joke?"

"Why, the funny part is that a man who writes jokes should have a whole quarter with him at one time."—New York Times.

History of Anatomy.

The way in which we are so "fearfully and wonderfully made" was largely a mystery to the ancients. It may be said that anatomical science was practically unknown prior to Aristotle, 384 B. C. Before that date nearly all that was known of anatomy was derived from the dissection of the lower animals. Aristotle did something in the way of science, but it was not until the time of the famous Alexandrian school, a century before and a century after the birth of Christ, that the anatomy of man began to be fairly understood. The Ptolemies were great patrons of science and were the first who enabled physicians freely to dissect the human body.

The Epiglottis.

A modern engine is dependent to a large extent upon automatically working valves for its efficiency, but the perfected valve was invented by nature and applied to the human body long before mankind began to dream of steam or gas engines. We dignify this valve by the name of epiglottis, and most of us know something about it. It is situated at the back of the mouth just where the air passage and food passage cross. It is the function of the epiglottis to close the windpipe automatically every time we swallow food. If it did not every particle of food would choke us. This valve works with more automatic precision than any ever placed on an engine.

He Ate His Own Words.

Not long ago the punishment for libel in Russia was the requirement that the libeler literally eat his own words. A man who published a small volume reflecting on the unlimited power of the sovereign was seized, tried in a summary way and condemned to consume the objectionable words. In one of the public streets the book was severed from its binding, the margins cut off, the leaves rolled up one by one and fed to the unfortunate author. A surgeon was in attendance to pronounce upon the number possible to give without endangering his life, but he is reported to have set the limit at something like 200.

THE BEAUTIFUL.

Man comes into life to seek and find his sufficient beauty, to serve it, to win and increase it, to fight for it, to dare anything for it, counting death as nothing so long as the dying eyes still turn to it. And fear, and dullness, and indolence, and appetite, which are no more than fear's four crippled brothers who make ambushes and creep by night, are against him, to delay him, to hold him off and beguile and kill him in that quest.—H. G. Wells.

"I ran across your old friend Smith the other day." "How did that happen?" "He wouldn't get out of the way when I blew my horn."

Bricks From Babylon.

There is a law in the Turkish empire prohibiting the exportation of relics and antiques more than 100 years old, and the fact that it is on the statute books gives rise to the common practice of offering spurious articles to the tourist. Real objects of art or of sufficient age to be of value are rarely to be purchased, and the general desire of the visitor, therefore, seems to be to obtain stones or pieces of clay from the sites of ancient ruins or bricks with inscriptions. The former can probably be obtained, but they are practically valueless, as any piece of clay from Babylon is quite like another from Mussl. Bricks from either of these places that are known to be genuine are unobtainable.

With Military Honors.

It is not universally known what is meant by a funeral "with full military honors." In such a funeral the coffin is borne on a gun carriage.

If the dead soldier was an infantryman his sword and helmet rest on his coffin.

At the funeral of a cavalry soldier his sword and helmet are fastened to the saddle of his horse, which is led immediately behind the gun carriage, and his top boots, with spurs attached, are fastened in the stirrups, with the toes pointing backward.

A firing party, drawn, if possible, from the deceased's regiment, fire three volleys over the grave, and the "Last Post" is then sounded by buglers.—Pearson's Weekly.

EXERCISE AND GRECIAN BEAUTY.

WHAT IT MEANS

Many thousands of women are nowadays paying attention to physical culture and the proper exercise of their body muscles, where, thirty years ago or fifty years ago there was no thought expended on this science, which is quite necessary to physical beauty. The reason the Greeks, both men and women, excelled in beautiful and symmetrical forms was because of the attention they paid to the proper exercise. Then, too, they were untrammeled by corsets, shoes and the inconveniences of clothing. To the minds of some women the idea of physical exercise conveys only the idea of hard fatiguing work. Mild exercise continued day after day is best for the body and spirits and health. Without proper exercise there can be no health, and without health there can be no real beauty.

There is no stronger proof of the sound remedial value of Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription than that it restores the wasted form to its wonted roundness.

The mighty restorative Prescription speedily causes all womanly troubles to disappear, removes pain and misery at certain times and brings back health and strength to nervous, irritable and exhausted women.

It is a wonderful prescription prepared only from Nature's roots with glycerine, with no alcohol to falsely stimulate. It banishes pain, headache, backache, low spirits, hot flashes, dragging-down sensations, worry and sleeplessness surely and without loss of time.

Blood Thin and Weak
Too Nervous to Sleep

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

Thin blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headaches, neuralgic or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubles with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of colour as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help for me. By enriching the blood, it has restored colour to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend so excellent a medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood, and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The feeble, wasted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from mere stimulating medicines which give rise to false hope and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own cases. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Purse Proud.

"The world reproaches us nouveaux riches with being purse proud," said one of them the other day. "Well, my reply is that nobody is so purse proud as your old aristocracy. There's a story, too, that bears me out.

"It's a story about one of the Stuyvesants, or Livingstons, or Rhinelanders—I'm not quite sure of the name, but it was a real New York first family. Miss Rhinelander, if that was the lady, had a back yard abutting on a skyscraper hotel. Well, the hotel got very prosperous, and one day the proprietor wrote to her:

"'Madam, how much do you want for your back yard, as I wish to enlarge my hotel?'

"The haughty lady wrote back:

"'Sir, how much do you want for your hotel, as I wish to enlarge my back yard?'"—Washington Star.

A Trunk of the Sea.

Like the ribs of a long dead giant so stand the rusty ribs of the U. S. S. Wateree, two miles inland, at the foot of the Andes, where the ship was deposited in 1868 by a monster tidal wave. The ship, with practically its entire crew aboard, was swept from its anchorage off Irica and carried inland, where it was left on an even keel, almost uninjured.

Trying For the Cheerful.

A Boston doctor says that one should always be cheerful at the breakfast table. EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The tunic effects refuse to leave us, and of late have taken somewhat the form of a coat worn with a separate skirt. This is as true of the dresses of our little folk as it is of those of their elders, and in both the arrangement is excellent for combinations of material.

In the frock herewith illustrated we have a two gore skirt joined to a regulation underwaist, closing in the back and made without sleeves. The coat or tunic, which is worn over this skirt, is of sacque cut, without any break at the waist. It has a round neck trimmed with a square collar, and fastens on the breast with two buttons. Below these the material flares a little, so as to show the waist and skirt beneath. The sleeves may be long or short, and they may have a band finish at the wrist or a cuff at the elbow.

These dresses are extremely pretty when made of linen or its imitations, combining a colored coat with a white skirt. Gingham in stripes, plaids or figures over a skirt of plain color is also pretty and inexpensive, and as for cotton voile, it offers almost endless possibilities in the use of plain and embroidered variation, and also of white over color.

The dress pattern, No. 7,940, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Medium size requires 2 yards of 36-inch striped material and 1¼ yards of 44-inch plain.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THE EVACUATION OF WARSAW BEGINS

LONDON HEARS GOLD AND STORES ARE REMOVED

Small Military Booty For The Germans If They Take Warsaw

Advices Reaching London From Russia Are That the Work of Removing the Big Guns From the Great Fortress of Novo Georgewisk Has Been Commenced---Gold From the Polish Capital is Sent to Petrograd

CONCENTRATE TRAINS TO REMOVE TROOPS

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—The Russians have begun the evacuation of Warsaw, with the removal of all public documents and treasures.

The banks are sending their gold to Petrograd, and by to-morrow it is believed the city will have been denuded of all Government stores likely to be of use to the Germans.

Such was the substance of the advices reaching here to-day.

Military authorities are now concentrating trains for the removal of troops.

The work of removing the heavy guns from the great fortress of Nove Georgeivisk, which guards Warsaw's north-western flank, is now being pushed. The principal military booty which the Germans hope to capture is not in Warsaw itself, which is not a fortress, but in Novo Georgeivsk.

If arrangements do not miscarry, the booty that will fall to the Germans will be comparatively small.

ATHENS, July 30.—The Turks are mounting heavy batteries in the Greek quarters of Tatavla, according to eports forwarded from Constantinople.

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—The trawler Young Perry was sunk by a German submarine to-day. The crew was saved.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 30.—Premier Borden, while in England, will endeavour to secure an arrangement whereby severely wounded Canadian soldiers may be despatched as rapidly as they can be moved to Canada for treatment in their own country.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Before the administration to-day were several grave problems. Charges of German manufacturing for its spies' benefit forged American passports, threatened a fresh controversy between Washington and Berlin. Germany's right to sink the American freighter Leelanaw was to be questioned immediately. Other differences marked time. The British supplement to the note on the Order in Council, it was confidently expected, would clear the way for freer American trade with neutrals.

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—Orders have been issued at the Censor's Office that hereafter full details regarding the operations of enemy submarines will not be passed for publication abroad. It is thought that the publication of stories concerning submarine victims is being found to give Germany news and encouragement otherwise not obtainable. Another interpretation of this is that by some new method the British are capturing or destroying a great number of German submarines, and it is advisable for the present to avoid publicity in the matter.

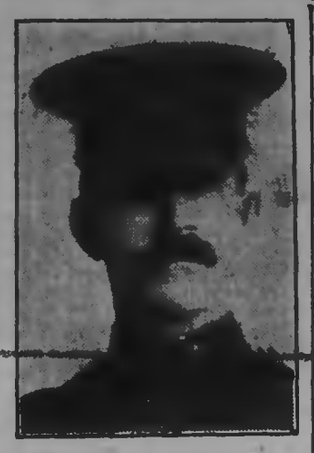
MORE LOCAL BOYS OFF TO THE FRONT BANDSMEN GOING

Enthusiastic Send-off to Army Service Corps Recruits Last Night—Two Local Bandsmen off to Bermuda—Sub-Lieutenant Geale of Royal Naval Air Service Sails To-morrow Morning



MAJOR G. W. ANDERSON
Formerly of the 57th Regiment, and now with the 58rd Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, commanded by Lt.-Col. R. M. Dennistoun, also formerly of the 57th Regiment. Major Anderson is visiting his relatives here on a few days.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The long list of Peterborough men who have gone to the front was increased last evening when the three Army Service Corps immediate overseas service left for Kingston en route to England. The three, Drivers Martin Kenneally and Eddie Collins, and Shoeing-smith Chas. Ellis, of Warsaw, were given an enthusiastic send-off. A big crowd gathered at the station, and the three men were carried on to the train on the shoulders of their friends, while three hetrty cheers wer given. All three are widely-known, and the send-off on that account was an especially enthusiastic one.

Every day nearly sees some Peterborough boy off to the front. This morning Sub-Lieutenant Norman Geale, of the Royal Naval Air Service, who has just successfully completed an aviation course, left on the morning C.P.R. train for Montreal, whence he will sail to-morrow for England on the Missanabie. He will report directly to the War Office for instructions. Sub-Lieutenant Geale will be attached to the Flying Corps of the British Navy.

Two Peterborough bandsmen left to-day for Kingston, to join the band of the 38th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, which leaves on Sunday for Bermuda to relieve the Royal Canadian Regiment. They were Bandsman Fred Sileox, clarionet player with the 57th Band, and Bandsman Stuart Langford, saxaphone player with the Temple Band.

It is likely when the recruiting campaign opens next week, a large number of bandsmen from both the 57th and Temple bands will be found ready to go. Bandsmen are always in demand, and an effort will be made to have Peterborough well represented in the battalion to be formed in this district. The bandsmen have been talking the matter over, and a lot of them are eager to enlist.

Capt. M. H. Park and Lieut. G. K. Rackham, of the 59th Battalion, C. E. F., are home from Barriefield for a few days. They will meet with the Speakers' Patriotic League executive to-night.

Major Geo. W. Anderson, of the 58rd Battalion, formerly of the 57th Regiment, has been in town for several days visiting relatives. There are 9,000 troops at Sewell Camp, Manitoba, where Major Anderson is stationed. The 58rd Battalion is commanded by Lt.-Col. Dennistoun, formerly of Peterborough and the 57th Regiment.

ARMY IDOLIZES CADORNA.

He Successfully Applies in Real War Principles He Once Taught.

UDINE, July 28.—Officers who come into contact with General Cadorna, the Italian commander, say that at headquarters as well as on the battle front he applies the principles of tactics and strategy with the same precision and lucidity as when he taught them at a military school. The movements of the troops under him are practical applications of those principles, obtaining the same results as he foresaw in theory.

Similarly, just as General Cadorna was inexorable in time of peace toward officers who neglected their duty or were unfit for command, he is unflinching on the battle field. But his sense of justice is so keen that it tempers his severity, making him the idol of the army.

When a couple of days ago Cadorna was himself at the front on the Isonzo, conducting the advance, the ardour of the soldiers was so great that their officers experienced difficulty in restraining them from rash attacks. The army's devotion to its leader is returned by Cadorna, who constantly insists to his officers that no man's life be risked if it is possible to avoid it.

WAITING GAME IS THE POLICY OF GENERAL JOFFRE

French Leader Believes in Trying to Beat Germany by a Campaign of Attrition and Exhaustion--Conserving His Own Forces

ANOTHER WINTER CAMPAIGN

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, France, July 30. —France is fully prepared for a winter campaign. It is understood that Gen. Joffre is unwilling to force a decisive battle on the ground that Germany must give way under the long drawn out pressure, and by such tactics he can save the allies thousands of men. He is said to be an exponent of defeating Germany by attrition, no matter how long it takes France and her allies, being in a better position to play a waiting game than the central European powers.

Unless Germany strikes a decisive blow this summer, which captured prisoners say she will endeavour to do, in three months she will be on the toboggan according, not only to French authorities, but to captured Germans of the Heidelberg professor type.

The French mills are busy turning out uniforms and other winter equipment. The French public opinion is beginning to accustom itself to the idea of another winter in the trenches and some 18 months more of war.

Although Gen. Joffre is criticised not infrequently for not hurrying matters more, some of his leading generals are known to stand with him on the policy of conserving the army so as to have a large, well-conditioned force when the other side is thinned out and greasy.

$138.12 From Sale Of Paper

Progressive Club Express Thanks to Those Who Assisted in Movement

On Tuesday, July 27th, the Secretary of the Peterborough Progressive Club received a cheque from the Northumberland Paper and Electric Co., for $138.12 for the car of paper. The club wishes to thank all those who helped with the collecting, tying and baling of the magazines and papers, Mr. W. H. Hamilton, the Kingan Hardware Co., the Warne Drug Co., the Times Printing Co., Oak Hall, and the Boy Scouts.

The club wishes to express appreciation to the Press, which has been very generous about publishing notices, etc.

CAPT. STETHEM WILL SPEAK

Wounded Officer Back From the Firing Line Will Be Here For Recruiting Meeting—Col. Hemming and Trooper Milloy Also Coming

A GREAT MEETING

In addition to the speakers already announced for the big patriotic and enlistment encouragement meeting in the Armouries on Wednesday night next, several others have been secured who will be listened to with the greatest interest.

Capt. H. A. Stethem, a returned officer from the front, will give a graphic relation of the tragedy that is now daily going on in the field, and of the efforts of the Allies to drive the Germans out of Belgium. He spoke at the Arena, night before last, in Ottawa, and his relation made a profound impression.

Col. Hemming, the District Officer Commanding, will also speak. Then Trooper Milloy will speak. He is famously known as the blind soldier from South Africa, and is at present a professor in the Royal Military College. With these speakers, in addition to Hon. Geo. E. Foster, there should be a rousing meeting.

FOE'S ATTACK IS FAILURE

Striving to Win Back the Labyrinth, Germans, Started a Hand-Grenade Engagement That Lasted Throughout the Night

GAINED NO GROUND

PARIS, France, July 30.—(French official communique.) — Striving to win back the Labyrinth, German troops precipitated a fierce hand grenade fight last night that lasted until morning. The fiercest fighting was in the environs of Souchez.

Another night battle occurred in the Vosges, where also the Germans attempted to win back lost ground. They kept up the attack till midnight, being finally repulsed by the French crossfire which took a heavy toll of dead and injured.

An artillery duel was in progress between the Oise and the Aisne rivers this morning.

Nancy was visited by a German aeroplane which dropped bombs without effect.

BECKER DIED INNOCENT MAN SAY HIS PRIESTS

Spiritual Advisers Say the Police Lieutenant Electrocuted This Morning Maintained His Innocence to the End

DID NOT CONFESS

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OSSINING, N.Y., July 30.—Becker died an innocent man, in the opinion of his spiritual advisers, Father Curry and Father Cashin.

"From your experience with the condemned men," Father Cashin was asked, "isn't it your belief that a guilty man always confesses in the last few hours?"

"Invariably," the priest responded. "Usually the confession comes after the sacrament has been given. Becker maintained his innocence to the end.

"Father Curry said to him after we had administered the Holy Sacrament: "Are you guilty, by word, or deed, or in any manner whatsoever of this crime?"

"Becker answered: "Father, as I stand on the brink of the grave, I am not."

Mrs. Charles Becker was prostrated with grief at her home, the Bronx, today, when the electric current at Sing Sing prison made her a widow. She arrived home from a heart rending farewell at Ossining shortly before 3 a.m., and relatives almost had to carry her up the steps and into the house.

PROGRAMME FOR THE PRINTER'S PICNIC

Interesting Event Will Be Staged To-morrow—The List of Prizes—Orchestra in Attendance

Arrangements have been completed for the Printers' Picnic that is to be held to-morrow afternoon. The boat will leave the wharf at 1.30 sharp, and will proceed to Jubilee Point, where elaborate preparations have been made for the entertainment of the visitors. The Peterboro Shoe Company

New Firm Will Open For the First Time To-Morrow

To-morrow morning the Peterborough Shoe Company will make its debut to the citizens of Peterborough. This store is located in the Lundy Block, 291 George Street. It presents a very attractive appearance and is well stocked with a fine display of up-to-date footwear which will be offered to the public at a price consistent with good quality. It is the intention of the Company to specialise in first quality footwear. The store has been remodelled and is well suited for the business inaugurated by the Peterborough Shoe Company. One of the features of the premises is the very attractive window which affords every opportunity for window display.

EQUAL TO THE EMERGENCY

—Of course, just now, we have to have daily respirator drill, and take great care that our men are able rapidly not only to adjust their 'nose-bags' but dip them in solution writes an English officer. This entails more work and vigilance than you imagine, for unless carefully watched the men are remarkably careless in taking precautions.

The other day a rumour spread around that the Germans were using bullets which set one on fire. I heard an amusing dialogue on the subject outside my dugout. "I say Bill," said one, "the swine are now using bullets which set yer alight."

"Good God," said Bill. "We'll 'av to carry buckets of water to put ourselves out."—Manchester Guardian.

LIBERALS MAY HOLD MEETING NEXT WEEK

Mr. G. N. Gordon, secretary of the West Peterborough Liberal Association, stated to-day that a meeting of the Association may be held next week for the purpose of selecting a representative for the Federal elections whenever they may be held.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, JULY 30, 1915

A CHANCE TO HELP.

Capt. M. H. Park and Lieut. G. K. Rackham, the two Peterborough officers with the 59th Battalion, are in the city to-day on a dual mission—to interest the people of Peterborough in the Regimental fund of the 59th, and also to secure recruits for the Battalion. They should receive a hearty welcome. The need of a regimental fund is apparent to every one—there are many things which the Government do not supply, and which are indispensable to the comfort of the soldiers—and the need of Peterborough sharing with other centres in the district, in providing these comforts, should be equal apparent. Peterborough has allowed other places to outstrip her in the machine gun movement—let us do our part for the 59th Battalion.

THE CAMPAIGN.

The recruiting campaign to be conducted by the Local Branch of the Speakers' Patriotic League is being planned with energy and enthusiasm, and is bound to produce results. Enlisting under such circumstances makes it possible for a large number of Peterborough young men to get away in the same unit, and therefore should make the work of the recruiting officers the more easy. And along with the appeal to patriotism should be an appeal to civic pride—the impressing upon our citizens of the necessity of keeping Peterborough to the fore.

The Central Committee of the League meets to-night, and there are several points which the committee might profitably discuss. Perhaps they are already under consideration, but at all events The Examiner offers them with the belief that they may be of assistance. In the recruiting of past contingents we have had the spectacle of young men offering their services here, passing the medical inspection, drilling sometimes for weeks, only to be sent back as medically unfit, when they reach the unit they are destined for and are again examined by another medical officer. To the layman it would appear that one medical examination should be sufficient—that after men have been declared fit by the local examiner that should settle the matter, and that there should be no danger of a man giving up his job and wasting his time for weeks to be finally rejected because a second doctor does not see eye to eye with the first physician who examined him. Perhaps from a military standpoint that would not suffice, but at all events, why should not the final examination be made in Peterborough? Let the men be examined by the local physician and before leaving for camp, let the medical officer of the particular unit to which the men are going, come to Peterborough and pass upon them. In case of a disagreement in the verdict, let them call in a third physician and have his decision the final one. Such a system would spare men the humiliation of coming back to Peterborough a few days after their friends have bidden them a tearful good-bye, stamped "unfit." The committee should take this matter up with the authorities at Kingston. It has already been adopted with success in Toronto.

Another point that the local committee might consider to-night is the question of giving badges or some distinguishing emblem to the men in Peterborough who have tried or may try to enlist, and who have been, or may be, rejected by the medical examiners. There are in Peterborough hundreds of men who have offered their services and have failed to pass the doctor — for it must be understood that the percentage of successful applicants so far has been under 50 per cent—and it is only simple justice to those men that their willingness to enlist should be recognized. Before the campaign opens next week, and before the recruiting sergeants and the committee begin their efforts, let these men whose spirit is the same as those who have gone to the front, be given a badge to show that they are not "slackers" or "shirkers." The cost would be trifling, and the matter could be easily arranged by turning the badges over to Major Eastwood, the local examining officer, who could give them to all applicants who have already been rejected, and to those unsuccessful candidates who turn up during the campaign.

And once again all the oratory, all the pleading, all the appeal, should not be to the young men. The refusal of parents to give consent is one of the chief obstacles in the path of the recruiting sergeants. There are in Peterborough scores, yes, hundreds, of young men who would be in khaki to-day, if their parents' objections did not keep them at home. Many young men are indifferent, many more are still ignorant of the necessity of more and more men coming forward, but a still larger number, keen and anxious to go are blocked by parental objection. This is a point the committee must not lose sight of in their plans. There should be a special effort made to impress upon the parents the fact that they must make sacrifices. There should be more of the spirit shown by a Peterborough woman, Mrs. Alex. Smith, who last week, saw her fourth son leave for the front. "There goes the last—I have given my all," was her comment. You parents of Peterborough, how many of you can say with Mrs. Smith, "I have given my all." Here is where our ministers can help. Let every minister in Peterborough on Sunday point out the path of duty to the mothers and fathers in their congregation. Show them that their selfishness in keeping their sons at home, is prolonging the war, prolonging the suffering, making it harder for somebody else's son. Let every minister do this on Sunday, and let the committee work along the same lines, and the result will be a bigger rally to the colours than Peterborough has seen since the war broke out.

Still another point. The men who are to come in contact with the recruit material must be soldiers in khaki, who are going to the front, or men whose sons have gone or are going. There is no use in sending men who are not going themselves to ask others to offer themselves, nor is there any benefit in delegating a man with two or three strapping sons who are still in mufti, to impress upon some other father the necessity of his boy enlisting. On the local committee are many men whose sons are in the thick of it, or soon will be. This is as it should be. Their presence gives the campaign an initial impetus that should carry it a long way towards success.

ACTUALLY THOUGHT IT A COMPLIMENT!

Berlin actually took as a compliment the president's allusion, in his original protest, to the "humane and enlightened attitude hitherto assumed by the imperial German Government in matters of international right." In drafting his new note Mr. Wilson should realize, therefore, the futility of irony as a weapon against people who can grasp nothing but iron.—New York Evening Sun.

NEEDESS SAVAGERY.

In the latest American note to Germany there is one contention the truth of which has been demonstrated by a German submarine only two or three days after the publication of the note, says the Hamilton Herald President Wilson declared that in preying upon an enemy's commerce the destruction of life by submarines is unnecessary. "It is possible and practicable," wrote the president, "to conduct such submarine operations as have characterised the activity of the Imperial German navy within the so-called war zone in substantial accord with the accepted practices of regulated warfare."

That this is true has been demonstrated in the sinking of the American steamer Leelanaw. The captain of the vessel and the crew report that they were considerately treated by the commander of the submarine. They were taken on board the German boat—thirty-nine of them—and brought as near land as the German officer deemed it prudent to go, when they were transferred to their own small boats (which had doubtless been taken in tow for this purpose) and sent adrift. If the weather had been rough, they might have fared ill—perhaps might not have reached land at all; but it must be admitted that the German naval officer, after he had sunk their ship, did as much for them as could reasonably have been expected.

If it had been one of the small submarines of an early type which overtook and disposed of the Leelanaw, the crew could not have been treated so considerately, for it would have been impossible to take them all aboard. But this submarine was one of a late type—a large boat, probably of 800 tons or more—capable of doing the work of a destroyer on the surface of the water as well ah operating as an undersea craft. The commander of such a vessel has no possible excuse for sinking a merchant ship without making provision for the safety of her crew.

Whatever the Berlin diplomats may say in defence or extenuation of submarine savagery, the commander of the submarine which sank the Leelanaw has by his acts upheld the contention of President Wilson.

TIME TO CALL HALT IN PROVIDING MACHINE GUNS

OTTAWA, Ont., July 30.—Subscriptions towards the purchase of machine guns for the Canadian troops have already reached a total quite beyond the expectation of the Department of Militia and there appears to be no abatement.

Subscriptions so far received and promised are sufficient to purchase 1,500 machine guns. They are coming from wealthy and semi-wealthy, individually, from firms, and institutions, from municipalities and corporations, from philanthropic societies, Church societies, fraternal societies and women's societies, from employees of firms and of the Government service. Allowing for the eight machine guns per battalion which the Government declares it will supply as the regulation complement — the private subscriptions to be over and above the Government supply—Canada's battalions at the present rate of contribution will be equipped with from 40 to 50 machine guns each. It is not assumed that more than two divisions of Canadian troops will be in the field at the same time. This makes 24 regiments, each of which will be equipped at the outset with eight guns. If the 1,500 guns are divided among the 24, allowing for a few being served for training purposes, it will be seen that the Canadian troops will be very heavily equipped with the weapon.

Even allowing for wastage in guns, it will be evident that there is a limit to the number of machine guns which may economically be contributed, having regard to the other laudable funds which exist. The Government has not set any limit, but it is unofficially intimated that the public in its zeal for providing death-dealing weapons should not forget the other channels of patriotic giving. The Patriotic Fund will have heavy calls upon its funds, the Red Cross Fund is continually in need of assistance, comforts will always be acceptable by soldiers at the front, while much good can be accomplished by assistance toward the equipping of convalescent homes.

MISTAKEN NARROWNESS.

Toronto police are trying to stop Sunday bathing at beaches within the civic jurisdiction. Why human beings should be prevented getting into cool water because a day is called Sunday is not likely to be clear to a good many minds which have every respect and regard for Sundays. Life to most of us, in most Anglo-Saxon communities, would be a poor thing without the Sunday break; but even the Sunday break would not be worth much if innocent enjoyment of earth, air or water were to be prohibited. The care with which Sunday should be safeguarded is best limited to watchfulness against practices which tend to impose Sunday work upon any considerable number of people. Going beyond that can only produce a reaction which must help to throw Sundays "wide open" to work for many as well as to license for others. —Ottawa Journal.

ASQUITH, OPTIMIST.

The pessimists will find little satisfaction in Premier Asquith's adjournment speech, says the Ottawa Free Press. There is nothing in it to further the discouragement they have been trying to spread. It strikes the note of confidence and apparently with reason. For the present there can be no great movements towards victory, but the allies in the western theatre are holding their own in the face of the handicap of insufficient equipment, while, as Lloyd George declared, the machinery essential to advance is being rapidly provided. At the Dardanelles we are battling our way to Constantinople inch by inch. It is the most difficult task in military history that our troops are facing and success cannot be achieved by one or two brilliant victories. But dogged persistence and endurance will avail, and it is this that is being exercised.

There is nothing in the work of our allies calling for anything but optimism. France is doing magnificently, Italy has in the mountains accomplished surprising things that have not yet been fully revealed, while Russia, which has been subject for concern recently, is displaying an energy and ability around Warsaw in battles the intensity and vastness of which no outsider can appreciate that lead us to expect perhaps even more than we are warranted in expecting.

Meantime the British navy is stronger than ever for any emergency that may arise and for keeping the soil of Great Britain inviolate. The German submarine campaign is having practically on effect on British trade. Up to July 26, according to a Berlin estimate, 239 British ships have been sunk by the submarines. This is hardly a flea-bite to the great British merchant marine. Most of the vessels were of small tonnage, and the loss is little more than that normally due to scrapping.

The commercial strength of the Empire—that on which it lives and prospers—is hardly being interfered with. None of the British prestige in the commercial world is being lost against the time when the world's normal business will be resumed. When peace returns the machinery of British trade will be in motion, for, despite the effect on other nations, this machinery has hardly slowed in its turning because of hostilities.

Mr. Asquith in his optimism does not lose sight of the dangers and the necessities of the situation. His warnings as to the imperativeness of keeping undiminished the flow of recruits and of whole-hearted assistance from all, together with the danger of extravagance, which might jeopardize the duty of Britain to finance her allies, are sincere and insistent.

His optimism is not of the extravagant but rather of the purposeful kind. The enemy has been gaining heart from the efforts of the "back-biters" and the pessimists. But for the whines of these persons he would have little to encourage him. Cheerfulness would be mistaken were there not ground for it, but there is nothing in the existing situation to prevent us from taking the view of the Premier.

WHITE HANDS.

Never use very hot water in washing the hands, but cleanse the hands with tepid water. If your hands are red and ugly, try the following: Make a paste of powdered myrrh, 4 ounces; strained honey, 2 ounces; yellow wax, 2 ounces; rose water, 6 ounces. The wax should be melted in a cup and set into a pan of boiling water to prevent setting; myrrh added while liquid is warm, then remove from the heat. After a thorough beating, the honey and rose water is added—the latter very slowly. The last thing, thin the paste a little with glycerine, taking care not to use too much. At night spread this paste upon the hands, draw on some loose gloves and the hands will come out soft and white.

LONDON POLICE IN WAR

Red Tape Does Not Bind "Specials" Now-a-days

The London police do nothing by halves these days. One evening there came an urgent call for a strong force of special constables to be dispatched post haste to a distant destination, so the authorities in charge of the "specials," having collected their men, telephoned to the principal omnibus company to supply six motor-buses at once. The company replied that all their 'buses were out at work. Then from Scotland Yard police were sent out into Whitehall with orders to stop the first six motor-'buses that came by, turn out their passengers, and bring the vehicles and their drivers round to the embankment. In ten minutes the commandeered 'buses were speeding away with their loads of "specials" on government service.

CRANK INVENTORS BUSY

Would-be inventors of new devices to wipe out whole armies at a stroke, sink powerful dreadnoughts, reduce big Zeppelins to powdered form; guns that will carry great distances, fade-away howitzers, etc., are haunting the offices of London patent agents day and night. The war has caused inventors' ingenuity to run riot. Here are a few inventions from the clever brains of engineers and others:

New gun that will bag a Zeppelin at any height, with an ingenious range-finder.

A gun that can fire a projectile miles beyond the range of the biggest guns now used by Germany.

Projectiles that carry all kinds of acids and chemicals that put soldiers into their death sleep if they take a sniff. One inventor with long hair and green eyes would like to finance a company to make a projectile that carries tons of snuff. On explosion regiments are thrown into violent fits of sneezing and taken prisoners before they can recover.

Aeroplanes that can be perforated with bullets and still navigate.

Mines of all shapes and sizes, guaranteed to annihilate whole cities and make a fleet of battleships good material for the scrap heap.

"Always aim a little higher than the mark" said a philosopher. "What. Kiss a girl on the nose? Never.

Kitchener's Sly Aid

At an early stage of Italy's fight for possession of Tripoli—a campaign in which Egypt, as more or less a vassal of Turkey, was keenly interested—Lord Kitchener was approached by certain notable men who proposed that Egypt should send several regiments to the aid of the Turks, in accordance with the Turco-Egyptian Treaty which England was known to uphold. Kitchener said that he would have no objection should the Sultan make the request, but that in order to preserve unruffled quiet he would be obliged to replace the present troops by an equal number of British regiments, at which the proposal was hastily withdrawn.

Buttons covered with cloth were prohibited by a statute in George I.'s reign.

"Our engagement was most romantic. I was traveling with her party at the time, and I proposed to her in the far west on the edge of a mountain gorge."

"Oh, suppose she had thrown you over!"—Baltimore American.

"See here, my friend, why do you always ring my bell when you come home soused late at night?"

"It's this way, old fellow. My wife won't jaw me if she hears you moving about."—Kansas City Journal.

Mother.

The one who loves you most, the one who is the most loving, is the one who is the easiest to please. And that is the reason children can please their mothers when they cannot please anybody else. The mother sees something that nobody else can see. It is never difficult to please your mother; she loves you so.

What the Trouble Was

A Mrs. Malaprop was overheard on a street car while telling a friend about the illness of an acquaintance. "I don't know just what the trouble is," she said, "but I believe there is something the matter with her spiral column. There is a vertibrat out of place, or something of that sort. And it is apt to go hard with her, just getting over pumony."

FALSE HAPPINESS.

False happiness is like false money. It may possibly pass for a time as well as the true and may serve some ordinary occasions, but when it is brought to the touch we find the lightness and alloy and feel the loss.

FOUR BRITISH MEDALS

There are four military decorations to be won in the war. The greatest of these is the Victoria Cross, a bronze Maltese cross, 1½ inches in diameter; in the centre is the royal cross and below in scroll "for Valor." It was instituted by Queen Victoria in 1856, and is open to Officers and men alike. It is cast from Russian cannon captured at Sebastopol, and its material value is estimated at nine cents, but those who are given it rank as "the bravest of the brave." Until the present war but 522 crosses had been given—111 for the Crimea war, 182 for the Indian mutiny, 78 for the Boer war and the rest among 37 other wars.

The Distinguished Service Order was instituted by Queen Victoria in 1886, it purpose giving the "recognition of special services of commissioned officers in the army and navy." The order entitles its members to bear the letters D.S.O. after their names. The badge is a gold cross enamelled white, one side bearing an heraldic crown surrounded by a wreath of laurels. It is worn by a red ribbon edged blue.

The Military Cross is of silver. It is 1⅝ inches square, and the bar is 1½ inches wide. The ribbon is 1⅝ inches wide by 1½ inches high, of three equal stripes, the centre dark purple and the others white. From the top of the ribbon to the bottom of the cross is 3 11-16 inches. The cross bears in the centre the letters G.R.I., and on each arm of the cross is the Imperial Crown. The Royal Warrant says: "No person shall be eligible for this decoration unless he is a captain, a commissioned officer of a lower grade, or warrant officer in the British army or Indian or colonial military force, and the cross shall be awarded only to officers of the above ranks on the recommendation of the secretary of state for war. Foreign officers of an equivalent rank to those mentioned above, who have been associated in military operations with the British, Indian or Colonial forces shall be eligible for the honorary award of the cross. The Military Cross shall not confer any individual precedence, and shall not entitle the recipient to any addition after his name as part of his description or title."

The Distinguished Conduct Medal was very extensively awarded after the South African war. It is a decoration designed for warrant and non-commissioned officers and men.

KAISER GIVES STATUES

London "Bosses" One—Norway Has Colossal Specimen

It is not generally known that the statue of King William which stands outside Kensington Palace, London, was presented to England by the Kaiser. It bears the following inscription: "William III. of Orange, King of Great Britain and Ireland, 1689-1702. Presented by William II., German Emperor and King of Prussia, to King Edward VII. for the British nation, 1907."

A very short time ago the Kaiser presented a colossal statue to Norway. This is a statue of Frithjof, the great Norse hero, who is the subject of an Icelandic saga assigned to the fourteenth century, and relating his adventures. It is designed to commemorate the Kaiser's twenty-fifth cruise to the Land of the Midnight Sun. The figure of the mythical hero is forty feet high—aoubt ten feet shorter than the Kaiser thinks himself—and stands on a pedestal thirty feet high. A dozen men lunched in the chest cavity of this colossal statue whilst it was in course of erection.

The First Asphyxiating Bombs

Admiral C. C. Penrose Fitzgerald, of the British navy, writes that the use of poisonous fumes in warfare is very old. "It is certain," he adds, "that the Chinese used them quite lately. Anyone who served in the China War of 1857 will vouch for this, even if he was not serving in H.M.S. Niger. I was not personally serving in the Niger, and I do not know the chemical composition of the Chinese bombs. Our sailors contemptuously called them 'stink pots,' but I have no doubt that modern German Kultur has considerably improved upon them."

Hot Shot For Shirkers

"Slinking in a corner, trying in vain to conceal the fact that they have never served, never fought, and never shed a drop of blood, or, perhaps, a drop of perspiration, they will be hapless, miserable and disdained."—Lord Rosebery on Shirkers.

The Swiss reckon that their cupola fort on the St. Gothard, manned by 200 artillerymen, could easily hold the pass against an army of fifty thousand.

Ant heaps make serviceable ovens, and are very often used on active service. After the insides have been scooped out fire can be applied, as in an ordinary oven.

MAJOR-GENERAL V. ZUPPELLI
Italian Minister for War

"I see that somebody says many a man is a poet without knowing it." "Well, that's something we've got to be thankful for."

TAKING the BREAK OUT of BREAKFAST.

WHEN the Big Man climbed into his berth in the Windsor Station on Monday night, he was feeling punk. Yes, sir, punk. It's a pretty good word to describe a man's digestive system, even if it does mean nothing but rotten wood when you look it up in the dictionary.

He was a big man physically, mentally and financially. Which meant, of course, that he worked more, worried more, ate more, and drank more—than was good for him. Also he exercised less than he ought to have done. And as for loafing round and inviting his soul, he hadn't done it in twenty years. And which, indeed, of all the lines he played, could a soul be invited to attend without breaking up the game?

To-night the Big Man had to go to Vancouver.

Now, the Big Man has seen so many places and so many kinds of places that he was as bored as Beverly Bayne when the management wills her a trunkful of new clothes. Vancouver was just the inconveniently-placed envelope he had to stick around a deal he hoped to put through. And getting to it—that long wonder-road across two thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight miles of screamingly prosperous country—despite the war—getting to it was nothing under Ursa Major but five days at the Sign of the Dyspepsia Tablet!

• • • •

SOMEWHERE in the ragged rock country to the east of North Bay, a little sunbeam no bigger round than a pencil, slipped in under the blind and tickled the Big Man behind the ear. He woke up, consigned the sunbeam to Halifax—via the C.O.D.P.D.Q.—and when he found that not even a C. P. R. pillow was soft and dreamful enough to make him go to sleep again, he got up and dressed in the mood of a man who'd rather be shot.

"Well, heaven be praised, there's breakfast. Something I can do to fill up three-quarters of an hour anyhow," he said to his watch, "and yet—oh hang it, if I don't eat I get a headache; if I do eat I draw down dyspepsia. Why can't you hibernate across continent, I'd like to know—get a hypodermic of forgetfulness along with your transportation? 'Car for cataleptic corpses leaves at 10.15 sharp'—how's that for an ad? Some stunt, eh?"

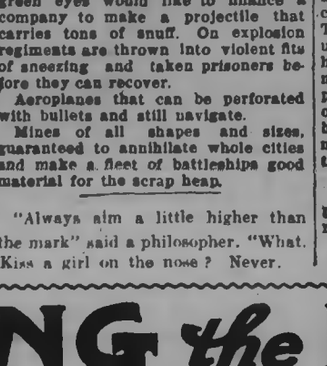
So saying, the Big Man wended his way to the diner and seated himself in front of the pale-salmon portrait of Chateau Lake Louise that decorated the dreaded-and-adored menu.

Out flopped a young white booklet that was new to him.

He looked at the eight strawberries on the inside cover, cheek-by-jowling it in front of a foot rule. He considered the sanitary co-bossies getting milked by machinery. And then, wearily and warily, he opened to the bill of fare and out flopped a young white booklet that was new to him.

"'The Why of the Dietetic Blended Food'—hm, more silliness. The fad-artist thinks he'll turn his pen into a soup spoon does he, and make me eat goo. Not on your next year's lid.

"Hm—'Travelling by train or boat for a day or more, one needs only about two-thirds of the quantity of food which would be assimilated while engaged in the ordinary occupation at home'—I got you, Stephen—'temptation to devote more time to the table'—right you are. What you going to do about it, though? 'A meal so balanced that the needs of the digestion will be supplied without burdening the system with any unnecessary material—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, formerly chief of the U. S. Bureau of Chemistry.' Hm, well, how now, son Harvey? I won't eat goo."



The waiter grinned when the big man ordered Breakfast No. 1.

He turned to the menu itself. Down the middle ran a faint sketch of pine trees and white water, across which were printed the food-sharp's suggestions for taking the break out of breakfast.

"Cereal with Cream
Plain Omelet
Rolls
Tea

Baked Apple with Cream
Fried Eggs with Rasher Bacon
Toast
Coffee

Half Grape Fruit
Scrambled Eggs
Toast
Marmalade
Coffee

"Hm—why don't he mix 'em? Cereal and bacon, now. Or why don't he—" his eye strayed across beyond the confines of the suggestions. "Nope, that's the broad road that leadeth to destruction—particularly over the page and into the wine list, I suppose. Me for the straight and narrow—just for to-day, mind—and see how it works out. If I'm sick, I'll get transportation south as soon's I come home and wring this Harvey-person's neck."

The waiter grinned when the Big Man ordered Breakfast Number One. He was the sort of Big Man you could grin at, or he wouldn't have had the nerve to place such an order.

"Getting to be mighty popular, sir," he remarked, "don't expect a miracle between now and lunch, of course, but when you've tried the Dietetic for a whole day—well see here, I bet you my tip you'll have a good night."

"Done," said the magnate with an answering grin, "and if you win it'll be worth it."

• • • • •

AZILDA, Chelmsford, Larchwood—the rough-timbered country, swept past the car windows, hurrying east and east to bury its secrets once more from the curious tourists who gazed at it from the tail end of the observation car.

"At two o'clock I'll go in to lunch and see what that Wiley-man says I gotta eat," mused the victim, "that breakfast wasn't half bad."

He didn't stop a jiffy to note that Lake Louise was pale green on this new cover, nor that the eight aspiring strawberries were still lined up at attention forninst the foot rule.

"'Chicken bouillon, Spanish omelet, peach tapioca pudding, coffee'—not bad, but I was a nest-robber this morning. 'Celery, jellied ox-tongue with potato salad, bread, milk.' Slim? Yes, but I'm not and I'd like to be. Here you, Francis, would the Medes and the Persians let me change that milk into coffee? I may come to it yet, but Berlin didn't fall in a day, you know."

I will go to dinner and see what that Wiley man says I gotta eat.

• • • • •

AS the train drew into Chapleau, the Big Man came to anchor for his dinner. By this time he and the waiter were quite chummy over the Wiley-person, and a man from Ottawa, horse-buying for the Government, had been induced to get onto the cinder track too. He and the magnate stayed on the observation platform till the stars came out, discussing what part a man's digestive system played in his life's accomplishment.

"'No kitchen—no Kitchener,' how's that for a headline?" asked the Ottawa man, "it's the same idea as that an army travels on its stomach. And I'm dead sure I'm going to like this new way of travelling on mine."

• • • • •

AND so it went. Banff in pale green and grey blossomed onto the menu; the Illecillewait Valley gave place to Mt. Sir Donald. It didn't matter, so long as the straight-and-narrow road still centered the inside page, and the Big Man walked thereon.

He felt so good he got off at a lonesome elevator and picked wild something or other.

Days outdoors, when the wonderful air of the prairies sang in his ears, and the big man felt so good he got off at a lonesome elevator in the middle of Nowhere, to pick a bunch of wild something-or-others for six year old Editha who cried for them and then cried over them, being cross because her mother hadn't got round to having a Dietetic daughter—

Glimpses of big towns, mushroom-built and yet Gibraltar-firm on the plains of plenty—

And then the mountains, sheering into the unbelievable blue of a Canadian dawn; the lace-white, spun-glass waters, a-spray down their vast ramparts; the silent, secluded, century-treed valleys—

It isn't the world you live in that matters so much, though. It's the you who live in it. A man would be unhappy in Paradise if he had a toothache. And there isn't any sun that ever danced in the heavens that couldn't be blotted out with a dyspepsia tablet—if that tablet was yours.

But this time, the man had given the tablet to the foolish mother of poor Editha, and the sun had free access to the soul of him. For he was eating less and sleeping more than he'd done in years. And it was the open air that did it. Plus that Wiley-person.

"And come to think of it, he's saved me dollars and dollars too," said the convert, "guess I'll give that to the Belgian babies. And come to think of it again, if this dietetic business works on wheels, it oughta work going up and down in an elevator and in and out in that Packard of mine—eh? P'haps I can slip this young health-plant I've found in B. C. and see if it won't grow in Montreal."

A man from Ottawa had been induced to get on to the cinder track.

The Need of Grading

G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor, Eastern Ontario.

MOST of the butter made in Eastern Ontario is sold very soon after being made to the stores of the towns and cities, and consequently the instructors have very little opportunity of inspecting it. Even although the butter goes into consumption rapidly the quality is not what it should be, and this has been clearly demonstrated when Ontario's butter has gone into competition with butter from Quebec and some of the Western Provinces. The greatest source of defects in butter lies in the generally poor quality of the cream supply. So long as the present methods of purchasing cream are continued, very little improvement can be hoped for, even although our butter-makers are as capable as those of the other Provinces.

If we are to make any marked improvement in the quality of our butter it has to come largely through the supplying of a sweeter and better flavored cream so that full advantage can be taken of the merits of pasteurization and commercial cultures. And what means would be more effective and fairer than that of paying a premium for the cream that is in a better condition to enable the butter-maker to make better butter than from cream of poorer quality. If a system of grading cream and butter were adopted it would seem to be the proper method of overcoming the difficulty, and while such a plan may have its difficulties at first, others are already reaping its advantages. And what others can do, we also can.

Ever Feel "Dopy" After Meals?

At times we all feel dull and heavy. Just one thing to do — relax the bowels and cleanse the system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Unclean matter is flushed out, the liver is toned, blood is purified, and at once you feel better. Good health and jovial spirits are quickly found in this celebrated medicine. Enormous benefits follow the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills in ever case; they are very mild, very prompt and gauranteed by the makers. Insist on getting Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box everywhere.

CAMPBELLFORD MAN NAMED FOR BRAVERY

Capt. Hodge of Old 2nd Battalion Mentioned in Despatches

Recent word from the front states that Captain Harry E. Hodge from town has again been mentioned in despatches for conspicuous bravery. This is a decided honour of which all our citizens will justly feel proud.

In letters received here from Capt Hodge, he stated that he had the arch of his foot broken by the kick of a horse. He applied for eight days' leave of absence, but was refused, being told that he was needed in the trenches. Writing on June 27th, he said that only seven of the forty-two officers of the Battalion were left on duty—three on the staff, (Col. Watson, the C.O., Captain Turner and himself, with four others, of whom O'Flynn and Birdsall were two.—Campbellford News.

The Queen of Sheba Visits Solomon. 1 Kings, 10: 1-10, 13.

Golden Text: Wisdom is better than rubies. Prov. 8:11.

1. Verse 1. Are heathen nations, as a rule, as much interested in finding out about the true God, as we are in this country? Give your reasons.

2. Which to-day gives the chief interest to the leaders of one nation for another nation, religion or commerce, Why?

3. Would you say, and why, that the Queen of Sheba came to visit Solomon with a pure desire to learn the truth, or to beat him by asking questions which he could not answer?

4. Verse 2. When a person is willing to pay a great price to find out all he can about "the name of the Lord," what are his chances for success?

5. What difference is there in the hunger for God, in the hearts of serious men and women, in Christian, non-Christian, and heathen countries?

6. Verse 3. What evidence is there that would cause us to believe that there are men and women to-day possessing the gift of telepathy or mind-reading?

7. What reason can you allege for the clearly established fact that God endows certain persons with extraordinary psychological power, and apparently regardless of character?

8. Would you say or not, and why, that Solomon answered all the queen's questions by his own natural power, or supernatural?

9. Verses 4, 5. Was the Queen of Sheba overcome with delight and satisfaction, or with jealousy and chagrin, at Solomon's wonderful wisdom and gorgeous display? Why?

10. If Solomon had been guided by God in the absolute sense, would he have built such a gorgeous home for himself, costing a fabulous sum of money, and would he have surrounded himself with such a vast retinue of servants? Why?

11. When the middle classes look at the grand style of the rich, and when working men see the display of the middle classes, what feelings are engendered, pleasure, anger, love or envy, and why is it so?

12. Is it right or wrong for any class of people to put on what is called 'style?' Why?

13. Verses 6, 7. Which experience do we most frequently have in temporal matters, that our realizations exceed our expectations, or do not equal them? Give reasons.

14. Divest yourself of theory, and answer according to actual fact, whether your religious experience is above or below your expectation, and give your reasons?

15. Verses 8, 9. Did the queen speak words of compliment merely or words of fact, in her eulogy of Solomon? Why?

16. Is it right or wrong, when we compliment, and say kind things of a person, to go beyond the actual facts? Why?

17. Verses 10-13. What purpose did the Queen of Sheba and Solomon expect to accomplish by giving each other such costly gifts?

18. What can you say for or against the present day custom of giving and expecting presents at Christmas, and on other anniversary occasions?

19. Seeing that God needs nothing, how is it that He makes it our duty to give to Him? And that he is pleased when we bring Him our most costly gifts? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Lesson for Sunday, Aug. 8, 1915. The Kingdom Torn Asunder. 1 Kings 12:1-24.

STONEY LAKE BREEZES

Juniper Island sports a new Visitors' Register. Above it appears a typewritten notice beginning: "This book is placed here for use; not for abuse." It is to be hoped this gentle reminder will bear fruit in the vacant minds of those who deliberately destroyed or filled whole pages of the old register with examples of their hair-brained rubbish.

The lakes are assuming their usual busy appearance. Very few cottages remain unoccupied.

Miss Eva L. King, of Toronto, is registered at "Viamede."

Misses Dorothy and Elsie Sherin, of Lakefield, are summering at "The Shack."

Miss Doris E. Hooper and Mr. M. C. Hooper are spending their summer at Juniper Island.

Dr. Barnes, Sr., Mrs. Barnes and Miss Alma Lois, of Cleveland, have arrived at their summer home "Buckeye." Dr. Barnes made the trip north from Lakefield in his new Gidley launch, but was overtaken by the severe storm, which passed over the lakes last Thursday afternoon, just after he left Young's Point, and his engine refused to go. For two hours he was at the mercy of the elements. Mr. Meserve, Y.M.C.A. Secretary, of Peterborough, who is camped on Sandy Point, rowed out to his assistance and pulled him over into the steamboat channel, where the "Empress" hooked on and towed him to Sandy Point, from which point he was taken by the "Cornet," to McCracken's Landing.

Miss Gladys M. Cameron, of Peterborough, is visiting on "Syndicate Island," Boschink.

Mr. H. A. Wallis, of Peterborough, was a recent guest of His Honour Judge Roger, at "Juniper Lodge."

Mr. A. W. Gieske, Jr., of Baltimore, Md., is a visitor at "The Pines."

Messrs. W. H. and A. E. Morson, of Toronto, are summering at "Kelpie"

Mr. E. M. Barber, of Toronto, is staying at "Cairn Dhoe," the summer home of Mr. Robertson.

The ladies of the Kawartha Park branch of the Stoney Lake Red Cross Association contributed their mite to the funds of the Society by offering for sale samples of their home-made cooking at Juniper Island last Saturday morning. Several of Kawartha's fairest young women presided in the booth, which had been very tastefully decorated by Miss Lexa Denne. Mr. Laurance H. Grahame was the first customer to make a purchase.—Monty La Rock.

AN AUCTIONEER'S OUTBURST.

Sir Edmund Osler says: "I attended an auction sale of Holsteins in Bronte recently. The owner of the herd, which is a pure bred one, and has done a great deal to improve the stock of the neighbourhood, has gone to the war. A celebrated cattle auctioneer was on the stand. After telling of the good the owner of the herd had done to improve the Holstein strain in the district by importing the best stock, he alluded to the fact that he had obeyed the call to serve as a soldier, and had gone away, leaving all his work here, and sacrificing his own interests. The barn was full of men, many of them merely young country chaps looking on. Sweeping his arm to include them all, he broke out of a sudden, "And he has gone leaving all this. What in h— are you doing here?"—Toronto Star.

Becomes a Christian In Spite Of The Hypocrites There Are In The Church

Evangelist Sharpe Gives Reasons Why You Should Become a Christian—Delay in the Step May be Made Too Late—The Present is the Hour of Salvation

Last night's meeting at the Big Hunter street Tabernacle was a crowning one—the climax of all the services held to date. It was generally conceded by those who commented on it after it was over that the meeting was the "best yet."

Rev. T. G. McAteer was present and took part in the early part of the meeting reading the scripture lesson and commenting on it at length. He said he had absolutely refused to preach, for he was not going to disappoint the big audience who had come to hear Evangelist Sharpe. Well if he didn't preach he certainly gave about as lively fifteen minute sermonette as a wide-awake Methodist preacher is capable of delivering. He again urgently exhorted the Christian people of Peterborough to stand by Evangelist Sharpe, as they were doing, and declared that Peterborough had one of the grandest soul saving opportunities any city could wish to have.

Mr. McAteer said "there is something to sing and talk about when you're singing and talking about what God has done for you. Religion is a vital thing. It fills us with joy, it fils us with praise. May God give us the real religion—a religion of power that will stand the test of time and that will stand the test of eternity."

Evangelist Sharpe gave "several reasons why you and I ought to become Christians. He said the first reason you ought to become a Christian is because of the difference between you and a real Christian. There is a great gulf between you and a real Christian. One is a child of God and the other is a child of the devil. I tell you friends it is a glorious thing to be a Christian. Why? Because to be a real Christian is to be a child of God. I'd rather be a child of God and be in prison than to be in a palace and be a child of the Devil.

I would become a Christian to-night because there are so many hypocrites in the church. Oh, I know what you are saying. Why Mr. Sharpe that is just the reason I don't become a Christian. If you're hiding behind some little weasoned up hypocrite in the church you are smaller than he. You couldn't hide behind him if you weren't smaller than he is.

I would become a Christian to-night because of what I'd give up and because of what I'd get in doing so. All God asks us to give up is sin—our enemy—the thing that keeps us out of heaven, the thing that damns our souls.

I would become a Christian to-night because of the loved ones in your home. Why you say Mr. Sharpe that is just another reason I don't become a Christian.

The unsaved father and mother and brothers and sisters in my home were strong reasons to me why I needed to become a Christian. And thank God I have had the privilege of leading six of them to Christ since I became a Christian. God pity you if during these meetings you should get in the way of anyone who ought to become a Christian. You'll be a soul murderer if you put a straw in the way of anyone who ought to be seeking God.

I would become a Christian to-night because to-morrow night may be too late.

There were five ministers present at the service last night who occupied seats in the ministers' section on the platform and responded with hearty amens to Evangelist Sharpe's pungent remarks. Service to-night at 8 o'clock.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear

Indignant wife: "I wonder what you would have done if you had lived when men were compelled to earn their bread by the sweat of their brows." Indolent husband: "I should have started a little store and sold handkerchiefs."

STREET PAVING WILL COMMENCE NEXT WEEK

Streets Are Being Put in Shape For the Paving Contractors—Steel For the Street Railway

WILL GRADE ROADWAY

Paving operations are due to commence next week unless the present plans of City Engineer Parsons and the Standard Paving Company miscarry. For several weeks past or since the contracts were awarded, the city has had under construction a number of storm sewers and other public services. Park Street is finished and ready for the pavement, a part of Hunter Street is nearly finished and George Street is rapidly nearing completion.

Some delay has been anticipated in respect to the paving of George Street, owing to the fact that some difficulty may be experienced in securing the necessary steel for use in connection with the Street railway. The steel manufacturers are overloaded with orders and decline to guarantee delivery for any specified date. Even the small quantity of steel that is required for the George Street route may be hard to obtain. On the Park Street line the old rails will be relaid. The end of the rails will be cut off and the roadbed levelled up to grade.

ENTERTAINED AT CHEMONG

About twenty ladies from the Co-Workers' Bible Class of George Street Church motored to Chemong yesterday afternoon, where they were the guests of Mrs. W. H. Hill and her daughters. After an enjoyable afternoon on the water they were entertained to a fish dinner, after which their regular monthly business meeting was held and they returned home early in the evening.

EVANGELIST G. M. SHARPE, who will speak in the big Hunter street Tabernacle at 8 o'clock. Hear him.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

THE GERMAN ATROCITIES AS OFFICIALLY REPORTED BY BRYCE COMMISSION

(Part II.—The conduct of German Troops in Belgium).

The systematic execution of civilians, which in some cases, as the dairy just cited, shows, was founded on a genuine mistake, was given a wide extention through the Province of Liege. In Soumagne and Micheroux, very many civilians were summarily shot. In a field belonging to a man named E...., 56 or 57 were put to death. A German officer said: "You have shot at us." One of the villagers asked to be allowed to speak, and said: "If you think these people fired, kill me, but let them go." The answer was three volleys. The survivors were bayonetted. Their corpses were seen in the field that night by another witness. One at least had been mutilated. These were not the only victims in Soumagne. The eye-witnesses of the massacre saw, on his way home, 20 bodies, one that of a girl of 13. Another witness saw 19 corpses in a meadow.

At Blegny Trembleur, on the 6th, some civilians were captured by German soldiers, who took steps to put them to death forthwith, but were restrained by the arrival of an officer. The prisoners subsequently were taken off to Battice, and five were shot in a field. No reason was assigned for their murder.

In the meantime house-burners were at work. On the 6th, Battice was destroyed in part. From the 8th to the 10th, over 300 houses were burnt at Herve, while mounted men shot into doors and windows to prevent the escape of the inhabitants.

At Heure le Romain on or about the 15th of August all the male inhabitants, including some bed-ridden old men, were imprisoned in the Church. The burgomaster's brother and the priest were bayoneted.

On or about the 14th and 15th of August the village of Visé was completely destroyed. Officers directed the incendiaries, who worked methodically with benzine. Antiques and china were removed from the houses before their destruction, by officers who guarded the plunder, revolver in hand. The house of a witness, which contained valuables of this kind, was protected for a time by a notice posted on the door by officers. This notice has been produced to the Committee. After the removal of the valuables this house was also burnt. German soldiers had arrived on the 15th at Blegny Trembleur and seized a quantity of wine. On the 16th prisoners were taken; four, including the priest and the burgomaster, were shot. On the same day 200 (so-called) hostages were seized at Flemalle and marched off. There they were told that unless Fort Flemalle surrendered by noon they would be shot. It did surrender and they were released.

Entries in a German diary show that on the 19th the German soldiers gave themselves up to debauchery in the streets of Liege and on the night of the 20th, (Thursday), a massacre took place in the streets, beginning near the Cafe Carpentier, at which there is said to have been a dinner attended by Russian and other students. A proclamation issued by Gen. Kolwe on the following day, gave the German version of the affair, which was that his troops had been fired upon by Russian students. The diary states that in the night the inhabitants of Liege became mutinous, and that fifty persons were shot. The Belgian witnesses vehemently deny that there had been any provocation given, some stating that many German soldiers were drunk, others giving evidence that the affair was planned beforehand. It is stated that at five o'clock, in the evening, long before the shooting, a citizen was warned by a friendly German soldier not to go out that night.

Though the cause of the massacre is in dispute, the results are known with certainty. The Rue des Pitteurs and houses in the Place de l'Universite and the Quai des Pecheurs were systematically fired with benzine, and many of the inhabitants were burnt alive in their houses, their efforts to escape being prevented by rifle fire. Twenty people were shot while trying to escape, before the eyes of one of the witnesses. The Liege Fire Brigade turned out, but was not allowed to extinguish the fire. Its carts, however, were usefully employed in removing heaps of civilian corpses to the town hall. The fire burnt on through the night and the murders continued on the following day, the 21st. Thirty-two civilians were killed on that day in the Place de l'Universite alone, and a witness states that this was followed by the rape in open day of 15 or 20 women on tables in the squair itself. No depositions are before us which deal with events in the city of Liege after this date. Outrages, however, continue in various places in the Province.

For example, on or about the 21st of August, at Pepinster, two witnesses were seized as hostages and were threatened, together with five others, that unless they could discover a civilian who was alleged to have shot a soldier in the leg, they would be shot themselves. They escaped their fate because one of the hostages convinced the officer that the alleged shooting, if it took place at all, took place in the Commune of Cornesse and not that of Pepinster, whereupon the Burgomaster of Cornesse, who was old, and very deaf, was shot forthwith.

The outrages on the civilian population were not confined to the villages mentioned above, but appear to have been general throughout this district from the very outbreak of the war. An entry in one of the diaries says:

"We crossed the Belgian frontier on 15th of August, 1914, at 11.50 in the forenoon, and then we went steadily along the main road till we got in Belgium. Hardly were we there when we had a horrible sight. Houses were burnt down, the inhabitants chased away, and some of them shot. Not one of the hundreds of houses was spared. Everything was plundered and burnt. Hardly had we passed through this village before the next village was burnt, and so it went on continuously. On the 6th of August, 1914, the large village of Barchon was burnt down. On the same day we crossed the bridge over the Meuse at 11.50 in the morning. We then arrived at the town of Wandre. Here the houses were spared, but everything was examined. At last we were out of the town and everything went in ruins. In one house a whole collection of weapons was found. The inhabitants, without exception, were brought out and shot. This shooting was heart-breaking as they all knelt down and prayed, but that was no ground for mercy. A few shots rang out and they fell back into the green grass asleep for ever."

"Die Einwohner wurden samt und sonders herausgeholt und erschossen aber dieses Erschiessen war direkt herzzerreissend wie sie alle knieten und beteten aber dies half kein Erbarmen. Ein paar Schusse krachten und die Seelen rucklings in das grune Avas und verschliefen fur immer."

METHOD EMPLOYED IN PETERBOROUGH

Galt Seeks Information as to System Adopted by Peterboro Utilities Commission

Galt has been seeking information concerning methods employed by other cities respecting the assessment of land for water service. In this connection Dr. Radford, chairman of the Galt Waterworks Commission has been informed that in Peterborough there is an assessment of 4 cents a running foot on all property on both sides of the street on which there is a water main, with a 33 1-3 per cent. discount for prompt payment. In the case of a person paying a water bill the land charge is deducted, but those who do not use water have to pay a share in the upkeep of the institution. To make this land assessment, it is necessary to get a special act passed.

An Easy Way To Increase Weight

Good Advice for Thin Folks

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is, that they insist on dragging their stomachs or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the reason of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to a remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through its re-generative, reconstructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken down cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Leading druggists of Peterboro and vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee formula every package.

CAUTION—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The Finance Committee of the City Council will meet this evening. The usual monthly list of accounts will be certified to and passed by the Committee. Tenders for debentures will also be opened.

Council Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the City Council will be held on Monday evening. A very modest budget awaits disposition at the hands of the civic legislators.

Garbage Collection.

Only seven householders in East City have availed themselves of the private garbage collecting system inaugurated by Sanitary Inspector Spence.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES

Instead of the regular annual banquet the Berlin Board of Trade held a picnic at Victoria Park. The feature of the occasion was a patriotic address by Mr. H. K. Cockin of Guelph.

Was Elected Mayor.

Ex-Mayor W. E. Smallfield, editor of The Mercury, was elected Mayor of Renfrew to fill the office vacated by former Mayor Moore.

Instructors Engaged.

The Joint Technical Committee of the Stratford School Board has engaged instructors in manual training and household science.

Closed Agreement.

Brantford Township has closed an agreement with the city Hydro Commission for power for the suburbs of the city.

Renfrew's "White Way."

Renfrew's "White Way" is to be inaugurated on August 11, and Sir Adam Beck has been invited to officiate at the opening.

MEAT SO HIGH IN PARIS ONLY RICH CAN BUY

PARIS, July 29.—The price of meat in Paris has now advanced so that only the wealthy can afford to buy it.

Vegetables are much dearer, owing partly to difficulties of transportation, partly to the fact that there are no men left to raise and sell them, and partly to the fact that a large producing district is now in the hands of the enemy.

The average middle class Frenchman makes about $95 a week—that is the average—sometimes $80, sometimes $90, with rents at $25 a month. He can ill afford to pay 68 cents a pound for his steak or 42 cents a pound for his roast lamb, altogether too full of bone ot suit him at that price. Those are the prices in Paris.

With rents high, incomes less and food exorbitant, life becomes a mathematical problem which seems to have only one solution—starvation.

Take only one femme de manage, for instance. She lives in the garret of an old apartment house. She has two rooms and a little closet for a kitchen. There is no running water in the place, and she has to go down three stories to draw it.

She and her sister live here, and for this tiny home she pays $10 a month. She has a husband in the war and one small child; so that her "allocation" from the State is $2.45 a week—25 cents a day for the wife and 10 cents for each child. And her initial expense is $2.50 for rent!

According to the law if she works she loses her allocation. But how can she help but work? There is always food to buy, always shoes for la petite, always oil for the lamps that one may see to sew in the evening, always little presents to send the husband at the front.

To be sure, she isn't paying any rent now—no one is—but a day of reckoning is coming, when at least a part will have to be paid.

Here are the prices of food in Paris at the present time:

Fillet of steak	$ .68
Rump steak	.56
Sirloin roast	.50
Roast beef, ordinary	.42
Hamburg steak	.36
Cheapest piece in animal	.20
Leg of lamb	.43
Lamb chops	.60
Veal cutlets	.60
Roast pork	.40
Small chicken	1.25
Butter, kitchen	.40
Butter, best quality	.90
Eggs, medium	.42
Eggs, best	.60

Butchers in the wholesale and retail markets say that, aside from the accepted reasons for the raise in price—the requisition of live steers at the front; the larger use of meat by the soldiers than most of them are accustomed to having at home; the difficulties of transport between France and those countries on whom she depends for her meat; the requisition of horses, which has cut down enormously the use of this meat among the very poor—aside from all these is the fact that people are unanimously demanding the small, compact cuts—grills.

Their families are reduced in size; the grill is solid meat and seems more economical than large boned joint, and many people, having dispensed with their servants, are carrying on as light house-keeping as possible, and grills are within their culinary knowledge.

This consequently leaves the butchers with quantities of large meat on their hands. It can't all be cut into grills, unfortunately, and to pay for the loss they suffer on the one side it is necessary to augment the price on the other.

It was at an evening party and a gentleman at the gay gathering asked a friend in a whisper: "How shall I stir the fire without interrupting the music?" "Oh, between the bars, of course!" was the reply.

Tenders For Short Term Debentures

Will be Opened at To-night's Meeting of the Finance Committee

Tenders for seventy-eight thousand dollars worth of debentures to retire a similar amount of short term debentures issued last year, will be opened to-night at the meeting of the Finance Committee. If the prices quoted are satisfactory to the committee, the short term notes will be retired and the regular twenty or thirty-year debentures substituted. The life of the present short term debentures is two years, but the city retains the right to retire them at the expiration of one year. They are worth about six per cent. net to the holders. Some of the committee thought that by issuing debentures for a longer term a much better interest rate could be obtained. From what can be gathered as to the condition of the bond market, it is hardly likely that the city will benefit to any appreciable extent. There is every reason to believe that the short term debentures will remain in force for another year.

LAKEFIELD NEWS

LAKEFIELD, July 29.—Miss Mary Webster of Smith spent Wednesday in the Village visiting friends.

Mr. J. Stuart of Peterborough spent Wednesday in the Village.

Several automobile owners treated the inmates of the House of Refuge to an outing on Wednesday afternoon.

Lieut. Gordon H. Grahame, who has been invalided home, passed through the Village on Tuesday on his way to Stoney Lake.

Mr. Willard Coon of Ottawa spent Thursday in the village.

Mr. J. John was in the Village on Thursday.

Miss Dorothy Sherin, who is spending the summer at "The Shack," Stoney Lake, was in the Village on Thursday.

Mr. S. Henderson who is spending the summer at Stony Lake, was in Lakefield Thursday.

The pavilion being erected by the Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association, at the Government Wharf, is almost completed and will be a great convenience to persons travelling up and down the Lakes.

"Who is your favourite writer?" "My husband." "Why, I wasn't aware that your husband's talents ran in that direction. What does he write?" "Cheques."

Grand Duke's Forces Not Only Hold Their Own But Make Counter Attacks--Lines Intact

Russia Unable to Advance in Present Circumstances, Nor Develop its Partial Successes, Owing to Lack of Munitions

LONDON, July 30. — Harold Williams, the Petrograd correspondent of The Chronicle, cables:

To-day's bulletins bring good news from many parts of the front. For days past the bulletins have not reported such a number of cheering episodes. Does this mean that the tide of battle all along the big front is turning in favour of the Russians, and that the Germans are on the eve of being driven back? Unfortunately no. These episodes just illustrate the amazing heroism of the Russian troops against enormous odds. They are the pledge of ultimate but not of immediate victory.

Must Face the Situation.

The fact must be faced that the Russian army in the present circumstances cannot advance, cannot develop its partial successes into a broad, aggressive movement. The mobilization of Russian industry for the munitions work has only just begun, and the army must be kept in being until supplied with means for throwing all its heroism into one big advance. The Russians, unable to advance, must try a fresh manouevre. They must again retire. They must foil the enemy's plan of cutting them off. The way to do this to evacuate the Polish front, which they have held for a year. It is a hard sacrifice to make, but at this stage of the war there is no choice. The Polish theatre projects right out into the enemy's country ,and, according to earlier strategical plans, it was to have been evacuated immediately on the outbreak of the war. The fact that the Russians have not only held it for a year, but have used it as a base from which to invade the enemy's territories, is an achievement which was quite unforseen. When the enemy turned his whole strength against Russia, when nearly the whole Austrian army and seventy German divisions, supported by artillery of unprecedented strength and by practically all the Austrian and German cavalry, flung themselves on Poland, the defects of this theatre became obvious.

Poland a Trap.

To defend it to the utmost would be to fall into the German trap, to expose the Russian army to destruction and to bring the war, so far as the eastern front is concerned, to a sudden and inglorious end.

To avoid this catastrophe, to conserve its forces in order to pursue the war to a distant but triumphant close, the Russian chief command will temporarily withdraw its army beyond the Vistula, but before it does this and while it does this, the Russian army will continue its work of wearing down the Germans, and the exhausted enemy, when he does occupy the Polish theatre, will find it is not the granary that it was at the beginning of the war, but a desert from which supplies are withdrawn and a large proportion of the population has fled.

Plan of Retreat Confirmed.

Another Petrograd, despatch says: A semi-official statement was issued to-night by sources close to the General Staff, which to all intents and purposes confirms the reported plan of retreat.

"Russia is taking no chances," says this statement, which appears in late editions of the London newspapers. "Now that the Germans are across the Narew it is necessary for her to take time to recover her balance.

"She in concert with her allies, recognizes that he war has long to run, and that shells, not men, in the end will be the determining factor."

Russian Official Report.

Petrograd (via London), July 30. — The official statement on the progress of the war issued by General Headquarters to-day reads as follows:

"Between the Niemen and the Dvina no material changes have taken place.

"The Narew front is without change. The enemy suffered enormously from artillery fire in an attempt to fortify the left bank of the river and the district of Skwa. Considerable forces of the enemy failed in an attempt to advance between the Narew and the Ose.

"In the direction of Serock-Pultusk there was fighting on both banks of the Narew.

"On the left bank of the Vistula we repulsed the enemys advanced guards in the direction of Gora Kalwarya and Grojec. Between the Vistula and the Vieprz quiet prevails. Between the Bug and the Vieprz the enemy suffered enormous losses.

"On Wdnesday the enemy attacked in the Maidane-Ostrovsky region and east of the Voislavitze-Kovlaka-vitze region. On the Bug, above Sokal, we repulsed two Austrian attacks.

"Near Kamionka, northeast of Lemberg, about six Austrian regiment crossed the Bu gand captured part of our trenches, but on Wednesday we compelled the enemy's forces to retreat in disorder beyond the river. We captured during 24 hours 1,500 prisoners."

FULLERTON CHARGES ARE FOUNDATIONLESS

Nothing in Any Way Reflecting on Norris or His Government Say the Judges

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, July 30.—The Perdue Commission this morning in a unanimous finding by three judges, declared that there has been nothing brought out in the charges preferred by fourteen Conservative members, preferred b C. P. Fullerton, which in any way reflects on the honour of the Cabinet of the Norris Government or on Premier Norris or on the Norris Government as a whole.

USED THE AXE ON CLOCK AND OTHER HOUSEHOLD GOODS

Brave Clean up by a Drunk Aroused the Ire of Magistrate Rush This Morning

"The lash is the only thing for you," said Acting-Magistrate Harry Rush to Frank Muringer, who in the Police Court this morning, was charged with being drunk and disorderly yesterday.

Muringer's tongue faltered in its seeming unfamiliarity with the English language. He replied not guilty if the court meant that he had been disorderly in a public place.

Chief Thompson stated that the man was accused of having been drunk in his home, had chopped up a clock, chairs and other articles of furniture. Added to this was the fact that the man's wife was in a delicate condition. Magistrate Rush's words scorched with indignation at the "frightfulness" or "kultur" displayed, but he decided to remand Muringer, until Tuesday next, when Magistrate Dumble will hear the case.

Roy Wright declared that it was a mistake to charge him with vagrancy He claimed to be 22 years of age but scarcely looked it.

Chief Thompson told Mr. Rush that Wright could have plenty of work, had he wanted to take it up.

Magistrate Dumble will give him a once over next Tuesday.

Clergymen Are Required

Volunteers Should Make Application to Bishop of Diocese

KINGSTON, July 9—The Bishop of Kingston, in a letter to the clergy, intimates that anyone desiring to become an overseas chaplain to the forces should apply first to the Bishop of his diocese, who will, if the application can be recommended send it on to the Bishop of Ottawa, who represents the Church of England in this province as a member of an advisory committee to aid the Minister of Militia in his task of selecting chaplains: Suitable clergymen are now required.

FRENCH SUBMARINE HAS DISAPPEARED

PARIS, July 30.—The following statement was issued by the French Ministry of Marine:

"The French squadron in the Dardanelles is without direct news of the French submarine Mariotte, which entered the Straits July 26 to operate in the Sea of Marmora.

"According to telegrams from Turkish sources the submarine has been sunk and the officers and crew of 31 have been made prisoner."

According to a despatch from Constantinople to the Mittag Zeitung, of Berlin, the Mariotte was destroyed by a German submarine on July 26 in the Narrows of the Dardanelles.

YOUTHS SENTENCED TO REFORMATORY

OWEN SOUND, July 30. — Harry Hills, a 17-year-old youth, was sentenced by Police Magistrate Creaser to one year, less eight days, at the Guelph reformatory. Hills pleaded guilty to implication in the theft of goods from the British Woolen Mills. A comrade of Hills, William Watson, was allowed to go on suspended sentence for a year on undertaking to make restitution for the goods stolen, he having pleaded guilty to receiving stolen goods.

GREEK SHIP IS HELD UP

ROME, July 29. — Newspaper despatches received from Tunis say that an allied warship captured a large Greek sailing ship off Cape Matapan and towed it into Bizerta. Five Turkish officers are declared to have been found hidden aboard the ship, which was laden with provisions and arms and ammunition intended for the rebels of Cyrenaica. On searching an officer, who seemed to be the leader of the expedition, a letter is said to have been found from the Sultan of Turkey to the Grand Senoussi rebel chieftain.

The despatches say that the French authorities are maintaining the greatest reserve concerning the seizure.

It doesn't pay to defy nature's laws. We all need peace of mind, rest, outdoor exercise, and eight hours sleep to keep well. We must not overeat, nor drink much, unless it be milk or water. These are both good and should be freely used.

NEW C.P.R. HOTEL AT ST. ANDREWS BY THE SEA

IN April last year the Algonquin Hotel, St. Andrews, N.B., owned by the C. P. R., was almost entirely destroyed by fire. The main building, of frame construction, was completely burned, and only the shells of the two wings were left standing. It was decided to rebuild, and Messrs. Barott, Blackader and Webster, architects, Montreal, were instructed to draw up plans, under the direction of D. H. Mapes, the company's Engineer of Buildings. The contract for the main building was let to P. Lyall and Sons Construction Company, Limited, Montreal, while the restoration of the wings was done by the Engineer of Buildings.

The hotel stands on a site covering 28,000 ft. and is constructed almost entirely of reinforced concrete, terra cotta partitions being utilised in the interior. In order to give an artistic appearance to the front of the main building, a quantity of lumber, embedded in concrete, is employed. The roof is of red slate.

The building, consisting of 4 storeys and two basements, has accommodation for 202 guests' rooms accommodates 250 guests. These basements contain servants' quarters, officers' quarters, helps' dining room, bakery, laundry, men's lounge, female helps' common room, servery, etc. An open terrace is built over the front portion of the basement, and as higher ground is reached, a verandah is constructed along the front and one side of the building.

The first floor, entered from the verandah, is arranged so that the lobby is placed between the dining room (41½ ft. x 113 ft.)—the largest room in the hotel—and the lounge (31½ ft. x 89½ ft). These can also be entered from the terrace and verandah respectively. The drawing room (27 ft. x 33½ ft.) leads off the lounge. Behind these rooms and facing the rear portion of the hotel, are children's dining room, private dining room, sitting room, office, news stand, tourist agents' office, telephone booth, telegraph office, manager's office, smoking room, etc. The entire second and third floors, including the wings, are given up to bedrooms; 97 of these have private baths and 22 have private lavatories. In the attic, bedroom accommodation is also provided, while here is also situated the male helps' quarters, dormitory, and common room. A boiler house is constructed about 300 feet from the main building, and is connected therewith by means of a tunnel. This contains three boilers and two generators for the purpose of providing electric light, power, heat, and hot water, the refrigerating plant and laundry, as well as quarters for the engineers and laundry help.

The keynote of the furnishing is to be simplicity, as becomes a purely summer hotel. Most of the bedrooms and public rooms will have hardwood floors. With the object of minimizing the risk of fire, fire walls and automatic fire doors have been provided, dividing each floor into five sections, which can be isolated in case of an outbreak. Thus on the first floor there are seven such doors, besides two rolling fire shutters, which operate automatically in case of fire.

Attached to the hotel is one of the finest golf courses in the world with delightful natural bunkers. The length of the course is the regulation eighteen holes, most of which are longer than the ordinary run of holes. This gives it additional popularity, as it affords the golfer an opportunity for the frequent use of his brassy in long driving.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

TO-MORROW'S GAMES IN THE CITY BALL LEAGUE

There is considerable interest in to-morrow's City League game, especially the battle between East City and Thistles, which is the second game of the double header. The championship is at stake as far as East City is concerned. If they win, Dan McCabe's bunch are champions for 1915. They beat the Thistles by one run in the last two games, but Louis Yeote's crew, although badly shot by an attack of enlistment fever, will endeavour to turn the tables.

TWO MORE OF OTTAWA'S ATHLETES OFF TO FRONT

OTTAWA, July 30.— Letham Graham and Cecil Dewar, two of Ottawa's prominent athletes, are deserting the puck and pigskin to follow the guns on active service. Both weighed in yesterday with the recruiting officer of the 25th C. F. A. and will leave for Valcartier to-day.

These complete a trio of prominent athletes who has responded to the call of duty within the past few days. "Punch" Broadbent, Ottawa's famous ring wing, was the first to enlist and he will also leave to-day. Dewar was the outside wing of the Ottawa Big Four football team last fall.

Their example will likely create a stimulus in recruiting. Ottawa, unlike many other cities, has contributed a good percentage of athletes to the cause, though there are many yet who can profitably answer the call.

PARIS HOCKEY PLAYERS RALLY TO THE COLOURS

BRANTFORD, July 29.—Brantford has contributed approximately 1,000 men to the fighting forces of the Empire. Paris has sent 188 men to the front, or one out of every 22 of the population — slightly better than Brantford's record, which is one in 26. The contingent which left for Niagara yesterday included 28 of the very finest of the youth of Paris. Practically every well-known family contributed of its best. The Gill, Peebles, and Fraser families, known through all ntario as the ones which for years past have made up the Paris hockey team, have not a single man left in their ranks—only the married ones remaining in Paris. Only one player of the hockey team of last year is left to form a nucleus of a team this winter, if one is formed, which seems unlikely. Of the Paris football team only one member is left, he having been rejected on medical examination.

Of the 28 men who left Brantford, yesterday as Paris' contribution, 80 per cent. were single.

Paris, in addition to contributing men, in three hours raised $1,000 for a machine gun, has kept up its share of the Patriotic Fund, and has presented every Paris man who left with $10.

TENNIS

There will be a meeting of the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association executive in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

The following scores were made in yesterday's games:

Webber and Cressman of Bowling Green defeated Harris and Walton of St. Andrew's 6-0 and 6-0.

Williams and Meyers of the Bowling Green defeated McNeil and Curry of St. Andrew's 6-0 and 6-0.

Payne and Griffith of St. Paul's won from Kelly and Lefobre of Sacred Heart by 6-3 and 9-7.

Moore and McKee of St. Paul's won from Letellier and McDonald of Sacred Heart by 6-1 and 8-6.

Dr. Sutton and Weller of All Saints' defeated McKenzie and Smith of Knox by 6-1 and 6-3.

Rush and H. Cranfield of All Saints' broke even with McKenzie and Hillier, 6-2 and 7-9.

A. Cranfield and Jackson of South End defeated Heaslip and Darling of Y.M.C.A. 6-0 and 6-3.

Great English Rugby Player Gave Up Life

In the death of Lieutenant Ronald William Poulton Palmer, late of the Fourth Royal Berkshire Regiment, recently killed in action, English rugby football has lost one of its most brilliant exponents. As a three-quarter back— he could play either in the centre or on the wing—his name will go down as probably the greatest player of all time. He was decidedly of the unorthodox type, and, although he had many imitators, was unequalled in his distinctive style. The strongest points of his game were his resolute running and wonderful swerve. At the beginning of his career he was rather weak in his tackling, but his weakness was remedied by experience. As a captain he was born leader; he was never flurried, and was always seen at his best when the score was against his side. Like all great players, he had his off days, but he was just the man to win games by his individual flashes of brilliance and no English side could have been considered at full strength without him.

HUGHEY JENNING'S FIRST 'HIT.'

Hughey Jennings, manager of the Detroit Tigers, tells this story of his early baseball experience in the American Boy:

"I wasn't much of a hitter when I started, and at this particular time I was in an especially bad slump. The first three times at bat I failed to get anywhere near first base. When I started out the fourth time the manager said to me, 'Jennings, you get on some way!' I felt that my job depended on getting to first. I swung at the first pitch and missed it a foot. I guessed the next one for an incurve and stepped up to it, hoping to get a hit. It swung straight across the plate and missed me. I stepped into the third one desperate; it was an incurve and struck me in the temple, laying me out cold. In the course of a couple of minutes I had been revived and helped to my feet. Then I wabbled down to first. A fan in the bleachers called out, 'That a boy, Hughey! That's the way. That's putting the wood to 'em!'"

LAWN BOWLING

The honour of wearing the fobs, which distinguishes the winning rink is being contested for. Last night the contest was between the Vosden and the Maynard rinks. The score was as follows:

Maynard . . . . . 100101052610—17
Vosden . . . . . 011020100003— 8

The prizes have all arrived for the annual tournament on Monday.

Answers have been received from a large number of rinks promising to be here for that day.

SHORT SPORTS OF INTEREST.

A hybrid game of baseball and golf has been invented by two boys in Atlanta, Ga. The object of the game is to see in how few throws the player can throw a golf ball in the cup at every hole. Richard "Thug" Thornton is the star of the new game. "Thug' can do the East Lake course in 120 throws," says his playing partner.

Jim Scott, pitcher for the White Sox, is the first ball player to play ball in prison without being detained after the game, says The Philadelphia Public Ledger. Scott, on a trip through the State Reformatory at Pontiac, Ill., last fall, paused to watch the Saturday afternoon game between the convict teams. In the third inning one of the pitchers weakened and Scott took his place. He allowed only one hit and no scores during the remainder of the game.

Pitcher Jack Nabors of the Newnon Club, of the Georgia State League, who established a world's record by shutting out the Talladega team without a hit for thirteen innings, is only a boy. He is but 20 years of age, stands six feet three inches in height, and weighs 195 pounds. Nabors has won ten games, lost one, and tied one.

Regulation ring battles among the young women of Tulane University continue in spite of the faculty ban. After the publicity of the contests in the gymnasium, the young women decided to hold their bouts in private. The regulation twenty-four foot ring is used, three-minute rounds are fought and there are referees, time keepers, seconds, trainers and handlers. Miss "Johnnie" McDonald of Mississippi is the undisputed champion. She has outpointed all her opponents and in tow matches has gone ten rounds. Several contestants have shown marks of their encounters with her. Miss Hilda Simons of Louisiana is the second best boxer.

Topsy Hartsel, famous as outfielder and hitter, formerly with Indianapolis and a member of Connie Mack's champion Athletics and later manager of the Toledo team in the American Association and Southern Michigan League, is out of the game for all time. Hartsel's last engagement was with Fort Wayne, in the Central League, but because the famous player has slowed up Manager Bade Myers gave him his release. Hartsel has returned to his home in Toledo.

Keokuk in the "Three Eye" League will have three-cent baseball the rest of the season. The club directors have authorized the sale of tickets for all games for the remainder of the schedule for a dollar. There are about thirty-six games yet to play, and this brings the cost down to the three-cent basis. With the proceeds of this ticket sale the directors believe they will be able to finish the season with little financial trouble.

MODERN TENNIS IS HARD ON RACQUETS

T. R. Pell's recent boast that he is the world's champion smasher of tennis racquets, may have been made in the spirit of jest, but his claim to the title is not likely to go long unchallengfied. His record of twenty-two racquets put out of commission in a season that is still young is undoubtedly a large number, yet it would be a mistake to suppose that Pell stands alone in his glory.

There are dozens of tournament players right here in New York who could at least run him a close second. Pell is not an exceptionally hard man on a racquet, but rather only one of an increasingly large class of players who find that tennis as it is played nowadays puts a strain on the racquet that cannot long be withstood.

When a man breaks a golf club it is a sign that he is either a beginner or an incurable "dub." In this game the more proficient a player becomes the more considerate he is of his sticks. In tennis the rulew orks just the other way. The novice and the player who plugs along year after year without getting anywhere hardly know what racquet trouble is. It is the tournament player, the crack, who punishes his bat.

Not that the old racquets were better made—ask any first-class stringer or racquet-maker and he will tell you otherwise. The modern racquet—that is, the racquet used by tournament players—is a much higher class product both as to workmanship and quality of wood and gut than the racquet of earlier days. It has undergone a process of refinement, so the makers say, that has shortened its life while making it a much more effective weapon in the hands of a skillful player—while it does last.

Church Another "Smasher."

Those employed in racquet making and stringing say that the real reason for the high rate of breakage is the development of the modern brand of high-speed tennis and the tendency on the part of tournament players to demand the lightest possible gut, strung to the tension of a violin string. The present-day tournament racquet is not built to last. The makers themselves admit it. So exacting are some of the younger players in the matter of the racquets thye use that there is one expert in town now who does little else but keep them supplied with what they want. A shining example of the modern racquet smasher is George M. Church, the Princeton star, who demands only the lightest brand of gut—eighteen-gauge gut, it is called— and who uses a racquet strung almost to the breaking oint. This gut is hardly heavier than shoe thread, and when drawn tight it imparts all kinds of "life" to the racquet. But it is not calculated to stand up under the wear and tear of a tournament. In fact, it has been estimated that a racquet such as Church uses begins to weaken after ten games, and is of little service after a few hard sets.

Church, naturally, keeps the racquet "doctor" busy. His record for breaking may not be so high as Pell's, but that may be partly due to luck and the fact that he always has another in reserve when the head of the racquet he happens to be using begins to show signs of "softening."

Slash Strings With Knife.

It is not an uncommon sight to see a player take out his knife and slash the strings of his racquet after a tournament match. The amateur, looking at those strings, might say they were in perfect condition, but that is only because he is not particular. The habit of playing with only the tightest-strung bat seemingly spoils a man for any other kind, and the moment the original spring of the gut is lost the player is no longer satisfied. So he cut away the strings rather than take chances with a break or even with a slight shift of the strain that might tend to warp the frame.

The comparison of tournament racquet gut to violin strings is no exaggeration. In the case of a racquet such as Church uses it is absolutely necessary to draw the main strings—that is, the long ones in the centre of the head—equally taut. This is done by an expert stringer who has a highly sensitive musical ear. When he tightens one string he actually 'tunes' the others up to the same musical key.

Pell is not so exacting in respect to the "tune," but demands a tight-strung racquet with gut slightly heavier than Church seeks. tI has eben said that Pell's famous backhand stroke has much to do with his heavy toll of racquets, and there is, no doubt, much truth in this. Pell has developed the backhand swing until it has become his most telling strike, and no less an authority than Maurice McLoughlin has called Pell the greatest backhand player in the world. In making the stroke, Pell's forearm and wrist are held as rigid as iron; thus he puts terrific strain on the racquet head.

"Cannon Ball" Disastrous.

McLoughlin himself is well up in the front rank of those who inflict heavy punishment on their racquets during a tournament. In his case, as might be expected, it is the service stroke that does the chief damage. When he is delivering the famous cannon ball serve the racquet in the hand of McLaughlin becomes a flail and the whole weight of his body is thrown into the stroke. In the East the Californian has a host of imitators, and, no doubt, some of the racquet makers' business may be attributed to his influence.

More than one veteran player has come to the conclusion that the rate of breakage is much higher than it should be, and there is a growing belief that the tenedency to use only the tightest-strung racquets has gone too far. The more conservative followers of the sport contend that the ultra tight racquet is not essential to a fast game, and in proof of this they point to Norman E. Brookes, in the Davis Cup matches last year the Australasian handled the most stinging shots McLoughlin could deliver and he used an old-fashioned square-headed bat with a ridiculously small handle— a racquet of the sort that most Ame rican players have relegated to the clubhouse walls as antique. His was a light racquet and not particularly tight strung. But if it in any way slackened the pace or kept Brookes fro mputting the full force into his strokes, neither McLoughlin nor any o fthe thousands who saw him play was able to discover it.

Quarreling Lovers Enlist

An amusing phase of the recruiting, says a Canadian sergeant, is the number of young men who come to the office hot from a lovers' quarrel. You can tell them the minute they come in by their white, determined faces, and the faraway expression with which they go through the examination. These recruiting stations ought to play the very dickens with sweethearts. A girl daren't enjoy a little quarrel. It is too risky.

OBITUARY

FREDERICK J. THOMPSON.
Word has been received in the city of the death of Frederick John Thompson, son of J. J. Thompson, Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, Presque Isle, Me., and formerly physical director of the Peterborough Branch of the Y.M.C.A. The young man who was about sixteen years of age and was well known in the city, having resided here with his parents for a number of years. Death occurred in the hospital, Presque Isle, on Tuesday. The funeral took place to-day in Toronto from 11 Mellville Avenue.

MRS. DAVID SMYTH.
The death occurred on Thursday, July 29th of Mrs. David Smyth, of Cavan, at the Nicholls Hospital following a brief illness and an operation. The deceased was the widow of the late David Smyth, who died suddenly while at work on his farm in April, 1908. Her maiden name was Isabella Harcourt. She was one of a prominent family in Cavan and Port Hope and was in her 52nd year. Besides her brothers and sisters she is survived by one child, Mildred Smyth. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence, lot 22, concession 8, Cavan, to the Fraserville cemetery. Rev. Mr. Wickett will conduct the funeral service.

BIG ADVANCE IS MADE BY ITALIAN TROOPS

ROME, July 30.—The following official statement from the Grand Headquarters of the Italian army, dated July 29, was made public this evening.

"In the Cordevole Valley our offensive has made remarkable progress. Our troops have occupied the slope extending from the Lanu Pass to the township known as Pieve de Livinallongo. In the Valley of Padola the enemy advanced in force along the high road, but was repulsed, leaving a few prisoners in our hands.

"In Carniolo our artillery action against the Austrian defensive works continues. Another cupola of Fort Hrzel has been destroyed.

Triumph on Carso Front.

"On the Carso front during the morning of yesterday, our adversary deployed in great force, and, supported by a violent artillery fire, tried to advance, with the evident object of throwing us out of positions we had conquered on preceding days. The energy and bravery of our troops caused this manoeuvre to completely fail, and the enemy was obliged to fall back after suffering very great losses.

"From statements of prisoners we learn that the counter-attack was carried out by fresh troops which had just arrived at the scene of action. Among these troops was at least one regiment of Alpine Landeschutzen, which was almost entirely destroyed.

'Our forward march continues slowly. In the actions of the 27th and 28th of July we made altogether 1,480 prisoners, including 27 officers."

Austrian Losses 80,000.

A telegram from Laibach states the Italians, between July 17 and July 29, progressed along a front of 120 kilometres on the Isonzo and seven kilometres on the remainder of the front. Austrian losses in the last fortnight are put at 80,000.

Austrian Statement.

Vienna, July 30.—The following official statement was issued to-day:

"On the littoral front the Italians made unsuccessful attacks on the border plateau near Sdraussina and Vermegliano. Before the bridgehead at Goritz the enemy evacuated their positions, retreating to the positions they had occupied before the battle.

"On the Carinthian frontier artillery engagements and infantry skirmishes have occurred.

"In the region of the Tyrolean frontier an enemy battalion was repulsed near Marcelin, in the Etsch Valley. In the region of Tofana an Italain company was blown up."

BIRTH.

CASTLE—To Mr. and Mrs. Percy R. Castle, R.R. No. 2, a daughter.

MAHOOD—On Friday, July 30th, 1915, the wife of Mr. Ernest Mahood, River Road, Otonabee, of a daughter.

MARRIED.

ELLIS — STEEL - BROOKE — On July 28, 1915, at East Aurora, N.Y., By Rev. J. T. Jones, Mildred Ashton, elder daughter of Mrs. Louise H. Steel-Brooke San Francisco, to T. Walter Ellis, Toronto, son of the late Thomas Ellis, Peterborough.

"Sir, I admit being a poor man, but I am determined to marry your daughter in spite of her wealth." "Oh well, if that's the case I'll just remove the obstacle."

TATE IS RATIONAL

So the Neighbors Testify in Port Hope Case

PORT HOPE, July 29. — After hearing evidence bearing on the murder of little Elsie Tate in her home here, the coroner's jury this evening returned a brief verdict to the effect that she had been killed by an axe in the hands of her father, Edward James Tate. Nothing developed in the evidence suggesting a motive, and the burden of the testimony was that Tate has always acted in a rational manner. It was brought out, however, that about twenty years ago his father and mother and his brother were detained for some time in an asylum for the insane.

The witnesses were nearly all neighbours of the Tate family, and they testified to the harmonious relationship that at all times seemed to exist in the family. It was said that the prisoner was very fond of the murdered child.

Drs. Dickinson and Benton, who made the post-mortem examination, testified that seven wounds had been made by an axe in the child's neck.

Education, in the Christian sense, is truly everlasting; childhood preparing for maturity, maturity for age, and the whole of life for death and heaven.

FUNERAL OF MRS. BRADY ON SUNDAY

The funeral of the late Mrs. Hugh Brady, of Montreal will be held on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence of her sister, 483 Elm street, to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery. The remains will arrive in Peterborough on the early morning C. P. R. train from Montreal.

ASKED TO HAVE FINE REMITTED

Wm. Fair, city scavenger, appeared before the Finance Committee of the City Council, last evening, and asked that a fine of five dollars and costs imposed by Police Magistrate Dumble, be remitted. Mr. Fair informed the Committee that he had complied with the by-law regulating scavengers and was unaware he had violated the Weights and Measures Act by using cans that were alleged to be improperly stamped. The cans were stamped "thirty gallons" by the manufacturers, whereas the Weights and Measures Inspector estimated the capacity at eighteen and one-half gallons. Sanitary Inspector Spence, under whose authority the work was performed, claimed that the cans would hold twenty-eight and one-half gallons.

Mr. Fair gave a very lucid account of his connection with the transaction, which appeared to satisfy the Committee. The latter decided to let the matter stand over until Monday night, when it will be threshed out in Council.

A Million Eggs a Month Is Needed For Wounded Soldiers

"Must have eggs!" said the surgeons at the British military hospitals.

"These men are sick, so sick that the doctors have prescribed eggs,—eggs by the thousand!" whispered the hospital matrons in dismay.

It was then the beginning of winter when hens were going off duty, and new laid eggs were needed.

"How many do you really need?" said a certain London egg expert hopefully.

"At least two hundred and fifty thousand a week" answered the hospital people dolefully!

"A quarter of a million a week. Why if we set out to buy them we shall run up egg prices sky high, and ruin the housewives," moaned one provident donor of a hospital.

Then a committee was formed. General Long, Imperial Director of Supplies from the war office assisted, and appeals were cautiously made for donations of eggs.

In reply came just 250 eggs!

But that was only the beginning. Tentacles were run out from the committee to every town, and hamlet in the United Kingdom, and after routes by raiders and corsairs. We know how this fear was falsified.

But in the main the National Egg Collection was to be drawn from purely private sources, for which reason local committees were formed; local mayors and clerics of all denominations were enlisted. And of course local ladies, too.

All contributors—the farmer's wife and the vicar's or minister's, the cottager, artisan and schoolchild—were expected to state definitely how many eggs they would be responsible for each week. Freight would cost them nothing of course, and boxes for safe carriage were supplied.

The results are very peculiar, and naturally vary according to locality and the "push and go" of the local staff. There are now 800 depots between Cornwall and the Shetlands. Ireland, Wales and the Channel Islands are also drawn upon. Some bases—Chichester, for example, Bury, St. Edmunds, Launceston, and Hitchin—receive 1,000 new-laid eggs a week; but the average looked for by the Central Board is 400. Little Garstang, in Lancashire, holds pride of place—a mere village of 800 souls, which sends 5,000 eggs a week to our hospitals!

Everybody is Collecting Eggs.

But this record is due to a local lady, the "queen" of twenty or thirty some fine strenuous pushing, the clearing house of the War Office became thronged with egg-boxes, and officials began to talk in terms of hundreds of thousands of dozens, all given free to Britain's wounded heroes!

From One Egg a Week up.

Here at the War Office says an English paper are a dozen men and forty women checking and packing and forwarding according to instructions from Sir Arthur Slogett, the chief of the Army Medical Corps. One list alone numbers thirty-two hospitals, and their requirements are 45,000 eggs a week. It's a wonderful place, this warehouse where the egg tax is paid by all sorts and conditions of men, women, children — and even babes barely able to walk; but with a pullet for a pet and a contribution gravely recorded of one egg per week "for the duration of the war!"

The movement spread, as one might expect such a movement to spread amongst a practical people like ourselves. Professional poultrymen gave what they could, although grain and feed of all sorts had risen in price, so much so that hundreds of thousands of birds were killed soon after we declared war. It was said that maize, wheat and oats would soon be at famine prices through the closing of our trade sub-committees in villages round about who shower their offerings upon her and have won a renown in our army which grateful Tommy will not willingly let die. By no means all the eggs collected come to the London clearing-house, for between Weymouth and Aberdeen there are scores of home hospitals to be supplied—War Office, Territorial, Red Cross, and V. A. D.

Gradually the sterling nature of this appeal took hold upon religious, philanthropic, and other bodies, who now co-operate in it with ever-increasing zeal. Thus eighty or ninety Salvation Army depots assist, and their local headquarters often resemble so many shops.

The Boy Scouts are authorized collectors of new-laid eggs, so are members of the Church Lad's Brigade. In the village tiny girls go from door to door collecting, and in the country towns my lady sweeps down the High Street in a car precariously set out with generous dozens, displayed in cardboard boxes which she has collected from prosperous streets and outlying farms.

When the humble housewife and her children learn the destination of all these eggs, they often scribble messages on them; greetings to sick or wounded men, prayers for their recovery, news of home and of the sender—perhaps a child of three who says she "told" the hen all about it and saw her plumage ruffle with patriotic pride!

Titled ladies rush about in their automobiles,—driving themselves owing to the need of chauffeurs at the front — gathering up the promised supplies.

Lads on bikes, and girls on foot make daily rounds with baskets and cardboard boxes! It is a sad disgrace to fall behind promises made, and much self-denial is practiced to provide choicest egg producing food, that hens failing to do their duty, may be without excuse.

Sick British soldiers, lots of them far from home, Indians, Canadians, Australians, New Zealanders, Newfoundlanders, must have fresh eggs!

That is the slogan, and all through the mother isles it is being re-echoed.

Is there any chance of Canada breaking into the game, and chipping in with a few new-laid eggs

WEAK, TIRED, DEPRESSED

That is the Usual Condition of Persons Afflicted With Anaemia

Anaemia is the medical term for poor, watery blood. It may arise from a variety of causes, such as lack of exercise, hard study, improperly ventilated rooms or workshops, poor digestion, etc. The chief symptoms are extreme pallour of the face and gums, rapid breathing and palpitation of the heart after slight exertion, headaches, dizziness and a tendency to hysteria, swelling of the feet and limbs and a distaste for food. All these symptoms may not be present, but any of them indicate anaemia which should be promptly treated with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills make new, rich blood which stimulates and strengthens every organ and every part of the body. Dr Williams' Pink Pills have made thousands of anaemic people bright, active and strong. The following is one of the many cures. Mrs. Phillips, wife of Rev. W. E. Phillips, Princeton, Ont., says: "Some years ago, while living with my parents in England I fell a victim of anaemia. The usual complications set in and soon I became but a shadow of my former self. My mother, who had been a former nurse of many years experience, tried all that her knowledge suggested; tonics of various kinds were tried, and three doctors did their best for me, but without avail, and a continued gradual decline and death was looked for.

"Later my parents decided to join my brothers in Canada, and it was confidently expected that the ocean voyage, new climate and new conditions would cure me. For a time I did experience temporary benefit, but was soon as ill again as ever. I was literally bloodless, and the extreme pallour and generally hopeless appearance of my condition called forth many experiences of sympathy from friends whom we made in our new home in Acton, Ont. Later a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and although in a condition where life seemed to have little to hope for I decided to do so. After using three boxes I began to mend. Continuing I began to enjoy my food, slept almost normally, and began to have a fresh interest in life as I felt new blood once again running in my veins. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills brought about a complete cure and I am to-day in robust health. My husband is rector of this parish and I have recommended the use of the Pills to a great number of people with whom we have come into contact in the course of my husband's ministry, for we both know what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can do."

These Pills may be had from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Letter From Pte. Reynolds.

The many friends in Belmont and Havelock of Pte. W. A. Reynolds, of Norwood, will be much interested in the following letter received recently by Mrs. J. A. Sexsmith of Preneaveau in reply to a parcel sent him from the patriotic ladies of that section of Belmont:

France, June 16th, 1915.

Mrs. J. A. Sexsmith, Preneaveau.

Dear Friends,—I received your parcel to-day and it certainly is a beaut. It was just what I have been longing for and the paper is fine. I am keeping the note until I use up the pads as it is easier to pack in haversack.

The 1st Battalion, Capt. Doxsee, which you mentioned in your letter was up against it last night. They lost all their officers but one or two, and nearly two-thirds of their men.

The old 4th have had pretty fair luck since Langemarck, not losing many killed, but quite a number wounded. They are out for a rest now. Canada will have her share of sorrow before this war is over I am afraid. This is a very beautiful country and sometimes when the guns are silent you would hardly know a war was going on. The farms are all planted in grain, even though they are cut up with trenches and wire entanglements that are back of the actual firing line, but the towns are all knocked to pieces, hardly a farm building for miles around that does not show the effect of shell fire. The farmers go about their vocations as usual though, as if nothing was happening. They get used to the shells as does everyone else who has been out here for awhile. The weather is getting pretty hot and the roads very dusty, but anything is better than sleeping out in that awful rain and mud in cold weather. Everyone is conjecturing as to when the war will be over and hoping we do not have to put in another winter here.

I haven't much time, and practically nothing much to tell you about this time, but thought I could manage to send you a few lines to let you know I received your parcel O.K. I will be able to write more frequently now that I have the necessary article, and am always glad to receive your letters.

I might mention that Canadian tobacco is very scarce out here and very much appreciated, as the stuff they call tobacco in this country tastes like alfalfa and smells like some place we don't usually mention.

Do not forget to write as often as you can.

Your sincerely,
Pte. W. A. Reynolds,
4th Battalion.

Vernon Castle To Join Allies In Flying Corps

Vernon Castle, it was learned, has obtained a commission in the Flying Corps of the British army and is arranging to report in England in December.

Reports for the last few days were to the effect that Mr. Castle was to leave New York for London immediately, but this is denied. He and his wife will go on tour in "Watch Your Step," under the direction of Charles B. Dillingham, and remain with that musical comedy until December.

Mr. and Mrs. Castle attended the performances of the "Ziegfried Follies" in the Nek Amsterdam Theatre to see Miss Ina Claire's impersonation of Mrs. Castle. Between the acts Mr. Castle said that he had obtained an English commission and would proceed to Dayton, Ohio, in about two weeks to purchase an aeroplane. But his new career of adventure for the cause of the Allies will not interfere with his theatrical engagements until December. After that he proposes to patriotically risk his long but graceful legs in his country's service, for he is an Englishman. His American wife will remain in this country.

Tan, Red or Freckled Skin Is Easily Shed

To free your summer-soiled skin of its muddiness, freckles, blotches or tan, the best thing to do is to free yourself of the skin itself. This is easily accomplished by the use of ordinary mercolised wax, which can be had at any druggstore. Use at night as you use cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Immediately the offending surface skin begins to come off in fine powder like particles. Gradually the entire cuticle is absorbed, without pain, or inconvenience. The second layer of skin now in evidence presents a spotless whiteness and sparkling beauty obtainable in no other way I've ever heard of.

If the heat tends to loosen and wrinkle your skin, there's an effective and harmless remedy you can readily make at home. Just let an ounce of powdered saxolite dissolve in a half pint witch hazel and bathe your face in the liquid. This at once tightens the skin and smooths out the lines, making you looks years younger.—Emily Coulson in Home Queen.

"Father," said Mabel, "do you enjoy hearing me sing?" "Well," was the answer, "I don't know, but it's rather soothing in a way. It makes me forget my other troubles."

NOT THE BIGGEST
—BUT THERE'S NONE BETTER

The size of an institution doesn't necessarily determine the quality of its product or service.

The biggest doesn't always produce the best.

It all depends upon the quality of the materials used; the skill and interest of the workmen, and the intentions of "the man behind."

We frankly admit that ours is not the largest Optical Establishment in Ontario.

But we do maintain that, with our thoroughly modern equipped shop, and with well paid workmen personally interested in its welfare, and working under the supervision of Mr. Fowler, we get better results at less cost to the customer from our parlors than do the larger shops.

Guaranteed quality, better prices, and all-round better service—that is what you are assured at Fowler's Optical Parlors.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

"I can't," sez I, turnin' my head to the left, "I'm paralyzed. Do you think if I was able to move, I'd be sittin' here on a stone watchin' the antics of a pet saddle?"

A lantern-jawed feller was glancin' along a six-shooter at me from behind a rock about thirty feet away. He had big ears, a hook nose, and deep-set eys. "Don't you try nothin' funny," sez a voice from my right.

"Funny?" sez I, turnin his way. "If you had to spoil the shape of what was once intended for a head by wearin' a fifty-pound saddle on it for seventy miles, would you be sittin' out in the night air, plannin' somethin' funny?"

This feller's face hadn't been worn quite so thin, but still its expression was so much like the first feller's, and he seemed so noticeably shorter, that I was convinced that I was in the presence of the two deputies Bud Stern had spoke of.

"Who are ya?" asked the tall one.

I thought rapid; if these two were the deputies, why they were the best bet I had for gettin' north, and if they weren't, they had the drop on me, anyway, though I had a plan in my head which I thought would offset that in purty able shape.

"Where'll you take me if I surrender quiet?" sez I.

"That's none o' your business," sez the tall one.

I looked at him steady and grinned. How many you got with ya?" sez I.

"That's none o' your business, either," sez he.

"It may be, as you say, that nothin' which happens to me is any o' my business; but I've been brought up different," sez I. "If you'll agree to take me to Elliot, why, I'll surrender peaceable; but if you take me south, you won't go far."

"It won't do you no good to bluff" sez the tall one. We trailed you in here yesterday, we know there was only two of you, and we know what become of the other one."

"Perhaps," sez I, slow, and with something of a rage beginnin' to rise in me again 'my better judgment, "you also know who we came to see, and how long you'd last if they happened to come creepin' at you from among these rocks."

"You shut up and stick up your hands," sez the short one.

"I won't stick up my hands," sez I "until you talk to suit me. I'm on the level so far; but, so help me, if you start anything, I'll call up a crowd here that'll make sausage-stuffin' out o' you in two minutes. Now then, you started the talk about bluffin', what do you think o' that?"

They were a little uneasy, that was plain to be seen; they mighty well knew that most clean-livin' folks classed in deputy marshals and rustlers as bein' of the same breed o' dogs, but havin' a little different masters, and they looked from one to another, and then back at me. The rock I was sittin' on was smaller 'n the ones they were behind, but I had made up my mind to turn a hack-summer-set off it and roll to a bigger one the second I could get their attention.

"Come on, now," sez the tall one, "it's gettin' dark and we can't fool with you any longer."

"Sh," I whispered, lookin' off to the right where the trail out of the canon came through some big rough crags. I pointed my finger at these crags, they turned that way mighty eager, and I flopped myself backward like a flash. When I stopped, I was behind a big rock with a rise at my back and a gun in my hand. "Well" sez I, "here we are, all nicely planted, and I give you fair warning that if you don't come to my terms, I'll begin shootin' and turn you over to the other crowd, right now."

"What is it ya want?" sez the tall one.

"I want to get to Elliot," sez I, "and I want to get there as quick as I can. The's a bunch of outlaws within hail, and a pair o' deputy-marshals, I don't care enough for, either bunch to risk two minutes on which side I take. If you promise to take me to Elliot and identify me the minute we arrive, I'll go along with you and ride ahead, but I won't give up my gun. If you refuse before I count fifteen, I begin shootin' at you, and throw in with the other crowd. One—"

At ten they gave in and went for their hosses, bringin' in not only mine but Tom Smith's, too, all saddled and bridled. This gave me another droop, but I didn't ask any questions. I threw on my saddle and cinched it to suit me, then they tied the reins of Tom Smith's hoss and threw them over the horn o' my saddle.

I didn't like the looks o' this pair, they had gloaty grins and vultury eyes, and as far as trustin' 'em went, I didn't intend to. I had a gun on my left hip and was totin' my other gun under my arm in a holster like Tom Smith's. I had made me one just for the fun of the thing, and as they hadn't taken the trouble to introduce 'emselves I made 'em a promise under my breath not to stop any trouble they chose to start.

Well, I hadn't misjudged 'em none. They stood up close to me and just as I put up m tyoot to my stirrup, the tall one pushed in the hinge o' my right knee with his toe, the short one gave my pony a poke a poke with his thumb, and I floundered to the ground and mighty nigh got a kickin'. As I rose the tall one stuck his gun in my back and the short one lifted my hip gun and then they cackled at me.

"Sorry, stranger," sez the tall one, "but we don't think it's wise to trust you with arms until you get a bit older."

The tall one was behind me and the short one in front and I began to mutter about about my luck and to scratch myself on the chest. I hadn't had enough practice in pullin' a gun from under my arm to trust a long dive after it, and I didn't want any accidents to happen.

"Well, get on your hoss," sez the tall one; and then I crouched just a little and as I shot up my fist again' the short one's jaw, I whipped out swung around. The side of the tall one's head was exactly where I had a notion it would be and it stopped the barrel of my fortyfive with a bump.

After satisfyin' myself 'at they were restin' comfortable, I put back my guns, took the cylinders out o' theirs and rolled 'em off to one side, and then I ventured a couple o' low whistles in case Tom Smith was near. Then I got on my poney, turned Tom Smith's adrift, and leadin' the other two, I piruted around the rocks a while without findin' any trace of Tom Smith.

This was all the time I dared to risk, and so I cast the two hosses loose and started to ride to the north east, and it was a blame tedious ride. The pony was sure a good one, as was everything old Josiah had, but the' was a long grind ahead of him, and I had to nurse him even though my heart was eatin' itself out at what was likely to happen at any minute up at the Lion Head or over at the Horseshoe.

It's fine to ride light, but I don't crave to ride light-headed, and I had gone without food for so long that I was purt' nigh at the stage where they have visions. I hadn't heard much about fastin' those days and my appetite was such that I honestly didn't think that more than three or four meals stood between me and starvation. All durin' the night I ehard hoof-beats behind me — and that night was powerful long.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Impossible Man

How He Became Possible

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mona Renton looked at her uncle with wide, horrified eyes.

"Marry a man I have never seen? Impossible!" she cried indignantly.

Silas Renton frowned, but his voice did not lose its quality of patience.

"But, my dear Mona, I have told you that William is an exceptionally fine young man, and your marriage to him would save the business from ruin. His father has promised that."

"Why?" demanded Mona.

Mr. Renton gazed out of the window.

"Jim Barstow loved your mother, Mona, and failed to win her. I believe he wants his son to marry your mother's daughter. In fact, he told me so when I went to seek a loan from him."

"It's a bargain—a cold, cruel business transaction, Uncle Silas!" cried the girl passionately. "But you have been so good to me, like a father and mother in one, that I cannot refuse. Tell Mr. Barstow I will marry his son, but out of all the world, uncle, I am sure that this William is the one man I would not voluntarily choose to marry."

"The impossible man, eh?" smiled Mr. Renton, drawing her toward him.

"The impossible man!" agreed Mona, shuddering.

And when the next day came she had persuaded her uncle to permit her to spend a month upon his ranch in Montana.

"When I return I will meet Mr. William Barstow," she pleaded. And so she was allowed to go, planning to visit several school friends by the way.

It was several weeks after her conversation with her uncle that she arrived at the Double Circle ranch and was welcomed by motherly Mrs. Peters, wife of the boss.

Mona went directly to bed and was awakened early the next morning by the sound of voices under her window.

Boss Peters was talking to some one, a man with a lazy, drawling voice and a deep toned laugh.

Mona crept from bed and went to the window. Behind the ruffled draperies she could remain unseen.

A tall, loose limbed young man leaned against a big black horse while he lazily rolled a cigarette.

"It's this way, Billy," protested Boss Peters. "You've got to tend to your knittin' or out you go!"

Billy laughed genially and pushed his hat back on his thick brown hair. Mona liked him at once. Here was the typical, handsome cowboy of romance!

"Very well, Peters," laughed Billy. "Just give me another mess of knitting and I'll tend to it."

The men went away together, and presently Mona saw Billy riding away down the trail.

"I should like him," thought Mona as she dressed for breakfast. "I must ask Mrs. Peters about him."

But Mrs. Peters was exasperatingly vague about Mona's cowpuncher.

"Billy, did you say, Miss Renton?" she asked. "I'm sure I couldn't say, for most every other one's named Billy something or other. There's Billy Timms and little Billy and old Bill and Billy Barto. It might be Billy Barto. He speaks slowly and is always laughing. It might be him."

Mona blushed and changed the subject. Why should she be curious about this stranger?

After breakfast Boss Peters brought around a cream colored pony.

"You ride cross saddle, Miss Renton?" he asked.

"Yes," said Mona as she came down to pet the pony. "Isn't he a dear? He looks good enough to eat!"

Mrs. Peters, in the doorway, laughed and told Mona that she herself looked good enough to eat.

"In that white linen skirt and blouse and white felt hat you'll charm the birds off the trees," predicted the boss' wife.

Mona laughed and rode away, a straight, slim, soldierly figure, her wide gray eyes fixed on the trail ahead, her cheeks growing pink with the exercise in the clear air.

She forgot all her cares—the financial troubles of Renton & Co., which her engagement to young Barstow had magically changed to prosperity—her engagement to a man she had never seen, for William was away on a hunting trip.

"I know I shall hate him!" sighed Mona as she suddenly remembered the Barstows.

The cream colored pony stepped into a gopher hole, and Mona flew over his head to fall prone upon the sagebrush, one ankle twisted under her body.

She screamed once when she tried to move and then fainted away.

Mona opened her eyes to gaze into a pair of dark blue ones. A strong arm supported her as Billy Barto knelt beside her.

"I heard you scream, and so I came along," he explained. "Is it your arm?"

"My ankle—it feels so queer!" half sobbed Mona, her lovely face pale with agony.

He rode close beside her all the way home, cheering her with stories of the cattle country, even bringing a smile to her white lips by a recital of his own early adventures.

At last they reached the ranch house. Mona swooned away when Billy lifted her from the saddle and gave her into the keeping of Mrs. Peters.

Finally Mrs. Peters came downstairs. Her round eyes twinkled when she saw the anxious cowpuncher.

"How is she? Shall I go for the doctor?" said Billy.

Mrs. Peters laughed.

"She is fast asleep. You needn't bother going after the doctor. I'm better than a dozen doctors, specially with sprained ankles and such. You know, this is a gopher country."

Billy nodded.

"Well, I'll be hiking along," he said reluctantly; then, turning quickly, he asked sharply:

"Who is she, Mrs. Peters?"

"You mean Miss Mona?" she asked innocently.

"Miss Mona," he repeated, "thanks," and he added to himself, "I wonder what her first name is?"

During Mona's convalescence she spent many an hour in the hammock while Billy Barto read to her from his favorite authors, who in time became her favorites also.

Mona liked Billy Barto from the very beginning. When she began to love him she never knew, but perhaps it was that day when he dropped his book and, leaning over her, crushed her hands in his own.

Mona looked up into his tense face, and the lovely color left her own.

"Oh, Billy Barto, don't say a word!" she cried piteously. "I cannot listen!"

"The words are on my lips, dear," he said steadily, "but I am not free to utter them."

"It is the same with me," she murmured sadly.

"You—you are engaged?" he whispered, and when she nodded drearily he added grimly, "So am I."

After a silence he asked:

"Shall I go away from here?"

"No; I am going home tomorrow."

"Do not tell me where. I must not know anything more about you or nothing could keep me from following you to the end of the world," he muttered. Then, with one last crushing pressure of her slim hands, he was gone.

Mona closed her eyes while slow tears forced themselves through the thick fringes of her lashes.

Tomorrow she would be on her way home to Uncle Silas, and she must be prepared to fulfill her promise to marry Jim Barstow's son.

She did not see Billy again. Mrs. Peters did not mention the name of the handsome cowpuncher, and Mona did not see his face among the merry crowd which accompanied her to the station, riding on either side of the buckboard, acting like schoolboys on a holiday.

Home again among the luxurious surroundings of Silas Renton's town house, the days spent on the Double Circle ranch seemed to Mona like a dream.

That first night at dinner Uncle Silas broke the awkward silence. The servant had left the room, and Mona was toying with some grapes, her gray eyes fixed dreamily on space.

"If you are not too tired, Mona, I would like to have you meet Mr. Barstow and his son. They are coming at 9 o'clock."

"Very well, Uncle Silas," she said indifferently. "And did your business come out all right, as you expected?"

"Yes, and I didn't require Jim Barstow's help after all. But as you have promised to marry William it is only fair that you should meet him. And if you don't want to marry him now"—

"It doesn't matter much, Uncle Silas," she murmured, her heart sore at the thought of her broken romance, jealous of that girl to whom Billy Barto was engaged.

Mr. Renton eyed her sharply as he held the door open for her to pass out. The old sparkle and glow were gone. If this engagement to young Barstow was distasteful to Mona why was she not more joyous at her release?

He went into the library and picked up the evening mail. On top was a letter from Boss Peters of the Double Circle, and tucked inside was a note from Mrs. Peters.

As he read Silas Renton smiled.

At 9 o'clock, when the Barstows were announced, Silas was in the drawing room with Mona.

First came James Barstow, handsome, dignified and smiling. Behind him towered a younger man in immaculate evening dress.

Before the older men could greet each other Mona had flown down the long room to meet Jim Barstow's tall son.

"Oh, Billy Barto!" she cried. "Billy, Billy!"

Their hands met, and his arms encircled her.

At bay, they turned and faced the astonished old men.

"Father, this is the girl I am to marry," declared Billy Barto, and Silas Barstow turned to his lifelong friend for an explanation.

For several moments they held a whispered conversation; then Silas Renton came forward.

"Mona," he said, and Billy Barto turned a startled glance upon him, "somehow or other you have met young William Barstow, and you have changed your mind about marrying him, I see."

Then it was Billy's turn to explain that, disliking the idea of engaging himself to an unknown girl, he had gone west to forget his troubles in one last spirit of freedom. By chance he had hit upon Renton's ranch and engaged himself as a cowboy.

The rest we know—how he met and loved Mona Renton and how after they had parted as, as they thought, forever they met again.

"So the impossible man became possible after all!" declared Uncle Silas.

HOW WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio—"My left side pained me so for several years that I expected to have to undergo an operation, but the first bottle I took of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of the pains in my side and I continued its use until I became regular and free from pains. I had asked several doctors if there was anything I could take to help me and they said there was nothing that they knew of. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."—Mrs. C. H. GRIFFITH, 7305 Madison Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Hanover, Pa.—"I suffered from female trouble and the pains were so bad at times that I could not sit down. The doctor advised a severe operation but my husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I experienced great relief in a short time. Now I feel like a new person and can do a hard day's work and not mind it. What joy and happiness it is to be well once more. I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Compound."—Mrs. ADA WILT, 126 Stock St., Hanover, Pa.

Had "Cholera Infantum."

WAS WASTED TO A SHADOW.

Cholera Infantum is one of the most common summer complaints of infants, and many die who could be saved if taken in hand on the first sign of the trouble. It begins with a profuse diarrhoea, very often accompanied by vomiting, and the matter ejected from the stomach has a bilious appearance. The child rapidly loses flesh and becomes weak and languid.

Mrs. W. Ellis, 455 James Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for my three boys, and I do believe it saved their lives. One of them had cholera infantum so bad he was wasted to a shadow, and the doctor had given him up, but 'Dr. Fowler's' cured him. I have also used it myself for colic and find it an excellent remedy. I would not be without it in the house."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the original remedy for the cure of all bowel complaints. It has been on the market for the past 70 years.

When you ask for "Dr. Fowler's" see that you get "Dr. Fowler's."

SOFT COOKED CUSTARD

TWO cups scalded milk, yolks of two eggs, one-quarter cup of sugar, salt and vanilla to taste. Beat the eggs, add sugar and salt, then add milk, stirring constantly. Cook in a double boiler, stirring continually until the mixture thickens, then cool at once and add flavoring. Whites of eggs may be used with sugar for meringue, if desired.

Baked Custard

Use same ingredients as in above, only cover with grated nutmeg, and place dish in a moderate oven, and bake from 20 to 40 minutes. As a test, when custard is done, insert a knife into custard. If blade comes out clean, it is cooked sufficiently.

French Fried Potatoes

Wash and pare potatoes, cut in sections like an orange, drain and fry in deep fat until a golden brown. Drain again before serving.

Saratoga Chips

Wash and pare potatoes, slice crosswise as thin as possible, then drain and fry in deep fat until a golden brown, drain, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and serve.

When frying in deep fat, be careful not to put in wet potatoes or too many cold ones, as this will cause the fat to boil over.

Fricassee of Onion (Favorite Dish)

After peeling onions, stew slowly in boiling salted water; when tender, add one-half pint milk and a level tablespoon flour, which has been rubbed smooth in a little milk, and a heaping tablespoon butter. Cook thoroughly about ten minutes. Serve with mashed or boiled potatoes.

Rice Soup

To one quart milk, add a cup of cooked rice, cook in a double boiler for half an hour, then put through a fine ricer. Return to boiler, season with salt and pepper and a little cinnamon. Add a cup of thin, sweet cream; serve hot.

Baked Potatoes

Select potatoes of uniform shape and size, wash and dry, lay on rack in oven, turning frequently to prevent hardening on one side. Bake in a moderate oven about 50 minutes.

Chocolate Blanc-Mange

Four tablespoons corn starch, four cups milk, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one teaspoon vanilla, one and one-half squares chocolate, also one-quarter cup sugar. Melt chocolate, add sugar and one-half cupful of boiling water. Stir until perfectly smooth, adding the other ingredients just before taking from fire. Cook one-half hour in a double boiler.

Lettuce Salad

Shred fresh, crisp lettuce and place on individual plates; put on top slices of hard-boiled eggs or slices of ripe tomatoes. Serve dressing in a pitcher or a fancy glass dish, using a wooden or china spoon, as silver should never be used in anything containing vinegar.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

EXERCISE—If you want to find out how many muscles you do not exercise just try some very unusual stunts. Do some work that you have not done for a long time. When you get through being sore and stiff after that job try another kind. You will realize that when the physiologist tells you that there are in the neighborhood of 500 different muscles in the human body he knows whereof he speaks.

As a rule certain experiences stand out in our memory and we learn through them how to secure ourselves against suffering in the future. If we are teachers and have a desire to help others we give them the benefit of our experience. I well remember a day's work in the hay field many years ago. It was after two years of office work with but little opportunity for any physical exercise. I had only a boy to help me but that hay must be saved, and I pitched on and then off the wagon, ten fair sized loads, no more than I had often done before, but I was different, not the work. The cool evening air was very gratifying, and to get still better results I took a swim in the river near by. The next morning it would not have been difficult to convince me that there were at least a thousand muscles and that each one could ache just a little worse than the other.

Another experience taught me that when tired keep warm, and that if very tired keep very warm. At a time when a walk of over 10 or 15 miles per day was unusual I was forced to walk 46 miles over the western prairies and during the last 16 miles it rained enough to wet through my clothing. Just as the sun was going down I came to a "dugout." There were 16 people housed there but they took me in for the night as there was no other habitation near. As the room was crowded I had to sit near the cook stove, and it was hot. I also had to sleep near it, and I perspired freely during the night. The next morning I felt quite fresh and vigorous, and there were but few sore spots and they quickly disappeared.

A chemical examination of the perspiration thrown off under such circumstances would show a vastly different material from that which is thrown off in a Turkish or other heat bath. The sweat that is thrown off by violent exercise carries away vast quantities of impurities and waste matter, leaving the tissues in a fine, clean condition, while that which is poured out of the pores in order to keep the skin moist, while the body rests quietly under extreme heat, is almost neutral, and carries but little waste matter out of the system. The weight of the body of a very fat man is reduced to be sure by the sweating process but unless there is heart trouble which prohibits active exercise, it's not a good way to reduce, as it leaves the impurities in the system, and causes the mouth to demand water, cold water, and in large quantities. Exercise of a vigorous kind and a diet of the right sort will purify the body and restore it to a normal condition. I will be glad to give specific directions for a rational diet for reducing or adding flesh to those who suffer from obesity or leanness.

ONE THING AT A TIME.

When many duties press and crowd for attention, our only safety lies in doing one thing at a time. When we have little to do, perhaps we may risk trying to do two or three things at once. But time and power are usually wasted by that attempt. If today promises to be the most crowded day of your life, then you cannot afford to throw away a moment of it. The only way to be sure of making every moment count is to give your undivided attention to a single duty at that moment. When that duty is disposed of, take up another; and one by one the clamouring crowd of tasks will have been put successfully behind you.

Mistress—"I see that another soldier has called for you, Mary. I thought you had only one sweetheart? Cook—"Oh, no, mum; two. You see, one's a regular and the other's a reserve."

Deserts For Hot Weather

All sorts of water ices are particularly refreshing and tempting when warm weather arrives. Various fruit juices from last year's supply of canned fruit can be used to flavour the ices, with a little lemon juice to give piquancy if the fruit flavour is very sweet. The plain water ice consists of the fruit simply frozen. To make a sherbet add the beaten whites of two or three eggs for each quart of juice when it almost frozen, or a tablespoon of gelatin softened in a little cold water and added before the juice is frozen.

For a change you can grate bitter chocolate into vanilla ice cream mixture just before freezing. The flavour of chocolate will be there but the colour of chocolate will not. Instead the result will be a white ice cream dotted with brown. Grape juice sherbert is delicious. Add the juice of two lemons to each quart of grape juice, and add more sugar if necessary, then add dissolved gelatin and freeze — one tablespoon of gelatin for a quart of grape juice.

Tarts at this time of year are far more appetizing than pie. Make either a big crust of rich pie paste, baked crisp and golden brown, or else individual ones in muffin of patty cake tins. Cool the crusts, fill them and serve. They can be filled with chocolate blanc mange and topped with whipped cream, or filled with lemon filling, thickened in a double boiler and topped with meringue. They can be filled with canned peaches drained of juice and served with whipped cream or they can be filled with fresh berries.

Custards and floating islands, especially at this time of year can be daintily made and daintily served. Three tablespoons of smooth boiled custard chilled thoroughly and served in a thin, long stemmed glass with a big tablespoon of beaten egg white, topped with a single candied cherry, is far more appetizing than the same desserts served more generously without the cherry in big china saucers.

Value of Raw Potato.

To clean carpets grate a raw potato and rub over the surface of the carpet and finish off with a clean cloth wrung out in warm water.

To clean dresses grate two raw potatoes into a pint of cold water, strain through a sieve, add another pint of water and let it settle. Dip a sponge into the water and rub the soiled garment carefully, afterward rinsing with clear water.

To clarify drippings slice a raw potato into the fat while rendering. It will absorb all impurities.

To make light bread mash a boiled potato and add the flour.

For corned beef hash chop a raw potato and add to the meat.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

Choice Recipes

CORN MEAL MUFFINS

One cup of cornmeal, cup of wheat flour, ½ cup of sugar, 1 egg, piece of butter the size of an egg, warm butter to soften it, 1 cup of sour milk, in which dissolve 1 level teaspoon of soda, add a little salt and beat briskly a few minutes. Bake in gem pans about 20 minutes.

BEEF LOAF.

Two and a half pounds fresh beef, 2½ lbs. pork, boil together till tender. Teaspoon salt, butter size of a walnut, pint of cracker crumbs. Chop meat fine, mix with crackers. Add pint of hot water, season with sage and pepper and put all together in a square tin. Press hard, and it is delicious.

STRAWBERRY SHERBET

Mash 1 quart of strawberries to a pulp, add 3 pints of cold water, 2 tablespoons of lemon juice and 1 tablespoon of orange flower water; let stand for three or four hours and squeeze through a jelly bag. Add 2 cups of granulated sugar, stir until dissolved, strain again, pack in ice, and salt and freeze.

CALF'S LIVER.

Soak the liver 10 minutes in boiling water, drain, remove the all the skin and veins, and fry until perfectly done, in salt pork or bacon fat. Season with salt and serve very hot with a garnish of the fried salt pork or bacon cut in strips.

PICKLED LAMBS' TONGUES.

These make a handsome resource for a tea or luncheon. If they can be bought, as they can almost everywhere, it does not pay to pickle them at home. If the prepared ones are not readily accessible, boil the fresh tongues in salted water, with juice of a lemon, till tender. Pickle them in hot spiced vinegar.

IRISH STEW.

Cut two pounds of lean mutton into small pieces and brown in a frying pan in which have been placed one tablespoonful of butter and one of drippings or suet; add one medium sized onion, sliced very thin, and brown. Place this mixture after it is browned, in a kettle, and add six cups of boiling water, seasoning with one teaspoon of salt. Cover and shimmer for half an hour; then add one half cup of thinly sliced celery, one cup of sliced turnips, and one half cup of sliced carrots. Cook for 15 minutes longer; then add two cups of sliced potatoes, one tablespoonful of minced parsley, and a sprinkling of thyme, and cook until all the vegetables are tender. Skim out the meat and vegetables; thicken the liquid with four tablespoons of butter, which has been melted and blended with four tablespoons of flour; cook for five minutes; then add the meat and vegetables and serve.

DATE OATMEAL COOKIES

Two cupfuls of oatmeal, two cupfuls of flour, one cupful of butter, one cupful of brown sugar, one-half cupful of sour milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one pound of dates, one cupful of granulated sugar and one-half cupful of water.

Boil the dates, sugar and cold water until they form a thick paste. Set away to cool. Mix the other ingredients and roll out thin. Cut the cookies, spread the date paste on one half the cookies and lay the rest of the cookies on the filling. Press firmly together, lay on buttered tins and bake in a hot oven.

SUET PUDDING

One cup finely chopped suet, one cup molasses, one cup milk, three cups flour, one teaspoon soda, 1½ teaspoons salt, one-half teaspoon ginger, one-half teaspoon cloves, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon cinnamon. Mix and sift the dry ingredients. Add molasses and milk to suet. Combine mixture. Turn into buttered mold and cover. Steam three hours. Serve with sauce.

SPLENDID APPLESAUCE CAKE.

One cup of brown sugar, half cup butter, one cup raisins, 1 1-2 cup hot apple sauce, one teaspoon cinnamon, half nutmeg, 2 1-2 cups flour, one teaspoonful soda dissolved in the hot apple sauce. Bake in a loaf in a moderate oven one hour.

NUT AND DATE LOAFS.

Four cups flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one cup brown sugar, two cups of sweet milk, one egg beaten. Mix flour, salt, sugar, add one cup of chopped walnuts, two cups dates, stir in milk and egg. Be sure not to have too stiff. Grease the pans well. This makes two loaves; let rise one hour, and bake one hour. For afternoon

LOBSTER SALAD.

Buy live lobster, boil rapidly in boiling salted water for about twenty minutes. If boiled too long it will be tough. When cold split the body lengthwise, crack the claws and take off the head. Pick out all the meat. Save the coral. Cut up a head of lettuce, place on a dish and lay on the lobster meat, cut in shreds. Place coral around edge of meat. Pour a mayonnaise dressing over lobster just before serving and garnish with head of lobster, claws, or whatever part of shell appeals to you most or decora-

PARSNIP TIMBALE.

Mash four boiled parsnips and add half a cup of milk, salt and pepper to taste, a teaspoonful onion juice and two unbeaten eggs. Mix well and press into small molds. Steam until firm and turn out on a platter or on plates and serve with white sauce.

Chicken Jelly.

One fowl, about 4 1-2 pounds.

One cupful diced ham or tongue.

One box gelatine, 1 cupful cold water.

One onion, carrot, celery seed, juice of 1-2 lemon.

Salt, pepper, 1 bay leaf, parsley.

Boil fowl until tender in enough water to barely cover, and to which has been added onion, carrot, bay leaf, salt, pepper, celery seed, and a sprig of parsley. When cooked, cut chicken into cubes. Soak gelatine in the cold water, add lemon juice. Strain stock into a bowl. Measure one quart. Bring to boiling point, add gelatine, stir until dissolved, season more, if necessary. Almost fill a mold with meat and enough hot liquid to fill. At serving time, turn out, garnish with cress and Jellied Strawberries.

Take one ounce of gelatin, one-half pint of cold water, one quart of strawberries, one cup of powdered sugar, one-half pint of sweet cream. Soak the gelatin in cold water until soft. Then place on the back of the stove to dissolve. Press the berries through a sieve. Add the sugar and when the gelatin is clear and cold stir that in also. Whip the cream to a froth and add the gelatin and berries. Line a mould with split lady fingers, pour in the mixture. Set on ice and serve when firm and ice cold.

EXTRA NICE SPONGE CAKE.

Beat the yolks of four eggs, add 1 cup of sugar gradually, add 3 tablespoons of cold water and 1 teaspoon of lemon. Put ½ tablespoon of corn starch into cup, and fill it with flour. Add 1½ teaspoons baking powder, and ½ salt. Beat well, then fold in the beaten whites of 4 eggs. A nice fine grained cake. Frost.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1040, Montreal, Can.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

INFANT'S SET OF LONG CLOTHES.

By Anabel Worthington.

The garments which the newly arrived is gathered at the neck in front and two little one requires are pretty much the petticoats, both of which are plain and one more ample than the other. There is a little gown which opens in front, a kimona and a sacque. This, with cape coat and cap, gives us the entire outfit of a baby.

Dresses and slips are made of nainsook, cambric or batiste, the petticoat also, and, of course, there is a petticoat of flannel also. The kimono may be of cashmere, flannel or challie and the coat of cashmere or other woollen material with the cap of the same or of silk, with silk lining.

The pattern, No. 7,272, is cut in one size only. To make the garments will require for dress No. 1, 1¾ yards of material 36 or more inches wide with ¾ yard of edging; for petticoat No. 2 or 3, 1⅝ yards of material 27 or 36 inches wide with 2⅝ yards of wide edging and 2¼ yards of narrow; for cap, No. 4, ⅝ yard of material 18 or more inches wide, with ⅝ yard of ribbon for ties; for coat, No. 5, 1⅝ yards of 44 inch material; for gown, No. 6, or kimono, No. 7, 1½ yards of 36 inch material and 4⅝ yards of ribbon for binding; for sacque, No. 8, ⅝ yard of 36 inch material and ⅝ yard of ribbon.

THE AUSTRIAN CAVALRY ENTERS LUBLIN

Warsaw Is Evacuated By The Russians

ONLY A REAR-GUARD FORCE LEFT IN WARSAW TO MEET INVADERS

Retreat of Main Body of Russian Troops---Have Successfully Withdrawn to a New Line of Defence East of the Polish Capital---Vienna Announces That Lublin Has Been Entered by the Austrian Cavalry.

THE REARGUARD WILL BE CAPTURED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 31.—Warsaw has been evacuated. While no official announcement of this expected move has yet been made by the War Office, it was admitted that practically all Russian subjects have gone, and that the Russian soldiers remaining and whose capture is expected, are merely a rear-guard force.

So thorough have been the preparations for the evacuation of Warsaw that the Germans will find scant booty when they enter the city. The Grand Duke Nicholas, having in mind the city's historic edifices, ordered that there be no destruction except where made necessary by military strategy. Every available bit of metal which might aid the Germans has been taken from the city.

All farmers in the section near the city destroyed their growing crops, and the Grand Duke has arranged for the payment of an indemnity for this sacrifice.

The actual withdrawal of supplies and of residents of the city began nearly two weeks ago. The Russian general staff, ordering a secret withdrawal, had its plans mapped out in such detail that residents of certain sections of the city were given specially assigned routes of travel. Every man in the city had a designated route of escape.

Germany will take a mere shell of city in Warsaw.

VIENNA, via Amsterdam, July 31.—Lublin has fallen before the Austrian forces.

"The Austrian cavalry entered Lublin Friday evening," said the War Office state issued here to-day.

LONDON, July 31.—An underwriters' despatch received here to-day announced the sinking by a German submarine of the Leyland liner Iberian. The crew was reported saved.

The Iberian was a steel steamer of 5,223 tons.

Five victims were killed by shell fire when the German submarine gave the first warning of her approach.

The crew finally took to the boats. The undersea boat then torpedoed the vessel, sinking her almost at once.

The sixty-two survivors, bearing the bodies of two of the five dead, were later picked up and safely landed.

The Iberian sailed from Liverpool for Boston on July 29, carrying nearly one thousand tons of cargo, the exact nature of which has not been disclosed.

The vessel has been carrying horses from America to England, and a number of those on board were hostlers and caretakers, a few being Americans.

Five members of the crew of the Iberian were killed. The remainder of the crew was picked up by a trawler.

Four of the five killed when the steamer Iberian was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine are said to have been Americans.

LIVERPOOL, July 31.—The Cunard liner Orduna arrived to-day after a safe passage through the war zone.

LONDON, Eng., July 31. — There is every indication to-day that the Russian evacuation of Poland practically has been completed.

The main armies of the Grand Duke are already established at Brest-Litovisk and along the Grodno Kovno line where they have been strongly entrenched for weeks.

PETROGRAD, July 31.—Another Russian raid on the Turkish shipping in the Black Sea was announced officially to-day. Russian torpedo boats shelled Shile, near Bosphorus, 34 miles northwest of Constantinople, and sank a large collier and forty-seven sailing ships.

PARIS, July 31.—An air raid on Nancy was announced in a brief official statement this afternoon. The details of the damage were not disclosed. One of the attacking German taubes was brought down by the fire of the anti-aircraft guns, but the airmen who forced a landing between the French and German lines, escaped.

PONT A MOUSSON, France, July 31.—A German shell fell into the mess room of the field hospital of the American Ambulance of Paris while the staff was at dinner to-day, going through the roof to the cellar. A French orderly was killed and one American slightly scratched by a fragment of shell.

AN ATTACK WITH FLAME PROJECTILES.

LONDON, July 31.—The following official statement was given out by the British War Office Friday night:

"This (Friday) morning the enemy began a bombardment of our trenches north and south of Hooge (east of Ypres, Belgium), and followed this by an attack with flame projectors, delivered chiefly against the trenches recently captured by us at Hooge. By this means the enemy succeeded in penetrating our first line trenches on a front of about 500 yards. The fighting is still in progress."

BALKANS ARE STILL COY—Map shows the boundaries of the Balkan States and their relation to the Dardanelles. Bulgaria is said to have received a territorial concession from Turkey, but Bulgaria does not touch Austria. Roumania is standing firm and not allowing munitions transit. Greece is anxious lest the other two get an advantage.

ONE MEDICAL EXAMINATION TO BE SUFFICIENT

Militia Council Decide That Henceforth the Test Made by Physician at the Place of Recruiting Will Be Final

OTHER CHANGES MADE

OTTAWA, Ont., July 30.—An important relaxation in the regulation regarding the qualification of recruits offering for service in Canada has been agreed upon by the Militia Council as follows:

First—A change in the height requirements from 5 feet 4 for infantry to 5 feet 2, and from 5 feet 6 for artillery to 5 feet 4.

Second—A relaxation of the regulation regarding chest measurement the minimum to be 33 inches. For instance a young man in otherwise fit condition may naturally be expected to increase his chest measurement with outdoor life and exercise, while with an older man this is not so likely.

Third—In the future there will only be one medical examination and that at the place of recruiting.

Fourth — Men suffering from bad teeth if otherwise fit medically, will have their teeth fixed or be supplied with new sets. The dental corps will do this work at the expense of the Government.

Fifth — Slight physical defects which may be removed by minor operation, will not debar a man from enlistment. In such cases the men so suffering will be turned over to the Army Medical Service for treatment.

It is estimated that in the past more than 15,000 men failed to secure a place in the forces because of regulations which have now been relaxed.

Tenders Were Not Accepted

Short Term Debentures Will Remain in Force For Another Year

Out of fourteen tenders that were submitted in connection with the city's request for bids on seventy-three thousand dollars' worth of short term debentures, none were accepted by the Finance Committee. It was decided to pay the interest on the short term sewer and paving debentures issued last year, as it becomes due and to borrow a special sum from the special outfall sewer account with which to pay the interest.

STATE AND THE UNION ARE NOW AT VARIANCE

Federal Officials and State Authorities May Clash in Investigation Over the Disaster to the Eastland

INDICTMENT LIKELY

Special Wire to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, July 31.—State's Attorney Hoyne intimated at noon to-day that a number of indictments charging manslaughter and criminal carelessness might be returned before the close of the day against persons held responsible for the steamer Eastland disaster in which more than a thousand lives were lost.

It was said that several Federal officials might be included in the list of those indicted, despite the legal question raised concerning the jurisdiction of the State over Federal officers. The July State grand jury must adjourn before midnight tomororw, under the law, and the State's attorney is anxious to have it conclude its investigation of the Eastland horror to-day, if possible.

The special Federal grand jury empanelled by Judge Landis to investigate the Eastland began the examination of witnesses.

Listed Badly at Dock.

Adam J. Weckler, city harbour master, the first witness called by the Federal grand jury, is said to have repeated the story he told at the coroner's inquest when he said the boat was overloaded. Weckler saw the Eastland overturn, and a few minutes before he had refused to let the boat leave the dock until she was evenly balanced. He shouted to the captain that the vessel was listing badly.

The inquiry being made by Secretary of Commerce Redfield was resumed with the examination of several witnesses during the morning session.

Work of raising the Eastland progressed slowly to-day. The big vessel had been encircled with heavy cables. Large pontoons were being forced under the bow and stern. It will take a week or more to place the vessel on its keel, according to those in charge of the work.

Launches dragged the river to-day and ten divers continued their search for bodies of victims. The body of a woman was taken from a cabin of the boat early in the day. This morning's figures on the loss of life in the Eastland disaster showed the identified dead 833,, unidentified dead 2, Western Electric Co., list of missing, 236. Total 1,071.

Seizing The Boat.

U S. Marshal Bradley appeared at the Eastland and announced that he had been ordered by Federal Judge Landis to seize the boat. He displayed a writ of attachment.

He said that he would not interfere with the work of raising the boat.

The reason for the seizure of the Eastland under a Federal writ of attachment, it was explained by Government officials, was to prevent any person from tampering with the ballast tanks, their valves or other mechanism, until authorised Government agents have examined them.

Federal Judge Landis late to-day issued an order stating that any person that attempted to discuss the Eastland case with any person called before the federal grand jury would be held in contempt of the Federal Court.

Unless State's Attorney Hoyne decides to defy the Landis order he will be compelled to abandon the investigation of Eastland disaster by a State grand jury as all of the State's witnesses have been called before the Federal grand jury.

CLAIMS RUSSIANS ARE EVACUATING THE WHOLE LINE

A Berlin Official Statement Says Austro-Germans Have Crossed the Vistula and Many Prisoners Were Taken.

REACH THE RAILWAY

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, July 30, via London, 7:15 p.m.—The Germany army headquarters staff to-day issued an official statement in which it was declared that the Austro-Germans had crossed the Vistula River at several points ranging from 30 to 45 miles south of Warsaw. They also claimed to have reached the railway between Lublin and Cholm, and that the Russians had evacuated their positions along the entire line except to the north of Guibechow.

"In the south-eastern war theatre: Troops of the army of Gen. Von Woyrsch early in the morning of July 28 forced a crossing of the Vistula River at several points between the confluence of the Pilica with the Vistula and Kozienice (65 miles northwest of Sandomierz).

(The confluence of the Pilica is about 30 miles south of Warsaw, while Kozienice is about 5 miles from Ivangorod and about 45 miles from Warsaw.)

"Fighting on the east bank is proceeding. Up to the present 800 prisoners and five machine guns have been captured in these operations.

"Yesterday the Austro-German troops under Field Marshal Von Mackensen again resumed the offensive. West of the Vieprz German troops broke through the Russian positions. In the evening we reached the line of Piaski, Biskupice, and the railway running east from those points. We took many thousand prisoners and captured three cannon.

Piaski is a few miles south-west of the railway while Biskupice is on the railway between Lublin to Cholm.

Evacuate Entire Line.

"This success in the advance of the Austro-German troops to the east of the Vistula and the advance of the Prussian guard to Krupe, north-east of Krasnostav, and of other German troops to the district of Wojslawice, has shaken the Russian front between the Vislula and the Bug.

"This morning the Russians evacuated their positions along the entire line and now are only resisting to the north of Grubechow."

"In the western theatre: Near Perthes, in the Champagne region, both sides exploded mines. Ours destroyed a French flanking trench north-west of Perthes.

"In the forest of Le Pretre a French attack collapsed before our infantry and artillery fire when in front of our trenches.

"In the Vosges yesterday afternoon the enemy again attacked our line at Lingekopf. Hand-to-hand fighting for possession of this position has not yet come to a conclusion.

"Two English airmen were obliged to descend on the water near the coast and were captured.

"In the eastern theatre the situation is unchanged."

Plans Outlined For Recruiting Campaign

Speakers' Patriotic League Have Every Provision Made for the Big Call to Peterboro Men Eligible for Military Service — Manufacturers Hold Men's Positions

MEETING LAST NIGHT

As a preliminary to the recruiting campaign which opens in Peterborough on Wednesday, August 4th, last night's meeting in the Council Chamber of the citizens who are promoting it was strikingly significant of the seriousness of the situation that has necessitated this movement.

This was a meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Speakers' Patriotic League, organized for the purpose of securing recruits through the medium of addresses by prominent Canadians at patriotic mass meetings. While the ultimate object of the approaching campaign is to stimulate enlistment, the immediate end is to impress upon the men of military age, and upon parents, the Empire's dependence upon its manhood to defeat the designs of Germany. In the words of Major S. T. Medd there is every confidence that Canadians will rise to their duty to their country when they are brought to a complete realization of the present need of more men to make up the new battalions. Major Medd stated that he had seen the earnestness which the recruits have shown in their training, and he was confident that many others would enlist when they understand that they, too, are needed.

Wednesday will be the first day of the second year of Britain's participation in this war. She cast the die for democracy, and twelve months of the conflict, in which have been laid bare the might of Germany and the ideals she holds, have failed to thoroughly arouse the public to their concern in the struggle. This is the purpose of the recruiting campaign, to emphasize British liberty, to point out the danger that threatens it, and, that done, it is confidently expected that young Canadians will maintain the enlistment already recorded.

The Council Chamber was crowded with a representative gathering last night Mr. R. B. Rogers presided, and Mr. R. E. Layfield filled the duties of secretary.

Mr. Layfield's Report.

Mr. Rogers gave a stirring address on the purpose of the recruiting campaign. Mr. Layfield presented a most satisfactory statement of the preparations which have been completed already. The campaign will be inaugurated by the big mass meeting on Wednesday night, at which the following speakers will be heard:

Sir George E. Foster.
Capt. H. A. Stethem.
Prof. (Trooper) L. W. Molloy.
Colonel Hemming.
Judge Huycke.
Daniel O'Connell.

On the suggestion of Mr. F. R. Yokome it was decided to ask Lieutenant Grahame, who returned from the front this week to be present and address the meeting.

Britain Has Confidence That Her Superiority, With Her Allies, Over Germany Makes Her Exhaustion Impossible and Germany's Certain.

THE WEEK'S COMMENT

Special to The Examiner:

(Copyright, 1915, Central News, by T. P. O'Connor.)

LONDON, July 29.—The ending of the parliamentary session was received with a feeling of general relief. For weeks the Harmsworth press had carried on a violent campaign to compel the Ministry to defer the close and shorten the vacation time. This campaign was backed by small groups of irresponsible, super-critical members; but when the time came for testing the strength of the malcontents there was an unchallenged division.

There is general satisfaction at this as one of the many symptoms that the campaign of pessimism has received a severe blow. This disposition to declare that the Ministry, especially Mr. Asquith, can never do anything right, extends to the fierce ignorant campaign on the cotton question. All kinds of ridiculous exag-

A PROVINCIAL-WIDE RECRUITING RALLY TO BE HELD ON AUGUST 4TH

TORONTO, July 30.—August 4th will witness what will be practically a Province-wide recruiting rally under the direction of the citizens recruiting leagues of the various municipalities. Lieut. C. N. Cochrane, who has charge of the arrangements, stated to-day that while plans are still vague the municipalities with which he has got in touch are responding eagerly, and the results should be very satisfactory. The idea is to hold public meetings to be addressed by prominent men and returned soldiers, and with the aid of local bands to inaugurate an extraordinary recruiting period of about ten days' duration.

In Toronto public concerts will be given by massed bands and other demonstrations "confirming," as Lt. Cochrane states, the "inflexible determination of the people of Toronto to carry on the war to the finish."

A monster demonstration will be held in Peterborough at which Sir George Foster will deliver a patriotic address. The meeting to be held at North Bay will mark the initiation of a recruiting campaign where facilities for such have hitherto been lacking. It is altogether likely that President Falconer, of the University of Toronto, who is now in Muskoka, will deliver a recruiting address. Meaford, Stratford and Oshawa have expressed eagerness to adopt the suggestion, and it is expected that within the next few days most of the municipalities will accede to the proposal.

"From now on," says Lieut. Cochrane, "every man will be needed and expected." This fact has been repeatedly emphasized by Colonel Logie, notably at a recent meeting of the Military Institute. There yet seems to be an unwillingness on the part of men holding good positions to enlist. This condition, however, is not provincial in its scope. For instance one company in London was composed of 250 men, every one of whom gave up a good position. The time has come for that sort of thing, and unless it is done nothing satisfactory can be accomplished.

LET EVERYBODY HELP.

(London Daily Telegraph.)

Men and women alike, all are eager to help. The whole energies of the women's movement have been thrown heartily into the great national movement, which is supreme over all and which absorbs all. The country hums with new life and activity. There are some who cannot see because they are blind. There are others who will not see, "and hooting at the glorious sun in heaven, cry out, 'Where is it?'" But the country will turn aside in disdain from their doubts and quibbles and apprehensions, well knowing that they who work the hardest have the surest faith.

EASTLAND HORROR.

(Chicago Tribune.)

What comment can be made upon the Eastland? What word or what hundreds of words could reveal the sadness of this city and the shame of government process which works so perfectly and with such certainty to expose people to death? The Iroquois theatre had to burn to make theatres safe in this city. The lake steamboat service may be safer hereafter. A boat crowded with excursionists had to topple over at its dock before precautions would be made unremitting and unescapable, but, with that catastrophe afforded, in the manner ordained and inevitable, our habit of activity after the fact will be followed up sternly. We count the dead and then act. Unless we stand on coffins we cannot see a danger which is so close it can be touched daily.

A VALUABLE AGITATOR.

One of the cleverest things Mr. Lloyd George ever did was the sending of Ben Tillett to the front in France to see for himself the need of munitions, and then to set him at work among the artisans under his influence. When in France, Tillett chatted with some of the men who had followed him in former strikes, but who are now in khaki, and studied the situation with his own eyes. He talked with officers who told him that the British army was handicapped because the workmen of England were hanging back and not supplying a constant stream of shells. He came back saying: "I've learned that there is another meaning to the word 'strike' now."

And so now he is inveighing against a foreign foe, and turning all his powers as a popular orator in a new direction. "I'm preaching bloody murder," he said the other day to a London multitude. "We've got to strike, and we've got to strike now. I want every ounce of British nerve, every ounce of British energy and every ounce of British gold to get behind and push. . . . We want ammunition shells; we want gas; we want every hellish death-dealing device known to man; we want the fighting spirit. We're going to strike against the Germans. If we don't strike now, and strike hard, there is no use striking. The capitalists must strike with us. If we don't crush the Germans to-morrow, there'll be no capitalists. Every man who can't get into khaki can get into the workshops. We are fighting Prussianism; something that has been preparing to murder civilization for forty years. Our fight must not be any kid glove business. We've got to murder back, and murder back as hard as we can. It must be slaughter for civilization's sake. Get busy, and let's slaughter."

Naturally he has a fling at the capitalists, and perhaps this one is justified. "British capitalists," he says, "have got to get into the game. They've got to get rid of the idea that war is being waged to give them profits. . . . The workmen must be assured that while they are sweating and labouring and dying for their country, they are not doing it to fill rich men's pockets. The Government must control the price of munitions and food, if the capitalists will not. The capitalists must be content to make less money, and do more, and be controlled by the Government, and be content to be controlled."

To all this, every reasonable man will say amen. Tillett is honest, even when astray. In what he is doing now, he is not astray. — Hamilton Herald.

GREAT BRITAIN BECOMES GREATER.

(F. W. Whitridge in Scribner's.)

Great Britain has become Greater Britain indeed. Sikhs and Gourkhas are fighting in Flanders; New Zealanders and Australians are fighting Germanised Turks in Egypt. Canadians have won imperishable renown in Belgium; Dutchmen under English colours are fighting Germans in South Africa; and the East and West are again fighting on the plains of Troy. The empire is carrying on seven wars at once; on the continent, in the Dardanelles, in the Persian Gulf, in Egypt, in East Africa, in West Africa, and in the Cameroons.

The great financial and economic measures to protect the ordinary life of the nation and to enable England to assist her allies have been perfectly successful, and the daily life of the people seems hardly affected. The streets in the city about the Bank and the Exchange look as they used to look on a half-holiday. The smart young men have disappeared except a few in bandages. One notices that a good deal of French is spoken, and Belgian uniforms are worn in the streets—and that is all.

On the other hand, the British navy has cleared the seas, and has kept open all the trade routes. It has convoyed armies from the ends of the earth, and the German flag is no longer afloat, except under its navy which, after all the swagger about "The Day," is still skulking at Kiel, though it is hardly to be imagined that it will not some day, in conjunction with the Zeppelins and submarines, make for the very shame, great adventure of a raid on England.

What the Kaiser called "the contemptible little army" of Sir John French, was first sent over to Flanders, and was as nearly as possible destroyed, but it was perfectly equipped, its fighting was a revelation, and the whole moral effect of its presence was worth twice its number. To-day Britain has about 650,000 men in the field abroad, exclusive of the Indian and colonial contingents, all of whom with all their equipment, were transported across the channel with the loss of but one vessel, and, I believe only a dozen lives, and there are upward of 2,000,000 men still in training at home.

THE STONE WALL OF FRANCE.

Coolly, steadily, quietly, France fights, says the Ottawa Journal. A new idea of the nobility of the French national character grows in the world. The whole of her young manhood have gone into battle without fuss, and much of her old; the whole of the brains of the nation have worked unitedly behind the front since the start. Undoubtedly prior to the war a conception somewhat popular outside of France was that the French were a frothy sort of people, though close-fisted; a rather frivolous, superficial irreverent and materialistic lot. There has been an eye-opening. Never in the history of the world has the fiery furnace of war tested a national metal to finer truer gold. Never has greater courage or greater generosity been shown in an hour of national trial; never greater common sense, never less noise. France has poured out blood and money without stint and without talk. In piping times of peace a voluble democracy, the French people have in the war shown themselves a nation of Ironsides, grim, taciturn, unfaltering, fierce.

To quote a fine tribute by the New York Times, the losses of France have been more frightful than those of other countries, but no groan escapes her. She entered the struggle to give all she had to it, and clearly not a murmur will escape her if all is taken. And this spirit animates not her governors alone, but the unknown men and women who are France, down to the least. She is unrecognizable by her portraits. They were painted by men who had 1870 in mind, and 1870 is dead; 1870, boastful, degenerate, vain, and careless. Or they had 1873 in mind; determined enough, but passionate, headlong, empirical, and visionary; and 1793 is dead. Long after 1870 they looked back at the story of the nineteenth century, with its frequent revolutions and its kaleidoscope of feds, and predicted the failure of the Third Republic, because an incurably restless, frivolous man, easily tired of every new fad he has taken up, will surely tire of the next one; it is his character. But a nation is not a man, and the headlong visionaries of 1793 and the dilettane cynics of 1870, who lived in a time when faith and works were dead, have passed away. The Third Republic has lasted nearly half a century, and grown stronger year by year; and under it there has grown up a great new people, for a new people can grow up in an old land. The drunken France of the nineteenth century is gone for good, and there rises where it lived and died

"A people, sane and great,
Forged in strong fires, by equal war made one."

A WORD FOR SOME WOMEN.

She will be a sorry woman in the future who has no man now fighting for her sake in the great war of the most worthy, says the Toronto World.

What the women of Canada have contributed to the war no one in this generation can estimate. Mothers, sisters, wives, sweethearts, friends, they have all been an inspiration and a force in building up the great army which is crossing the ocean to take its place in the ranks of righteousness, justice, truth and peace.

There are women whose children will despise them for the craven fathers they shall have given them, choosing those who had not the strength, the purpose, nor the courage to take sides and give their deeds in the cause of civilization.

Some women have not the imagination to appreciate what the war means. The little babies with their dead waxen fingers, who were strewn over the ocean by the kaiser's submarine from the Lusitania, make no appeal to them. The violated maidens of Belgium mean nothing to these sheltered women who live afar from the conflict and think that no German can approach their homes. The slaughtered mothers and wives of Serbia, and the ravaged nuns of Flanders cause their selfishness no qualms. They are content to sit at home safely and keep their men with them to wait upon their needs.

Nearly a million wives in Great Britain have parted with their husbands and know not if they shall ever see them again. But they know that they have gone in the way that British men must always go when the high call of duty comes and the banners of freedom are flung upon the breeze. Many of these women are poor and had nothing else to give the world or humanity or the cause of civilization but their husbands, and some of the fortunate women of Canada have said that it was easy for them to do so, for they had nothing else to do. They of their penury have cast in all the living they had. What will be said of the women who, of their abundance, cast in nothing?

It makes the heart throb to read of some of the mothers and wives who have sent their sons and husbands to the front. But what are we to think of the women who refuse to allow the heroic in their men folk to show itself, and who prefer to see them trooping about the streets, enjoying their lives at the expense of their fellows? What shall the mother say to her son when he comes to her after the war and tells her he is ashamed to live because he was counted afraid to die, when it was she who put the brand of the coward on his forehead?

These may seem hard things to say, but we are living in stern times, and it may be before long that there will be no choice about staying or going, and those who stayed must go whether they will or not, and without regard to what the women say. It will be well for the men who go, but it will be bitter for their womenkind to see them marching in the rear ranks.

There is nothing that men have been so proud of in the war as the way the best women have encouraged and inspired their men to take their places in the inevitable army. Would it not be a splendid nation where all the women had that spirit? would that we might say it of Canada.

ANOTHER KIND OF WAR.

The critics of England will observe that she supports her claim to withhold cotton and beef from Germany with an argument, an appeal to reason. She does not murder American citizens and then evade the issue; there is no squeal and no yellow streak, no foul fighting—hitting below the belt, or crowding to the ropes. England and America have had their quarrels, but they are not going to wrangle with each other at this time. We are not going to fight the war of the revolution or the war of 1812. This is the war of 1915.—Brooklyn Eagle.

AN ADVANTAGE NAPOLEON LACKED.

(Review of Reviews.)

To-day the coalition against Germany, Austria and Turkey is far more colossal than that which overthrew Bonaparte. Sea power, the ammunition factories and the supplies of neutral nations added to those of British and French colonies, the resources of Africa, Asia, Australia and the Americas, the wealth in money and of men at the command of Paris, Petrograd and London, give to the foes of the Teutonic empires an advantage which Napoleon's conquerors lacked.

This Is Paradoxical.

The apparent paradox that in severely cold weather fruit stored in ice chilled refrigerator cars will not freeze while fruit in cars in which there is no ice freezes is explained by Dr. J. D. Bonnar in the Scientific American as being due to the release of latent heat when the vapor in the air freezes on coming into contact with the ice.

IS there any way to stop this flight? How many communities are making an effort to check this stampede of money THAT FLIES OUT of their home town. What is OUR community doing? What would all this money mean to YOU and ME, if it were spent with our own business men? The picture is no DREAM or FANCY. The artist has simply brought HOME to us the hard facts. Let us face them as they are. The group of men with rifles provides the right ACTION for US. Let us organise to stop this flight. Let each one of us REMEMBER: That HOME values increase in proportion as we spend our money at HOME. That HOME values disappear with every dollar sent away.

Tells Graphic Tale Of Rheims Battle Charge

PHILADELPHIA, July 30. — A thrilling story of a charge against a German masked battery at Rheims was told by Robert F. Meyer, a former United States soldier, who was recently discharged from the English army.

Of the division of 40,000 men to which Meyer was attached only 13,000 returned from the front. The remainder were either killed, wounded or taken prisoner. Meyer described conditions on the battlefield as "terrific and hellish."

"It is a continuous rain of steel," he said. "The machine guns belch out 700 shots a minute and regiments melt away before them like snow before the sun."

Meyer was discharged a year ago last March from the Twenty-fifth Coast Artillery, which is stationed at Fort Piley, Cal. He enlisted in the English army at Liverpool, September 10, 1914. His home is in Chicago, and he came to this city to look for work.

"We arrived at Rheims," said Meyer, "on September 18, 1914. For a few days riflemen from a German outpost had been pestering us. The commanding officer picked a detachment of 250 men, including myself, and told us to take the outpost. Instead of an outpost, however, it proved to be a masked battery behind a hedge.

"We advanced to within 2,000 yards of the hedge, and then the Germans turned the fire of forty machine guns on us. We returned the fire and advanced to within 1,000 yards of the battery. We remained there for four hours, fighting stubbornly. Then we crept up to a distance of 500 yards and remained there for twelve hours. It was terrific work.

"During the night the Germans brought up a six-inch gun and turned it loose on us. It needed only one shell to wipe out every man on the detachment except twenty-nine. And most of the twenty-nine were wounded."

Later Meyer obtained his discharge through the aid of the American consul at London and returned to this country.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

"O, think of the home over there," is the sweet refrain of a popular hymn. We don't want to throw any cold water on the honest efforts of this pious poet, but we do wish he had directed his energies to the improvement of the Home down here. When a man or woman thinks of the "Home over there" so much that the home below the clouds get but little attention, we think that kind of piety is not practical. Think of the home that you occupy, and try to make it better, happier, and purer. The Home over there, is in betetr hands, and won't need your exclusive attention until you get there.

* * *

Blighting Words.

If the merely idle word is one day to be accounted for and judged, what of the untrue, impure, the profane, the malignant and cruel words with which this earthly air is continually charged? Only a movement of the lips, a moment's stirring of the air, and all is silent, as though the word had never been spoken; yet a fellow-creature's happiness has been blighted; a heavy burden has been made still heavier to bear; a heart has been robbed of its guilelessness and trust; the seed has been sown of a career that ends in ruin and death. Those words are not dead. Though they seem to be buried in everlasting oblivion, yet, when the judgment throne is set and earth's myriads are gathered together to be by their words justified or by their words condemned, they will return with solemn reverberating echo out of the darkness of the past, and fall with dismay and shame on the ears of those who spoke them. And those words — faithful pure, begin — passing to and fro among men like white-winged angels, carrying messages of love and hope and healing from heaven; words almost divine in their ennobling influence, helping us ever onward and upward along life's journey—those, too, will awake from their sacred slumber, and amid the grateful murmur of the multitudes whom they have gladdened, comforted and saved, their blessed sound will be heard on earth once more.

Keep watch of your words, my darlings,
For words are wonderful things;
They are sweet, like bees' fresh honey,
Like bees, they have terrible stings.

They can bless, like the warm, glad sunshine,
And brighten a lonely life;
They can cut, in the bitter contest,
Like an open, two edged knife.

* * *

In nearly every case boys who bring sorrow or disgrace upon their parents are those who are allowed to run on the street at night. With the shades of night around to a boy comes the opportunity for bad associations that do not tempt them in the broad light of day. Evil doesn't stalk abroad at noonday, and hence a boy is not apt to come in contact with it with the sun at meridian. Keep your boys off the streets at night, or rather safely sheltered in the home neat, where evil influence never enter to lead them astray.

* * *

Never cast aside your friends if by any possibility you can retain them. We are the weakest of spendthrifts if we let one friend drop off through inattention, or let one push away another, or if we hold aloof from one for petty jealousy, or heedless slights or roughness. Would you throw away a diamond because it pricked you? One good friend is not weighed against the jewels of the earth. If there is coolness or unkindness between us, let us come face to face and have it out. Quick before the love grows cold. Life is too short to quarrel in, or carry evil or unkind thoughts of friends. It is easy to lose a friend, but a new one will not come for the calling, nor make up for the old one when he comes.

* * *

Many children hear from their parents nothing but words of censure and reproof day after day. They would smile with intense joy if told at night how kind and helpful they had been and what comforts they had been to their parents. They would go to sleep and dream of angels and bright and happy things. Ah! how little it takes to make hearts happy, and how little also to make them miserable.

* * *

Young man, don't forget that your commercial standing is marred by your association with bad men. Don't let anybody fool you with the suggestion that you can lift some rascal into decency by making him your yoke fellow. You can't lie down with a dog and get up without having fleas. You had better listen to the advice of men and women who you know to be your friends.

* * *

Your best blessing are not recognized by you till they have vanished; your common privileges have little value to you till you are deprived of them. Your home inspires no special gratitude till you are cast homeless upon the world. Your friends, the companions of your life, the dear sharers of your every day experience—how little do you prize the tenderness of their love or the beauty of their character, until the quiet, unceasing ministry of goodness has ceased forever.

BUREAU DRAWER SETS

Very simple to make in spare time, are bureau drawer sets from silk, cheesecloth or chinta to match the hangings of your room. Cut the material the size of the bottom of the drawers, line with a sheet of wadding, sifting in between a bit of your favourite sachet. Fasten at each edge a strip of ribbon two inches wide, allowing length enough so the clothes will slip through easily, or the ribbon may be tied in the centre with a big bow.

NO PRESS-GANG METHODS

The practice of discharging single men from employment as a healthy hint that their King and country needs them does not commend itself to fair minded Canadians, says the London Advertiser. In fact, if the custom becomes widespread, The Advertiser believes it will do more to discourage recruiting than any other influence, and any man could rightly plead that he had been insulted by his country before he was asked to serve it.

Prodding men into the ranks with a threat of discharge is quite as distasteful in a democratic country as prodding them into the ranks with a bayonet. It is harking back to the days of the press gang, the only difference being that a refined cruelty is operated in place of brute force.

The mayor of Hamilton is the first to be reported as adopting this method; a large railway corporation is said to have also ordered its single men out off the pay roll, and if this is true it is shameful.

There has been little appeal to the young men of Canada to enlist. The military authorities have given it out time and again that there were more than enough men enlisting. General Hughes stated that hundreds of thousands could be secured and, in fact, were clamoring to serve, and in a recent interview given to a New York paper just before he left for England, Sir Robert Borden, prime minister of Canada, was quoted as saying that if necessary a million Canadians would respond to the call.

All these statements are not conducive to bringing home individual responsibility to the young men of the country. Most of the young, unmarried men who work in Canada take their share in the burden of the home upon their shoulders. In many cases sons are the sole support of widowed mothers or aged parents. Of course, there are many laggards—youths who could not be driven to fight and who have no conception of the justice of the cause—but the average young Canadian will not be derelict when duty taps him on the shoulder, and says: "You are needed."

But if you take the club of enforced unemployment, and strike this young Canadian a blow with it you are first of all insulting him. You are inferring, to put it mildly, that he has not done his duty when he was working, that he was deaf to the call, and that he is either a coward or a skulker. You send him into the ranks, not a volunteer in the free spirit of Canada, but a conscript by means of private coercion. What would a young man think? Would he not be justified in saying that his comrades who had volunteered without so broad a hint were pointing at him as a coward who had to be driven to take up arms? What sort of a spirit would such a man have? Certainly not the fine, free courage of volunteers that has made the heroes of Ypres, Langemarck and Festubert.

If there is a dearth of recruits in Canada the press has not been informed of it. Every Canadian paper is willing at the present time to give of its space to call for more men if the authorities will but say the word. But not a suggestion of the necessity of stimulating recruiting, let alone forcing men to enlist, has come to the press. If to-morrow the authorities at Ottawa would issue an appeal for men, The Advertiser, and every other Canadian paper in the country would give its whole front page for the purpose, and in a single day the whole manhood of the country would be aroused.

The authorities have left the campaign to the newspapers, without word as to the necessity for telling the people that men are required. And in the same columns of all papers a speech has appeared, telling all Canadians that there are more men than are needed.

Let not a man be discharged in order that he may be given the alternative of beggery or soldiering. By all means let every art of persuasion be practiced and let every necessity be known. The press will not fail to make known the need. But let the press do it, rather than the press gang.

Honour thy father and thy mother, young man, but when they pick out a wife for you it's your cue to kick.

ITCHING PIMPLES ON FACE AND ARMS

Inflamed and Were Sore. Some Nights Could Not Sleep. Cuticura Healed Within a Month.

Shaw Brook, Moncton, N. B.—"Some time ago there were sores broke out on my face and arms. They appeared like little pimples and itched intensely and were all red and inflamed-like and were sore. It caused itching and burning and some nights I could not sleep.

"I took a treatment to no avail. The trouble lasted for nearly a month. So I thought I would try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Two applications gave me relief. The sores began to dry up and within a month I was cured without a scar left." (Signed) Miss Clara Ashtville, July 8, 1914.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

"Germany Is a Great Bluffer Allies Are Sure To Win" Says War Correspondent

FRANCE, July 31.—"All we know is that we will win. But when, that is the question. May be this autumn; perhaps next year or the year after, writes a correspondent in the Montreal Standard. Germany is a great bluffer. In a few months she will make a supreme effort to break our lines. We will make effective resistance.

What then?

Germany comes to realize that the longer she fights the worse off she will be. Germany is a big bully. When a bully finds he is being beaten, he cries for mercy. He won't take punishment. Certainly the Germans have bravery of a sort. They fight fiercely when they think they're winning, but once we make them retreat, it will soon be a rout. They have not the elan of our troops, nor the bull dog obstinacy of the English who know not when they are beaten.

The officer in leaden coloured uniform, and red cap braided with gold, sat on the terrace of a cafe overlooking the Seine. He was a splendid figure of a man, with massive features and a great brown beard, and on his broad breast he wore a row of medals and ribbons. Altogether French in appearance, he had the stolid manner of an Englishman; he spoke composedly, gravely, with a curious sense of detachment, without out gestures, without that vivacious interest exhibited by the pre-war Frenchman in nearly everything he said or did. Nearby a group of English officers were "joshing" one another in a spirit of light-hearted frivolity. Around about family parties —a gray old man, a gray old woman, girls of certain and uncertain age, girls pretty and girls not pretty, with here and there a young man in uniform in their midst—were sedately drinking—beer for the most part.

Full of Vacant Chairs.

The great terrace was full of vacant chairs. The little group were soberly dressed, and very quiet; gone was the vivacious chatter, the gay abandon and light-hearted laughter of other and happier days. Conversation went on in an undertone — mostly. Women smiled, but their smiles were grave. Even the two painted ladies of predatory aspect seemed to be under a certain constraint; their costumes conspicuous by contrast with the other women, were less vivid than the uniforms of the multi-coloured officers. Over that immense terrace, with its small groups lost in a desert of chairs, hung the sombre shadow of a great tragedy, and I sat there counting the widows passing by on the sidewalk. They passed, the women in brand-new mourning garments, at the rate of two and three a minute. Presently I turned to the French officer with the beard and medals and said as a "Jock" of the famous Black Watch with both legs in bandages and the tail of his kilts torn away by shrapnel said to me,

"It will take some doing to drive the Germans back yonder."

No Longer Any Delusions.

"On that point we French have no longer any delusions," he said. "Already the cost has been enormous. France, la Belle France, is a country of widows and orphans and maimed men. Only the English, the stolid phlegmatic English, who used to come here and watch with a stony disapproving stare our displays of exuberant gaiety —only the English are gay and light hearted in this land of mourning, fighting for its life, the liberty of Europe. The Irish —that once light hearted, gay and always gallant race —the Irish over here are stern and grim; gallant as ever, but grim as death. The Scots, the dour Scotts, the huge and heady men in kilts, are no longer dour; they smile endlessly jocosely at their thoughts; when they talk of war their eyes are merry, and their speech is gentle; when they talk with a girl their eyes are sad and their speech more gallant than a Frenchman's ever was, more full of "blarney" than an Irishman's. And mostly you see these tall, straight-backed Highlanders, drinking beer. It is funny —the supreme proof that half the world is topsy-turvy.

May Be Hard to Conquer.

"But yes, Germany may be very hard to conquer. Certainly we must make a tremendous sacrifice of life to put her to her knees. Stern days are still ahead of us. Our confidence in the ultimate issue is absolute, but even though the war ends shortly there will be made many more widows an dorphans.

"Among us are many who expect the war to end before Christmas; such also is my view, but no man knows. Presently Germany will make a supreme effort on the western front. It will be a stupendous conflict. It will tax our strength, and that of our English and Belgian allies to hold her. Germany will be frightfully prodigal of ammunition, and perfectly reckless of the wastage of life, in this coming struggle. We too, must expect enormous losses. But Germany will fail in this effort. Her great bolt will be shot in vain. Thereafter Germany will not be able to entertain any hope of victory. She will have to fight on the defensive and the Bosche bully will not endure punishment, knowing that it is only a question of time till she will be completely crushed. After Germany has made her supreme effort she will try to bluff the Allies into granting her terms of peace, but I believe it is not long before her power will suddenly collapse.

PEPPERMINT AND CINNAMON FLAVOURS

MADE IN CANADA

THE WEATHER

Yesterday had a temperature of 87 degrees in the shade, the highest of the present summer and particularly oppressive on account of the dampness of the atmosphere. The rainfall for July has totalled over 4 inches in this locality, and the average has been exceeded in practically all sections of Ontario, and over a greater portion of the Dominion.

Ten Recruiting Sergeants.

Mr. Layfield further stated that the local bands had offered the full extent of their services. Alderman Dobbin had undertaken the publicity work. Colonel Hemming, of Kingston had promised to send ten recruiting sergeants for as many days as they were required; and any changes in the medical qualifications for recruits will be sent to the medical examiners.

Uniforms to Be Here.

Every man who has been examined and rejected in the past will be re-examined. Assurance has also been given that sufficient uniforms will be here for recruits as soon as they enlist. Everything, Mr. Layfield said, was working out harmoniously, and from his report it is clear that he has given his secretarial duties the most careful and detailed attention.

The Plans of the Campaign.

The plans for the campaign are simply that following Wednesday night's meeting the recruiting sergeants will be ready to receive the men who offer themselves, and during the following days they will attempt to interview all the men in the city between the ages of 18 and 45. The names will be obtained by a local committee, and will be divided among the visiting sergeants. The first recruits will also assist in the recruiting work, and their first drills will be held here under the instruction of Captain M. Park. Everything seems to have been provided for, and it remains for the eligible men to respond to the need of the hour, and the enthusiasm which the local Speakers' League have generated.

Manufacturers Assure Positions.

A feature of last night's meeting was the presence of a majority of the leading manufacturers of the city, who unanimously guaranteed to recruits their positions when they return, and a preference before others who neglect to volunteer.

Col. J. W. Miller stated that he with Judge Huycke, F. D. Kerr and Peter Campbell, had called upon the manufacturers, and to a man they had given this assurance.

Mr. T. F. Matthews stated that 10 per cent. of his employees had enlisted. They represented 40 per cent. of the available men. They had been told a year ago that their positions would be waiting for them when they came back. They would be given precedence over men who didn't go but who should have gone. One employee wanted to go, but had to have a slight operation performed. The firm paid his expenses and that young man is now at the front.

Mr. A. E. Coulthard said that the Colonial Weaving Company employed mostly girls. The company had some representatives at the front, and these men were assured of their positions.

Colonel Miller added to Mr. Coulthard's statement that he said he would advise the girls not to be seen on the street with young men who would not enlist.

350 From the C. G. E.

Mr. E. G. Patterson stated that at the outset of the war it was announced at the C. G. E. works that men enlisting would be re-engaged upon their return. Three hundred and fifty men have enlisted out of the C. G. E. works, and their positions are there for them on their return.

Mr. W. H. Denham stated that the same applied to the Quaker Oats Company. Some men who enlisted and were turned back on account of physical disabilities had been taken back to work.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., said that one of the first men in Peterborough to enlist was an employee of his firm. He had met this man recently on the Pacific Coast. He was on the battleship Kent which sank the Dresden. Another man, a sail-maker, who had been out here four years, was killed recently at the front, and his effects had lately been received by friends. Mr. Turner was keeping the places of his men open and considered that they deserved a preference.

Twenty per cent. of the employees of the Canadian Canoe Co. have already enlisted, and their positions are awaiting them on their return, said Mr. M. Lyle.

Mr. E. Worth of the Bonner-Worth Company said he had been instructed by his office to help recruiting. The positions of any men enlisting would be retained for them.

Mr. John Duignan reaffirmed the assurance of the other employers. Last fall when men of the McDonald Estate Co. had enlisted they were given their bonus in September which ordinarily would not have been paid until November. They were prepared to keep the positions for the recruits from their mills.

G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., said he hadn't a large staff. Practically all were married men. Some of them had sent sons. He was prepared to encourage any who thought of going.

Mr. E. H. Howson of the Peterborough Lock Co. said that the men who had gone from that shop had been promised their jobs on returning.

Mr. George W. Lundy of the Canadian Chicle Company said they were prepared to do the same as the other manufacturers.

Mr. Daniel Holland, local manager of the Canada Flour Mills stated that they had done what they could. Three out of their staff had enlisted, and their positions were being held for them. The others were engaged in the manufacture of a staff of life. He also has a brother in charge of one of the departments of the Ross Rifle Co., Que.

Mr. W. Sangster of the De Laval Co. said that Mr. Breyfogle had been unable to attend the meeting. Last September they had followed the same course as the other manufacturers. All the men understand that their positions are open for them when they come back.

Mr. J. C. Smith of the Wm. Hamilton Co., and Mr. Victor Richardson of Henry Hope & Sons, voiced the above assurances.

The Working Committees.

The following committees were appointed to take charge of the various phases of the work connected with the campaign:

Executive. — His Honour, Judge Huycke, F. D. Kerr, Peter Campbell, T. F. Matthews, R. B. Rogers, Col. Johnston and Daniel O'Connell.

Publicity. — Ald. Dobbin, R. M. Glover and Mr. Whalley.

Demonstration Committee—To prepare for speakers, parade, bands, decorations, etc.)—Mr. A. E. Coulthard, Dr. Cameron, J. J. Turner, Sr., Morley Lyle, Col. Miller, Mr. Pennyfather, Mr. Denham, Mr. Patterson, Mr. Peck, Dr. Eastwood.

Census Committee — (To prepare lists of local men between the ages of 18 and 45) — Mr. J. A. Aylmer, chairman; Ald. Stratton, Ald. Duffus, Col. Johnston, Col. Walker, Captain W. C. Ackerman, Adjt. McElhiney, Dr. Cameron, Dr. Eastwood, G. A. Gillespie. This committee has power to add to its numbers, as desired.

Officers Present.

The following soldiers, in uniform, were present, and were given places of honour at the front: Col. Johnston, Major Medd, Major Eastwood, A.M.C., Capt. Park, Lieut. Rackham, Sergt. Hart, Private Watson.

Capt. Park and Lieut. Rackham asked the meeting's endorsation of their appeal to the Council and citizens for subscriptions to the 59th Battalion Fund, and on motion of Mr. Matthews and Mr. O'Connell, approval was expressed of the Fund, which is to provide many little necessaries and comforts for the men. The motion recommended the Fund to the Council and citizens.

Remember the Rifles.

Major Medd stated that B squadron of the 8th Mounted Rifles was the Peterborough section. Over 200 Peterborough young men had joined them, and of that number 67 have already crossed the Atlantic. Toronto sent from 90 to 100 to replace their quota, Ottawa between 60 and 70, Belleville about 18, and Peterborough 26. Each squadron forwarded 67 men. It will be seen that 30 or 40 more men are required to replace those who have gone. Major Medd asked the citizens to remember the Rifles even when they have gone to England.

Mr. O'Connell's Address.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, previous to nominating the above committees, gave a concise summary of what the Speakers' League here had done, and what remained to make the campaign a success. The co-operation of everybody was in the assistance which they had undertaken to render the military authorities in this very important matter of recruiting. Six months ago an appeal was made for finances. Now the citizens are making an appeal which no one has a right to make unless the great demands of humanity make it necessary. They were going to ask the young men to rise to a sense of their duty and realise what it means to belong to the British Empire. They would also ask mothers to allow their sons to go. Mr. O'Connell added a filip of encouragement and enthusiasm to what had been an extraordinary meeting.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

One half of the salary for the month of May, due Capt. A. W. McPherson, medical officer of health for the city, and now at the front, will be forwarded to him and the other half will go to Dr. C. H. Amys, who is acting M. H.O., in the absence of Dr. McPherson.

Grant For Labour Day.

The Finance committee of the City Council has authorised the regular grant of one hundred dollars to the Trades and Labour Council with which to help defray the expenses incidental to a Labour Day celebration.

Arbitrator Appointed.

Mr. W. H. Moore has been appointed arbitrator on behalf of the city in the matter of apportioning the monies expended in connection with the administration of justice in both the city and county.

Advance $400.

The Central Charity Board will be given an advance of $400 on account of the appropriation for the year to enable to pay for the season's supply of wood.

Will Measure the Can.

One of the garbage collecting cans that figured in olice court recently, will be measured by Sanitary Inspector Spence and a report submitted to the Council on Monday night. The man who used the cans and was fined on the grounds that they were undersize, has asked that the fine be remitted.

A Hot Wave In New York

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, July 31.—New York's East Side sweletered to-day in what promised early to be the hottest day of summer as last night was the hottest night. Every "breathing spot" in the tenement section was crowded with sleepers, mostly with mothers seeking breath for whimpering babies

Six deaths have been directly attributed to the hot weather in the past twenty-four hours, including four suicides.

Mexico Eats Cactus And Horseflesh

Puebla, Mexico, July 30.—American Red Cross and United States Consular agents to-day summarized conditions in the interior as follows:

For more than six weeks no food in any quantity has reached the Mexican capital.

All railroads between Mexico City and Vera Cruz have been crippled and the territory along the lines is infested with bandits of both Zapata and Carranza factions. It is improbable relief can be sent from Vera Cruz without strong military aid.

Hundreds of Americans who own property along the railroads between Mexico City and Vera Cruz have handed to John R. Stillman long lists of depredations.

William C. Potter of the American Red Cross Society, is in receipt of the following telegram from a Red Cross representative in Eagle Pass, Tex.:

"People in Monclova now eating cactus. Saltillo conditions terrible; people dying there."

A message from another Red Cross representative in Mexico City says:

"All the different animals of the city are brought to the slaughter house and converted into fertiliser. Lately it has been noticed that when the carcasses of the horses reach the plant nine-tenths of the flesh has been stripped off by the famished people."

Doctor Said Only Hope Was In An Operation

Was Skeptical When He Began the Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Relief Came Quickly

Here is a plain, honest statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment. Between the lines of this letter you can read the gratitude which its writer feels. One does not suffer from annoying, distressing piles for ten years without appreciating a cure when it is obtained.

Almost every mail brings the report of someone who has been cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Such statements are never used without the permission of the writer, and until we are satisfied that the cure is genuine and the writer a person of responsibility.

You may believe in operations for piles, and think there is no other cure. Write to Mr. Ingles, enclosing stamp, and he will gladly verify his statement. He will tell you that the pain, the expense, the risk of an operation are quite unnecessary. That relief and cure come with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Ernest W. Ingles, Penticton, B.C., writes: "I suffered from piles for ten years, and though I tried all kinds of ointments and injections I really had no permanent relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. When I began this treatment I had absolutely no faith in it, for I had been examined by a well-known physician in Vancouver, and he said that an operation was the only thing that would benefit me. It was surprising the relief I obtained from the very first box, and now, after using four boxes, I am practically cured. My case was so exceptionally bad that I received no relief day or night, and for this reason the results are wonderful."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Ointment from any dealer at 60 cents a box. If you do not want to risk this much send a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we shall send you a sample box free. We are so certain that any sufferer from piles will obtain relief by using this ointment that we do not hesitate to make you this offer. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

A Piano in the Trenches Gives the Soldiers Opportunity of Music

Pte. T. Ogilvie, of the Royal Scots, writing home to his parents, 8 Royal Park Terrace, Edinburgh, on date 9th June, says:

"After having a good rest we are back again in the trenches. We left our billets last night at 9 o'clock and arrived here about midnight. This is a treat and no mistake. The trenches are just lovely, and you could not wish for a better place. They are the best made trenches that we have seen so far and we have seen a few. There are dugouts also, right along the whole trench, and they are very neat. The one that my mate and I are in is made of wood in the inside, with brick and earth on the outside. There are shelves all around, very handy for odds and ends. We are very comfortable when lying down; at night you can pull down your screen, light your candle, and if you are lucky enough to have a book you can fairly enjoy it.

"You can walk any distance you like with safety, and it is very amusing when you come to a sign-post telling you where you are. Football Avenue, for instance, is a very nice walk. Then you came to Grove's Villa — beautifully constructed dugouts that are just like our own summer-houses. Euston Station is a busy thoroughfare. Then we have Whistband Avenue, but as the German shells burst there we give it a wide berth. I have only described a small part of a trench, as that is all of them I have seen as yet.

"There is a piano in the trench, so we have music. The Germans are about 500 yards from us, and you wouldn't think we were at war, everything is so quiet. The trees are lovely, the only thing that mars the beauty are one or two farms in ruins.

"The heat is something awful. I wear as little clothing as possible. In weather like this you require a wash every hour or two. We are all in good health and spirits."

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses, at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

British Fleet Undaunted By Year of Strain

(By the Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of York.

LONDON, July 29.—"To share the life of the grand fleet, even for a short time, enables one to realize the sacrifices its officers and men have made and are making for their country.

We are entering the second year of the war. For twelve months the fleet has been enduring the strain of immediate readiness for battle. Almost all its ships have been constantly at sea. They had no harbours secure from danger, they roamed ceaselessly over the waste of the northern and western sea at full speed, often in the wild weather, with water covering the decks in a region where the winter daylight lasts only a few hours each ship moving hither and thither in the dark, her hundreds of men shut down below.

It is almost impossible to realize the perpetual strain of such an experience. The officers and men have all the responsibilities of war without the thrill and excitement of battle.

Leave Almost Impossible.

Day by day they have to be ready for action. Leave of absence is almost impossible; many of them have not had forty-eight hours' leave, few have had more since the war began.

No men have a greater love of their homes; they often have been within reach, sometimes even within sight of them, yet none can be spared.

Week by week they are waiting for the chance which never comes. Some of them, to the envy of their comrades, have had their day on the Dogger Bank, Heligoland Bight, the Falkland Islands or the Dardanelles, but for most the day is still to come. It is impossible to describe the strain of waiting for it.

Yet in spite of all, they are full of cheerfulness. On deck you may see the officers wrestling with the mighty "medicine ball," men playing cricket, quoits, every variety of ingenious game. Thanks to excellent food, fresh air, and the absence of shore temptations, the health of the fleet is admirable. When I was with the largest section the rate of sickness, including accidents, was just under 1 per cent.

Vision of Smartness.

The men at their work on board ship are a victim of smartness and alacrity, all are splendidly fit in body and spirit. Of the efficiency of the fleet, it is not for a mere outsider to speak, but he cannot fail to be impressed by the all-pervading sense of readiness. It seemed as if there was one word written on every ship, on every part of her, on every man within her—the word READY.

Must Return To Shields Says Sir Conan Doyle

LONDON, July 28. — Sir Arthur Conan Doyle writes in The Times advocating the use of protective armour for soldiers attacking over open ground. He says:

"As a man faces the hostile rifle fire his forehead and heart are the only points presented which are certainly vital. The former would be protected by such a helmet as the French have evolved; the second should be covered by a curved plate of highly tempered steel, not more than a foot in diameter. With this simple light equipment the two centres of life are safe.

'A wound in the abdomen is no longer certain death, thanks to the advances of surgery, but a third curve of steel strapped across from the ribs to the hip bones would afford protection.

'But granting that individual life would be saved, that does not bear upon the capture of positions, since so many would fall wounded that the weight of the attack would be spent before the stormers reached the trenches. For this, armour which would give complete protection is needed, and since the weight of this is more than a man can readily carry, it must be pushed in front upon wheels.

The "Tortoise" Advance.

"I picture a great number of plates held together like the shields of the Romans, pushed by men who would crouch behind them.

"When one is disabled it can readily be dropped and the gap closed. Others could be fixed sideways upon wheels and used upon the flank of the advance, to prevent enfilading fire.

'One 'tortoise' would attract the concentrated fire of the artillery but as each company or platoon forms its own, these numerous armour plated bodies could rush with small loss over the space already cleared as far as possible of obstacles and to have some chance of reaching the enemy's lines, not as an exhausted fragment, but a vigorous storming party with its numbers intact."

THE GERMAN ATROCITIES AS OFFICIALLY REPORTED BY BRYCE COMMISSION

While the first army, under the command of General Alexander von Kluck, was mastering the passage of the Meuse between Vise and Namur, and carrying out the scheme of devastation which has already been described, detachments of the second German Army, under General von Bulow, were proceeding up the Meuse Valley towards Namur. On Wednesday, August 12th, the town of Huy, which stand half way between Namur and Liege was seized. On August 20th German guns opened fire on Namur itself. Three days later the city was evacuated by its defenders, and the Germans proceeded along the Valley of the Sambre through Tamines and Charleroi to Mons. Meanwhile a force under General von Hausen's army streamed into France by Bouvines and Rethel, firing and looting the villages, looting and shooting the inhabitants as they passed through.

The evidence with regard to the Province of Namur is less voluminous than that relating to the north of Belgium. This is largely due to the fact that the testimony of soldiers is seldom available, as the towns and villages once occupied by the Germans were seldom reoccupied by the opposing troops, and the number of refugees who have reached England from the Namur district is compatatively small.

Andenne.

Andenne is a small town on the Meuse between Liege and Namur, lying opposite the Village of Seilles (with which it is connected by a bridge over the river), and was one of the earlier places reached on the German advance up the Meuse. In order to understand the story of the massacre which occurred there on Thursday, August 20th, the following facts should be borne in mind: The German advance was hotly contested by Belgian and French troops. From daybreak onwards on the 19th of August the 8th Belgian Regiment of the Line were fighting with the German troops on the left bank of the Meuse on the heights of Seilles. At 8 a.m. on the 19th the Belgians found further resistance impossible on the district, and retired under shelter of the forts of Namur. As they retired they blew up Andenne bridge. The first Germans arrived in Andenne at about 10 a.m., when ten or twelve Uhlans rode into the town. They went to the bridge and found it was destroyed. They then retired, but returned about half an hour afterwards. Soon after that several thousand Germans entered the town and made arrangements to spend the night there. Thus, on the evening of the 19th August a large body of German troops were in possession of the town, which they had entered without any resistance on the part of the allied armies or of the civilian population. About 4.30 on the next afternoon shots were fired from the left bank of the Meuse and replied to by Germans in Andenne. The village of Andenne had been isolated from the district on the left bank of the Meuse by the destruction of the bridge, and there was nothing to suggest that the firing on the left came from the inhabitants of Andenne. Almost immediately, however, the slaughter of these inhabitants began, and continued for over two hours and intermittently during the night. Machine guns were brought into play. The German troops were said to be for the most part drunk, and they certainly murdered and ravaged unchecked. A reference to the German diaries in the appendix will give some idea of the extent to which the army gave itself up to drink through the month of August.

When the fire slackened, about 7 o'clock, many of the townspeople fled in the direction of the quarries; others remained in their houses. At this moment the whole of the district round the station was on fire and houses were flaming over a distance of two kilometres in the direction of the hamlet of Tramaka. The little farms which rise one above the other on the high ground on the right bank were also burning.

At 6 o'clock on the following morning, the 21st, the Germans began to drag the inhabitants from their houses. Men, women and children were driven into the square, where the sexes were separated. Three men were then shot, and a fourth bayoneted. A German colonel was present, whose intention in the first place appeared to be to shoot all the men. A young German girl who had been staying in the neighbourhood interceded with him, and, after some parleying, some of the prisoners were picked out, taken to the banks of the Meuse and there shot. The colonel accused the population of firing on the soldiers, but there is no reason to think that any of them had done so, and no inquiry appears to have been made.

About 400 people lost their lives in this massacre, some on the banks of the Meuse, where they were shot, according to orders given, and some in the cellars of the houses, where they had taken refuge. Eight men belonging to one family were murdered. Another man was placed close to a machine gun which fired through him. His wife brought his body home on a wheel-barrow. The Germans broke into her house and ransacked it, and piled up all the eatables in a heap on the floor and relieved themselves upon it.

A hair-dresser was murdered in his kitchen where he was sitting with a child on each knee. A paralytic was murdered in his garden. After this came the general sack of the town. Many of the inhabitants who escaped the massacre were kept as prisoners and compelled to clear the houses of corpses and bury them in trenches. These prisoners were subsequently used as a shelter and protection for a pontoon bridge which the Germans had built across the river, and were so used to prevent the Belgian forts from firing upon it."

A few days later the Germans celebrated a Fete Nocturne in the square. Hot wine, looted in the town, was drunk, and the women were compelled to give three cheers or the Kaiser and to sing "Deutschland uber Allies." The conduct of the German troops in the Namur district will be published in Monday evening's Examiner, August 2nd. Also Charleroi district, when further trocities will be revealed.

SEVERAL WOMEN LOST IN RAID BY SUBMARINE

LONDON, July 30—Five ships were sunk in the German submarine campaign against merchantmen to-day. The total death list, it is believed, will reach 41. Thirty vessels are known to have been sunk by the Germans within the last three days. The latest victims were the Belgian steamer Princess Maria Jose, the Finnish steamers Urania and Leo, the Swedish bark Fortuna and the Grimsby trawler Dovey.

Heavy Loss of Life.

The heaviest loss of life occurred in the Baltic, where the Urania and Leo were sent down. Despatches from Copenhagen state that the Urania's crew and passengers were all saved, but that eleven men and several women aboard the Leo were drowned. There is some doubt as to the manner of the sinking of the Urania, one report having it that she struck a mine. Later news indicated, however, that the same submarine sank both Finnish ships.

Four Are Drowned.

Four lives were lost in the torpedoing of the Maria Jose. The surviving members of the crew of 26, including the Captain, his wife and child, were landed at Harwich by a trawler.

The Fortuna was torpedoed in the North Sea. Her crew was taken aboard the submarine which destroyed her, and later transferred to a captured Norwegian steamer, which put them into Cuxhaven.

All hope has been given up for the crew of nine on the Grimsby trawler Dovey, sunk in the North Sea by a German submarine.

Late advices indicate that there was some loss of life on board the steamer Mangara, sunk by a German submarine yesterday.

The chief engineer and two sailors have been landed at Lowestoft and three members of the crew at Yarmouth. The remainder are missing. The Mangara carried a crew of 18.

Despatches from Norway say that the steamer Nordyset was found waterlogged and abandoned as the result of a submarine attack, and was towed to that port.

Messiah To Be Given By The Choral Society

The Executive Committee of the Choral Society held a long session on Tuesday night, discussing plans for the coming season. The most interesting item to the general public will, no doubt be the society's decision to give the "Messiah" about Christmas time. The most remarkable thing was the entire unanimity with which this was decided, and proves the popularity of this work with choral singers. This may appear strange to those who have never sung in the Messiah, but after once taking part there seems to be an irresistable attractiveness about this music, which unlike most popular music, never palls. This is not confined to the singer, but is shared by the audience as witness the crowded halls where The Messiah is given annually. Rehearsals will be commenced early in September.

BANISH BILE!

A bilious condition of the system is the result of inaction of the liver, often causing severe headache through the eyes and temples, culminating sometimes in nausea and vomiting, which is frequently followed by a bilious diarrhoea.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, when taken as directed, stimulates the peptic glands of the stomach and increases the contraction of its muscles from above downward. This action is communicated to the intestines and increases the flow of the intestinal juice, thus stimulating the ducts of the liver to pour out the bile, which it can be carried downward by the laxative action of the Salt, instead of remaining to clog up the liver and flow back into the stomach.

Thus, if a person who is subject to Biliousness and Bilious Headache will use Abbey's Effervescent Salt, the natural action of the Stomach, liver and intestines will be kept up and no bile can accumulate in the system.

The Empire's Need---Men

worth

YOUNG MEN of Peterborough. You have a duty that is thrust upon you by your manhood. Are you alive to it? Do you realize what is imminent? You have prided yourself on the fact that you have been and are a free Canadian. That priceless heritage has been handed to you. Surely it is on your part to help maintain it. Give this situation a thought and gain conception of what it really means for you and yours and others.

We have all been sheltering ourselves behind the tradition of the prowess of Britain. A shield and buckler ever and always. Now that it is possible—more—almost certain, that that barrier may be thrust aside what are you going to do to help to keep it intact? That is for you. Don't dismiss the fact. If you do you will have it forced on you in another way.

The finest word in the English language is the word "VOLUNTEER." Serfs and hirelings are driven. Free Canadians and Englishmen are the first in the front. First to offer to go. Surely you will get into the ranks as one who has offered his services. Never wait for compulsion.

England wants men. Canada has the strength of manhood in her cities, towns and on her broad farms. To each and every one should be driven home the call, "Your King and Your Country Need You." Thousands of your fellow-countrymen have gone, have volunteered for service. Why are you still on the streets? Enlistment has almost ceased or is only desultry. We are prone to think that some other should go, but not us.

Across the sea all is battle, strife, disaster. England is struggling for you and for me. For your father, mother and of the family. Here in Canada we pursue our daily duties without a sign, almost, that a great war is and will vitally affect our lives for the future. We seem to set this to one side as if it was not an individual concern. As something to be looked after by Governments, Cabinets and those in power. Just so sure as we fail to appreciate the immensity of the situation and its fearful possibilities for us we shall lack in true manhood, resource and virile action.

We have been the victims of over confidence. So sure as fate we have. The world has never seen such a conflict. The world has never seen such a strife. Nothing that history can tell can be adduced as a comparison. And we have serenely gone on, this year past, thinking that because England has stood as the bulwark, the mother of countries, the arbitrar of right and wrong, that England is still invincible. No greater fallacy can exist. England will play her part, that of the Protector of the Peoples, but you must do yours. Do not lack in this hour of trial.

We have come to a taking of stock in Peterborough. That is just what it amounts to. Beyond question it is known what is the available percentage of men in any given district able to take service. Who should take service, and no question. Any fairly well peopled district should be able to furnish at least 8 per cent. of its male population. Ten per cent. would be a high average. What are the facts? Peterborough has supplied about four per cent. Only one-half of the given average. Only four out of every hundred. What are the other ninety-six doing? Where are they? Bring them out. Stand up, you men of Peterborough and answer to your names. We want, your country wants, four more out of every hundred to come forward. And still others. We must not be content with an average. Let us have it sent abroad in Canada that Peterborough has held up her end in a royal way. It rests with us. It remains with your sense of responsibility. Think of those who have gone, and emulate their high resolve and brilliant patriotism.

A stirring appeal as an encouragement to enlist has appeared in verse. Here is an excerpt:

"There's a blow that should beat the hot metal to shape,
For it rings on the anvil of truth,
And it leaves hot a loophole of decent escape,
For the laggard who's false to his youth.
The pride of his manhood it taps at the source,
And it leaves him but one thing to do,
"You're proud of your pals in the army, of course,
But what will your pals think of you?"

Now is the time for Canadians as Canadians. We want the clear, straight Canadian of Canadian birth and raising to come forward. The records in the Patriotic Fund office show so far as they are a record of the enlistment of married men, that over 80 per cent. of the men who have enlisted and gone to the front are Englishmen. Going home to defend the land of their birth. But, as well, going to defend your land for you. How long will you permit that sort of thing? We want men who will catch hold and lift. These Englishmen came to Canada to find a new home and help make a new country. If the war were with us, on our own soil, they would be in the ranks here. But the danger is just as great over there even if it is 4,000 miles away. All honor to the sons of England who have hurried to her help. Shall Canadians lag behind?

With Caution.

Thes... fact. the Ministry Eberhart... with great caution as it sets ... sands completely the delicacy the situation with America. It realizes the possible political complications and has given courteous and ready audience within the last few weeks to several representative Americans, friendly to the Allies, and listened respectfully to their representations regarding political conditions in America.

Lord Robert Cecil gave strong indication of the determination of the ministry not to be hustled into violent action by giving another Tory, who had attacked the cotton policy of the Ministry, the severest dressing yet administered to any member since the opening of the war.

The feeling of pessimism which darkened the last week-end regarding Russia has been somewhat abated by the splendid and obstinate resistance of the Russian troops. Today no army is admired or cheered with enthusiasm. This sanguine estimate of the Russian army accounts for the fact that English view regarding the German campaign against Russia now begins to coincide with that steadily preached by Russian commandera, that whatever moral effect the fall of Warsaw or any other city might have in cheering the domestic feeling of Germany, the Russian resistance would not be seriously broken and that Russian would maintain her armies in being and continue to hold in check so many Germans as to make a transfer of any large number of German troops to the western front impossible.

An Encouraging Statement.

Lloyd George's sensational statement regarding gigantic additions to ammunition factories, while renewing the criticism that the step ought to have been taken earlier, is found to be encouraging as showing, clearer than anything, the settled possibility of misconception that England, or any of her allies, contemplates, or even tolerates the mention of an early indecisive peace.

Lloyd George's courageous complaint that the workingmen are not yet producing ammunition to the full possibility, owing to strict adhesion to old-fashioned union rules, excited the surprise and indignation of labour leaders who would not accept the statement, yet they have promised again to lend full assistance to Lloyd George in whatever steps are necessary to bring the small minority of "slackers" to reason.

The immense gathering whereat Lloyd George stood side by side with miners' leaders, notorious for their fierce extremeness in times of peace, like Robert Smillie, the Ulster resident of Scotland, is proof that Lloyd George's appeal for the solidarity of the nation has told at last. Another little sign of the times was Mr. Redmond's demand for a share for Ireland in munitions work. This was eagerly granted by Lloyd George who resumes friendly relations with the Irish, which were somewhat interrupted a few weeks ago by the collision between him and them over the liquor question.

Borden in England.

Sir Robert Borden is making a favourable impression everywhere and getting splendid receptions. This is partly in homage to Canada's immense contributions of men and their splendid bravery and his own polished eloquence. Sir Robert, though confining himself mainly to the unity of the whole Empire, in regarding the struggle as one for British ideals, liberty and justice, has given a slight hint of Canada's desire for closer communion in the councils of the mother country'

More and more as the war goes on importance is attached to the operations in the Dardanelles. Though it is admitted that they are slow and costly the Admiralty and military authorities do not doubt ultimate success.

The high hope of Roumania and other Balkan states coming into the conflict are now suspended. This assistance is considered improbable while Russia is retreating and can only be counted upon when the opening of the Dardanelles revolutionizes the situation in the East.

The Dardanelles Battle.

The Dardanelles becomes the great, hopeful, supreme point of the real turn of the tide for the Allies. In the meantime it looks as if both sides in the Western theatre have come to the same decision. Except for keeping each other employed daily diminished by the toll of death, they make no big attempt at a frontal attack.

The British casualities have decreased considerably and the expectation is still general that Germany is fixedly determined not to face another winter campaign.

I have to report that a year after the opening of the war leaves England under the almost universal impression that her positions are enormously stronger than at the beginning. Her unpreparedness in men and munitions is being gradually overtaken and while admitting that the war will be longer and more costly than was anticipated she has confidence that her superiority with her Allies, over Germany makes her exhaustion impossible and German's certain.

LONDON, July 31.—Premier Louis Botha is the latest example of the extraordinary transformation of feeling that is possible to the British crowd. He came to London immediately after the Boer War with a few of his generals. He and they were in a state of the deepest depression, for their country had been so desolated that there had grave wears as to its future. They were not popular then; indeed some hotels were doubtful about admitting them within their doors, and the visitors who came to see and encourage them were mainly Irish politicians who had supported their cause during the war.

But soon the tide turned. When poor old Campbell Bannerman rose to the Premiership he carried Home Rule for the Boers without even permitting a discussian within the Cabinet. Botha became, as everybody knows, Prime Minister, and like the practical Dutchman he was immediately resolved that the best future for his country and for his race, was to throw in his lot loyally with the British Empire; and to that policy he has since adhered with splendid loyalty and judgment. When he returned to London after this all the past was forgotten; and he could not appear in the streets anywhere without being followed by an admiring and affectionate crowd. And he was greeted none the less warmly because he had been so formidable and so brave an enemy in the not very remote past.

But, of course, by nobody was he welcomed with such heartiness as by the Irish: and the Irish party invited him to a banquet along with the other ministers of the dominions who happened to be in London at the time. Botha did not look very well at that time. The change from the open-air life of the veldt whether as a soldier or as a farmer, to the sedentary habits of a Prime Minister, did not suit his temperament.

Probably after this arduous campaign which he has just finished so successfully, Botha is in better health than he has been since he exchanged the saddle and the rifle for the desk and the pen. He had recovered his health partially when he was the guest of the Irish Party at a dinner in the House of Commons, and he was the central figure in a very dramatic scene which occurred at that dinner.

When the whole party was breaking up some one suddenly called on Denis O'Sullivan, the great Irish Californian singer, who died prematurely in Columbus, Ohio, during a successful dramatic tour, to wind up the evening appropriately by singing "The Wearing of the Green." Denis was a passionate and dramatic singer, and he gave to the old rebel song an almost fierce expression. I need scarcely say that this song, sung in a great dining hall in the British House of Commons, and reaching even across to the great wide Thames, flowing outside, roused the Irish audience to a pitch of almost frenzied enthusiasm. Somehow or other, the analogy between its sentiments and those of the great Boer leader in who s honour the song was sung, struck everybody; and the song ended in a big outburst of enthusiasm for Botha. By this time Botha had left the table and was leaving the room.

Just as he was going out he turned back from the door and looked at the Irishmen as they waved their napkins and cheered him. It was one of the strangest looks I have ever seen on the human face. There wasn't a particle of expression on the large, iron-jawed, yellowing face; and yet one could understand his emotions. For the strange, large, fixed blue eyes, under a canopy of heavy, black eyebrows and black head of hair, just started; and by a strange peculiarity those eyes of Botha can stare for minutes without ever winking an eyelid. It was the most curious and weird and almost uncanny sight, and in spite of the absolutely impassive and stern face the eyes seemed to burn and speak. Men who were present like myself have recalled that strange look to me many times since.

And now Botha is again on the crest of popularity. He is hailed as the first British general who won a big victory; and a victory over his internal as well as his external foes.

Ireland is delighted; not merely because it loves the Boers and loves Botha and hates the German militarists, but because it realizes that even the most vehement opponent of Irish rights sees in the success of Home Rule and liberty in the Transvaal an object lesson and encouragement in favour of Home Rule for Ireland.

The Thief Was Apprehended

A card this morning notified the local police that Samuel Blurton, who was wanted for the theft of $7,000 from the Canadian Steel and Foundry Co. of Montreal, of which he was paymaster, has been arrested in New York.

The theft was discovered on July 10. Chief Thompson and his men were on the lookout for the thief.

New Method Makes Straight Hair Wavy

(Popular Hygiene.)

It has been found that a simple and harmless fluid well known to the drug trade, has a remarkable action when applied to straight, lank, unruly hair. It dries in exquisite waves and curls which have all the appearance of pure naturalness. It has also proved a most delightful and beneficial dressing for the hair.

This product is nothing more than ordinary liquid silmerine, which of course anyone can afford to use. A few ounces of it will last a long time. One will enjoy using it too, not only because there is nothing sticky, greasy or unpleasant about it, but because it is so easy to apply. It is only necessary to moisten a clean tooth brush with the liquid and draw this through the hair from crown to tip. If this is done at bedtime, the hair will be beautifully wavy and curly in the morning and will not have that dull, scorched look which comes from the use of an iron.

Who Invented Khaki?

The answer to the question, "Who invented khaki?" is not easy, although we all know that the adoption of khaki by the British army dates back to the South African war. It will surprise most people, says The Liverpool Mercury, to be told that nearly fifty years ago a Liverpool celebrity advocated something akin to khaki as the most serviceable color for the uniform of our troops. W. G. Herdman, the artist, and author of "Ancient Liverpool," writing in 1869, condemned the red uniforms of the British and the white uniforms of the Austrian armies as the worst possible colors, having regard to their visibility at long distances. He added, "If armies went into action clothed in a grey-green all over, head or cap and all, they could not be distinguished till close to."

Never Felt Better Writes Percy Gray

Peterboro' Boy Tells Something About Life With Cyclist Corps

Signaller Percy Gray, one of the Peterborough boys with the Divisional Cyclists, Second Canadian contingent, writes to his mother as follows from Dibgate Camp, England:

Dibgate Camp, July 18, '15.

Dear Mother,—Just a few lines to let you know that I am O.K. and well and getting on fine. It is raining like the dickens to-night and it is rather uncomfortable, but we have got over minding little things such as damp weather. I guess I told you about my getting put on the staff as signaller. Well I find now that it is a better job than I ever hoped for. Was up to London Thursday for the day, attending a reception tendered to the ex-Boy Scouts. Had our expenses paid. Left camp at 8.30, arriving at our destination about 11 a.m. Then we were inspected by Baden Powell and dismissed. In the afternoon we attended Queen's theatre, where Sir R. Borden addressed us, also Gen. Alderson of the 1st contingent. Between acts Baden Powell presented us with a cigarette case, a present from the English Boy Scouts to the ex-Boy Scouts of Canada. We had one enjoyable time of it, believe me. We have a big inspection to-morrow. We know that the Hon. Sam Hughes, Sir R. Borden will be there, and expect King George and Kitchener down with them. I expect it will be a big affair. Passed through Maidstone on our way to London, a most picturesque place, from what I could see from the train. I have the week-end off duty, so I think I will go to Hastings as I want to see as much of England (your old home) as possible. At present we are taking a course in musketry which lasts over a week and means on the ranges from 7 a.m. till 7 p.m., which means early rising, say between 4.30 and 5 a.m. till the course is finished, but that doesn't worry me any as we are generally in bed every night by 9 o'clock, and believe me the regular hours here are having their effect on me, as I never felt better.

There si some talk of our moving camp. Some of our neighbours have moved, so I guess it is our turn next. I hope it is the case, for I certainly don't care for sand in everything one eats. It will be a change to have a little grass. I see some of the boys from home every time I go to town, but I don't go too often, as I have learned the game of going around with one hand on your money, as I would rather save it, and take little trips and see something for my money. I guess the folks at home will think I am getting to be a perfect tight-wad, as some of the fellows do here, but I should worry. The war's on, and besides I need the Cobalt.

Well, you must be tired of this dope so I will change the subject.

The Princess Pats reinforcements left here to-night with the 9th and 23rd Battalion for France. Lucky boys as they think. They are simply crazy with delight with the idea of getting away again.

Must close now, mother, dear. Answer soon, and often. Love to all. our loving son, Signaller Percy Gray.

COLD WATER CANNING METHOD

CONDITIONS have changed very materially in the canning world since the days of our grandmothers, when everybody canned and preserved their fruit in about the same manner. Nowadays there are about as many different methods of canning and preserving as there are varieties of fruit. Cold water canning is practised by some with splendid results. In case some of Our Women Folk are planning to try out the "cold" idea, we suggest the following method, taken from a contemporary journal:

Rhubarb, gooseberries, and even strawberries may be canned by this method. Rhubarb may be taken as an example.

Select young, tender rhubarb. Wash it carefully and cut into small pieces without peeling it. Pack it in a jar, as closely as possible, without mashing it, place a new rubber on the jar, fill it to overflowing with cold water and seal it. Allow it to stand 24 hours. At the end of this time, the amount of water in the jar will apparently be diminished—that is, although the jar was filled to overflowing, the water will show be two inches from the top. The explanation is that the water has soaked into the rhubarb and driven out the air. Drain this remaining water from the jar, and

MARKET ARCADE BOWER OF ODORS

Butter was up to 30 cents this morning, although some sold down around 28 cents. Eggs were 21 and 22 cents, new potatoes 20 cents a peck and plenty of them. New vegetables were offered in abundance. One citizen remarked upon the condition of the arcade which he termed disgraceful. It was anything but a pleasing appearance and the atmosphere was laden with a variety of odours of varying degrees of offensiveness.

Back to Farm Movement as Foe of Divorces

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 29. — Stop divorces by teaching the young people the art of homemaking in the schools.

Keep the boys and girls on the farm by making the farm attractive and giving them an agricultural and industrial education.

These were the texts used by A. O. Eberhart, former Governor of Minnesota, in an address before the Missouri bankers, in session here.

"The divorce fault and the 'on to the city' tendency are directly traceable to the school system," he said. "To this can be added the cause for the criminals and insane that fill the public institutions. Boys and girls will not go wrong if they are educated right.

"The soil of Missouri is its greatest wealth. It is to the advantage of the State to keep the boys and girls off the farm. In my State the bankers have done the greatest work in backing the solution to this problem.

"We teach agriculture and all the new developments that will make the farmers better farmers and more prosperous.

"We teach the girls the art of home making and give the boys some idea of what will be expected of them when they have a home of their own.

"There is some sense in sending the boy to the circus and the girl, too. They'll enjoy the prayer meeting more.

"The church also should be made attractive, but first it must be understod that neither the State nor the church can prosper without complete education. Minnesota has torn down about 400 of the little brick and frame school houses and erected big buildings in their places. They are there also to be used by the farmers for public meetings. They belong to the farmers.

"Missouri is a State that should take an interest in these facts. There is no doubt as to the greatness of Missouri, when she can pull two Federal Reserve banks out of twelve [illegible] to get one.

New Management.

"This hotel is under new management."

"Why, I still see the old proprietor about."

"Yes; but he got married last week."—Exchange.

Rich and Poor.

"You must remember Miss Banks—just think a moment."

"Oh, the rich girl"—

"Yes. She's engaged to Jack Oakley."

"Oh, the poor girl!"—Baltimore Sun.

Glacier Park Peaks.

The peaks in Glacier National park rising more than 10,000 feet above sea level are Mount Cleveland, 10,438 feet; Mount Stimson, 10,155 feet; Kintla peak, 10,100 feet; Mount Jackson, 10,023 feet, and Mount Siyeh, 10,004 feet.

Opposite Views.

Neil—Papa says that it's "Come easy, go easy" with money. Do you find it so, Jack? Jack—Not on your life! I always found that it came hard—and it certainly seems hard to see it go!—Judge.

Deliberate.

"Cobsworth never does anything without first thinking it over."

"That's true. I've known him to acquire a three days' growth of whiskers while meditating a shave."—Brooklyn Citizen.

Money Thrown Away.

Husband—You charge me with reckless extravagance. When did I ever make a useless purchase? Wife—Why, there's that fire extinguisher you bought a year ago; we've never used it once.—Boston Transcript.

THOMAS MARK GENERAL AGENT

KILLED IN ACTION

CAPTAIN McMEANS.

IN the recent casualty list there appeared the name of Captain Ernest D'Harcourt McMeans, Musketry Officer, 90th Rifles, Winnipeg.

Captain McMeans was born in Winnipeg on the 8th May, 1889, and was the son of Leadrum McMeans, K.C., late Member Parliament South Winnipeg, and nephew of Mr. Arthur H. Harris, of the Canadian Pacific, Montreal. He graduated at the Manitoba College and was called to the Bar, 1912, thereupon entering into partnership with his father.

The late Captain McMeans joined the 90th Rifles as a subaltern in 1908 and devoted much of his time and energies to furthering the interests of the corps. An expert in musketry he was recently appointed Honorary Musketry Instructor for the Province of Manitoba. During recent years he was in command of the Manitoba Rifle Men who came East to compete at the Dominion Rifle Association meetings.

Captain McMeans was killed in action on the morning of the 22nd May near Festubert defending a trench which had previously been captured from the Germans. Three brother officers fell with him. He was one of the most popular young officers in Winnipeg and was also well-known in Montreal and Ottawa.

An Old English Custom.

"Gavelkind" was a usage universal in England before the conquest, by which, if a man died intestate, all his lands passed equally to all his sons, or, failing issue, to all his brothers. The custom still survives in Kent, [illegible] property has been "disgaveled" by special act of parliament, the law concerning "gavelkind" holds good.

In the Canary Islands.

Produce in the Canary Islands is never brought to market by cart or wagon load, but only in such quantities as a woman can carry on her head for six or eight miles. Household servants in the Canary Islands are paid $3.50 to $7 per month with food and lodging. They are difficult to get, the women preferring work in the fields or factories.

A Spelling Test.

Long ago some university professor, said to be President Eliot, produced a test sentence that would serve as an examination in spelling for old Noah Webster himself. "It is amusing to view the unparalleled embarrassment of a harassed pedlar or peddler, sitting on a cemetery wall and viewing the symmetry of a peeled potato, pomegranate or persimmon."

Indian Corn Griddlecakes.

For Indian griddle cakes scald one pint of yellow cornmeal with enough boiling water to moisten. Do not allow the mixture to get soft. When cold add one cupful of wheat flour, one pint of milk, beat and stir in three well beaten eggs, add one teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and bake on a hot griddle.—Delineator.

His Own Appraiser.

"Willie," said his mother on her return from a shopping expedition, "I told you if you were good while I was out you might have a piece of candy, and now I find you've taken all there was in the box."

"Yes, mamma," replied Willie, "but you've no idea how very good I've been."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Deduction.

"Are you certain Mrs. Firmly's ancestors fought in the war of the revolution?"

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "I feel convinced of it. If she inherits any of their traits of character there is no doubt that they fought in anything that offered an opportunity."—Washington Star.

Don'ts For Novelists.

Don't make your heroine "drop her eyes." The public has grown tired of that trick.

Don't make your hero "heave a sigh." It is more modern to make him heave a brick.

Don't say the heroine "swept him with her eyes." All modern homes have vacuum sweepers nowadays.—Indianapolis Star.

Looks After Him.

"My old wife certainly looks after me good," said an old wag. "She even takes off my shoes for me."

"That's when you come home from some saloon, I suppose," said another old wag.

"No," said the first one; "it's when I want to go there."—Detroit Free Press.

The Time He Won.

"Mamma," said Harold, "I made a bet with George."

"But, my son," said the mother sternly, "you know mamma does not allow you to bet, and it will serve you right if you lose."

"Well, I bet my new rubbers against five marbles that you would give me a dime. You don't want me to lose my rubbers, do you?"—Lippincott's.

Sarcastic.

A pompous looking lawyer once chartered a hansom cab, and on reaching his destination he only gave his driver the shilling required by law.

The driver looked at the coin and bit it, [illegible] manner he said: "Do step in again, sir. I could ha' druv ye a yard or two farther for this 'ere."—London Fun.

Unprincipled Wretch.

"You simply cannot trust anybody," declared the lady. "My maid, whom I had the utmost confidence in, left me suddenly yesterday and took with her my beautiful pearl brooch."

"That is too bad," sympathizes the friend. "Which one was it?"

"That very pretty one I smuggled through last year."—Life.

The Exception.

"What are the dining hours at your club?"

"From 5 to 8 for all except the committee."

"Why the exception?"

"Because 'rule 5 says, 'The committee is at liberty at any time to fill any vacancy in their body.'"—Boston Transcript.

Why Eyes Sparkle.

Merriment causes a frequent movement of the eyelids up and down, and as it is the function of the eyelid to release a tear each time it comes down the repetition has the effect of covering the eye with considerable moisture. The light shining on this moisture gives the sparkling effect. Inasmuch as the merry appearance of the eye is caused by tears, we are apt to shed them from laughing as well as from crying. Tears are intimately associated with our merry and our sad moods.

Port Hope, Cobourg, Lindsay, Millbrook and five or six other places are going to be largely represented at the annual tournament on Monday.

In addition to the large powerful side lights, there are now three overhead lights down the centre of the green. These lights have wide dispersion.

Going Back.

Passing through a military hospital, a visitor noticed a private in one of the Irish regiments who had been terribly injured.

To the orderly the visitor said: "That's a bad case. What are you going to do with him?"

"He's going back, sir," replied the orderly.

"Going back," said the visitor, in surprised tones.

"Yes," said the orderly. "He thinks he knows who done it."

Wednesday Is a Day Of Intercession

Citizens of Ontario are called upon by the proclamation of the Lieutenant-Governor - in-Council to observe Wednesday next, August 4, the anniversary of the declaration of war, as a day of intercession for the success of the British Empire and its allies in the present struggle for progress. Churches and religious organizations are invited to hold religious services on that day, and the people are asked to attend them. The text of the proclamation, which was signed Thursday by Sir John Hendrie, the Lieutenant-Governor, is as follows:

The Proclamation.

"Whereas Wednesday, the 4th day of August, will be the anniversary of the declaration of war, and the occasion calls for fitting and solemn recognition throughout our province: "We, therefore, believing it to be fitting that our people should be enabled to make a public and solemn avowal of duty to Almighty God and of need of guidance, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council for the Province of Ontario, to appoint, and do hereby appoint, the said day to be observed throughout our Province of Ontario as a day of humble prayer and intercession to Almighty God on behalf of the cause undertaken by our Empire and our allies, and of those who are offering their lives for it, and for a speedy and decisive victory, to the end that peace shall endure.

"And we do invite all Churches and all religious oragnizations and all our loving subjects throughout Ontario, to hold and attend wherever it is possible so to do, such public and religious services as are called for by the occasion.

"All of which premises all our loving subjects and all others whom it doth or may in any wise concern are hereby required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly."

Not a Holiday.

The Government does not propose to set Wednesday next as a public holiday. It does suggest, however, that services might be held in all the churches at an hour early enough to allow the people to attend without neglecting their business.

Mr. Hugh S. Maguire left this morning for Woodstock, where he will visit friends from Nelson, B.C.

Mrs. W. J. Grady, Lock Street, and family are visiting friends in Norwood for a couple of weeks.

Mrs. Wood and Miss Annie Wood, Belmont Avenue, left yesterday to visit relatives in Newport, R. I.

Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mrs. Stratton went to Toronto last evening, where they will be for a week.

Dr. J. W. Hayes, of St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, is spending his vacation at Stoney Lake. He spent a few days at his home here, during the week.

Messrs. Harold Knapman, Orme Cavanagh, Laidlaw Anderson, and Herb. Dixon, leave this evening for Kingston, where they will enter upon a six-weeks' artillery course.

LADIES ORGANIZING TO HELP IN RECRUITING

The ladies of the city were prominent at last night's meeting in connection with the recruiting campaign. Most of them were representatives of eight patriotic societies instituted by Peterborough ladies. Mr. R. B. Rogers stated that their assistance in any form would be greatly appreciated and it was pointed out that within the past few weeks there have been more than ten men who were prevented from enlisting by thir mothers withholding consent. There will be a meeting of ladies on Monday night for the purpose of preparing for a large attendance of the Peterborough womanhood at Wednesday night's big affair. A short session was held last night when the following ladies were selected to act as an auxiliary to the Speakers' Patriotic League: Miss H. S. Park, convenor, Mrs. Fraser Campbell, Mrs. R. H. Parsons, Mrs. Jos. Mills, Mrs. John Smith, Mrs. W. Hartley, Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, Mrs. E. Layfield, Miss V. Guthrie, Mrs. Frank C. Neal, Mrs. J. Gemmell, Mrs. John Allen.

Colonel J. A. Currie, M.P., Home From the Front.—At St. Julien he was in command of the Fifteenth Battalion, which was partially wiped out, only two hundred out of a thousand men answering the roll call after the battle. Picture shows Col. Currie at Niagara Camp, Ontario, where he superintended his tour of instruction to Third Contingent soldiers in Canada.

Special Service At St. Luke's

On Anniversary of the Declaration of War—Patriotic Service To-morrow Evening.

In accordance with the call to prayer on the anniversary of the declaration of war, by the Bishop of the Diocese, a special service of intercession will be held at St. Luke's Church. Owing to the recruiting meeting on Wednesday evening, the evening service to-morrow will be of an especially patriotic character, when special prayers for the restoration of a rightful and abiding peace will be offered, and a sermon, in keeping with the occasion will be preached by the rector. An early morning service, at an hour suitable for workers to attend, will be held on Wednesday.

"BOOZE" GAVE COURT TWO CASES TO-DAY

Topped Off a Fairly Active Week In Spite of the Times and the Call for Sobriety.

"Magistrate Dumble's been too lenient with you fellows," said Acting-Magistrate H. Rush to John Sweeney in the Police Court, this morning. "If you come before me again on this charge you'll get the lash. They're doing it in Toronto; I'll do it, too."

Too much booze, non-support, were mentioned in the charge, and if there is anything that arouses Mr. Rush's ire it is just such cases. However, he decided to give the man a chance. "Report to Chief Thompson every week, keep away from the booze, and remember, don't let me hear of this again."

John Barlow ... responsible for the "lockup" and police court this morning, the "old boy" having a perfect average. James Jordan was given his freedom, but was told to get some work and leave the "stuff" alone. The police would have comparatively nothing to do were it not for the whiskey products.

These were only two arrested, but what of others that were probably helped home. Some actually were.

PIE CULTURE.

(By Peter McArthur)

An article published some days ago in which I mentioned the fact that the cherry pie was at one time considered the supreme test of a housewife, or rather, the test by which it might be discovered whether a girl was competent to be a housewife, has brought me a good story from Dr. Hugh MacCallum of London. According to him the cherry pie plays a much wider part than I suggested in the life of the New England States. He says:

"At a medical banquet which I once attended our great Dr. Osler of Oxford, stated that Dr. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia, had once put his culture to the final test. Dr. Mitchell, who was present, nodded gravely.

"He gave me a piece of cherry pie to eat and watched me while I ate it.'

"Once more Dr. Mitchell nodded.

"'And,' continued Dr. Osler, 'I ate it to his entire satisfaction.'

"Dr. Mitchell applauded enthusiastically."

Naturally the assembled medical men wanted to find out how a cherry pie should be eaten, for the test was one that any of them might be obliged to face at any time.

'All we could learn," said Dr. MacCallum, "was that he ate it with a spoon and that he rejected the pits."

This information contains the possibilities of much further discussion. It will be news to the eaters of factory made pies and even to housekeepers who are making their own cherry pies during this cherry season, that the cherries should always be used with their pits. Also the writers of books of deportment must record the fact that in the case of the cherry pie the fork must give place to the spoon. But the most important fact is that no matter how a cherry pie is eaten it is the best pie that is made.

GERMAN ATTACKS IN ALSACE ARE REPULSED WITH HEAVY LOSSES

An Aeroplance Raid Made on the German Aviation Camp at Dalheim---Kaiser's Manifesto to People on Anniversary of Declaration of War.

Special Morning Cable:

PARIS, Aug. 2.—Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, now in Paris, has been decorated with the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honour.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The Russian armies in Zendash Polish salient still hangs in the balance. No official confirmation has been received up to an early hour this morning of the evacuation of Warsaw, but withdrawing is certain.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—Fire broke out in the Ardeer Iron Works, near Irvine, Scotland, Friday night, followed by several explosions. One man was killed and eleven injured.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The German Emperor issued a manifesto to the German people on the anniversary of the outbreak of war: "Before God and history, my conscience is clear. I have not willed this war. Full of gratitude we can say to-day that God is with us.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—Last night's official reports say: "Some bombs were dropped by aeroplanes on Dunkirk. The damage was very slight. In the Argonne region of Fontaine Aux-Charmes and at four de Paris, the bombardment of the trenches on all sides was almost continuous.

ROME, Aug 2.—The operations of the Isonso front continues satisfactory.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 2. — (Official statement)—Russian froces Thursday night, between the Vistula and the Bug retired unmolested to new positions. We evacuated [illegible] of Tudlin and the railway [illegible] Nowo, Alexderia and Rejowiec. The Germans continue to transport troops to our front from the western front.

BERLIN, Aug. 2.—The severe fighting in the Vosges is now coming to a standstill. A portion of our position at Linsekopf is still in the hands of the French. In the east our attack is progressing. In the southeast troops under General Von Woyrsch crossed to the right bank of the Vistula advancing eastward under obstinate fighting.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 2.—The enemy, with weak forces, continued its efforts to cross the Narew River yesterday. We maintained the old front. On the left of the Vistula yesterday we repulsed an enemy attack. Below the mouth of Radomka we dislodged the enemy from the forests and drove them back to the Islands in the Vistula.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—German night attacks in Alsace were repulsed with heavy losses. An aeroplane raid was made on the German aviation camp at Dalheim.

VIENNA, Aug. 2.—(Official)—The East Galicia situation is unchanged. On the Pelpiccol the enemy succeeded in penetrating our advance trenches, but was finally repulsed after hard fighting. South of Malborghetto our advance detachments evacuated the observation post in Tryrol. Italian artillery attacks were unsuccessful.

COLOUR SITUATION IN PAPER INDUSTRY BECOMING ACUTE

The British Navy Has Established a Complete Blockade to Stop All Neutral Commerce With Germany.

SUPPLY IS LIMITED

The colour situation in the paper industry is rapidly becoming acute as a result of the action of the British Admiralty in establishing a complete blockade to stop all neutral commerce with Germany.

The fact that this blockade shuts off the supply not only of German-made dyes but of the raw materials is the reason for the domestic colour manufacturers being extremely pessimistic as to the possibilities of supplying the full demand of the paper makers for colours.

The present supply of colour now avalable in America is being raidly exhausted. This is especially true with relation to blues and yellows, the colours that are used most in the paper industry.

In speaking of the rapidly diminishing supply of water blues, which has the largest consumption in the newspaper mills, an official of one company that controls a number of new mills, summed up the situation by stating that the present stock of blue in the United States and Canada cannot last longer than sixty days. If this supply is not replenished within that period, he said, the news print manufacturers would be compelled to produce their paper in its natural colour.

An officer of one of the largest colour manufacturing concerns in this country was of the opinion that the present supply of blue in the country would be used up in a much shorter period than two months.

He informed the representative of the Paper Mill and Wood Pulp News that his company was rushing the work of enlarging its plants and equipping them for the production of its own raw materials. "But," he said, "we manufacture approximately one hundred different colours, each of them made from different raw products. These various grades of raw stock can only be produced one at a time, so, you see, we will not be in a position to produce in large quantities the materials necessary for the manufacturing of yellows and blues for the next six months.

"Should the present situation continue for any length of time, I think that the paper industry will be in the midst of a colour famine before the domestic manufacturers are ready to give any material aid."

Importers of German-made colours assert that if the Allies' blockade of all commerce to Germany continues the American colour makers will be at a loss to cope with the situation.

"Even if the domestic manufacturers had the raw products in sufficient quantities," said one importer, "they could not begin to supply the full demand of the textile, paper and leather industries for an indefinite length of time. They are not equipped to produce dyes in such enormous quantities.

"Another item, with the ever present uncertainty as to duration of the war, the Americans are extremely reluctant to risk heavy investments in enlarging their plants and installing expensive equipment on the large scale that the production of the full supply of colour for this country would demand.

"If the present blockade is not raised the American paper makers will soon be obliged to produce all grades of papers in their natural colours. There is no denying this fact." — Paper Mill.

NOTHING BUT SHELL FIRE AND SNIPING AT SEVERAL POINTS

British Headquarters, France, Aug 2.—There are points along the British front which see nothing but desultory shell fire and sniping for weeks and months; points where neither side has made an attack through the winter and spring. These are known as "quiet corners."

A practical stalemate exists. Neither Briton nor German finds any object in trying for a gain.

Other points —points which stick out, as it were—are known as "hot corners,' where the guns and rifles seem always busy. This 'hot corner' is all the hotter in these days of burning July sun.

The guns of both sides seem engaged in a kind of savage, vindictive blind man's buff sparring. Of course, the gunners have a point on the map at which they are aiming.

Target For Shells.

The road we were on had been a target for German shells. All roads near the trenches are. There might be someone on that road and a shell directed at the road might happen to hit him. In order to take this sporting chance a gunner has only to aim at the right angle of elevation to reach the road.

Usually the shell does not hit the road—at least German shells do not. One may not go over and see where the British shells hit, though the British observers, by some magic or other, seems to know.

In one small field beside this road were a score of deep shell pits. The wheat had grown up around them. Next year when the farmers plough they will fill in the holes, and, with accustomed French thrift, turn any fragments of steel unearthed over to the junk man. Only one shell in a thousand is successful.

Probably $5,000 worth of German shells had been buried within the space of a couple of village lots with no result except slightly to reduce the wheat yield. Each shell, one estimated, had spoiled one peck of wheat.

Sometimes Do Score.

Again shells in this sort of firing by the map do score — sometimes when they do not hit the target they were aimed at. A shell may get a group of soldiers in a house or in a dug-out.

Churches which raise their spires as targets to the German gunners' eyes always "get theirs" first, and usually the estaminets, which are unpretentious buildings where the farmers go to chat and drink.

A stretcher was being borne into the door of an estaminet, and above the doorway of the estaminet was chalked some lettering which indicated it was a first clearing station for the wounded.

Lying on stretchers on the floor were some wounded men. They looked a little stunned, which was only natural when you have been as close as they had to a burst of a shell —a shell that made a hit. The concussion was bound to have this effect.

One man was the best illustration of shell destructiveness. Bullets make only holes. Shells make gouges, fractures and pulp. He had a bandaged head, but the worst wound was in the leg, where an artery had been cut. He was weak with sort of a "Where am I?" look in his eyes.

Would Have Been Fatal.

If that fragment which had hit his leg had hit his head or his neck or his abdomen, he would have been killed instantly. He was an illustration of how hard it is to kill a man even with several shell fragments, unless some of them strike the right place. For he was going to live; the surgeon had whispered the fact in his ear, that one important fact. He had beaten that Boche shell after all.

And it was the one successful shell out of the thousand; that one which was supposed to make the waste of the other 999 worth while.

HARVESTERS' TRIPS FOR WESTERN CROPS

Besides the Available Help, Thirty Thousand Men Are Required.

Following upon the consideration of all available reports on the labor situation, as far as the crops of western Canada are concerned, representatives of the three chief Canadian railways, of the agricultural departments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and the Dominion Commissioner of Immigration, met in conference in Winnipeg and it was decided that in addition to the labour available in the three provinces 30,000 farm labourers would be required for harvesting purposes.

This information was contained in a wire to the head office of the Canadian Northern here from George Shaw, general traffic manager of the company, Mr. Shaw, prior to attending the conference, had made an inspection trip over the western lines of the C.N.R., and reports that the splendid crop in the areas served by the comany are to be successfully harvested, immediate action is necessary.

It is expected that harvesting will be general in Manitoba about Aug. 15, and in Saskatchewan and Alberta about Aug. 26. Farm labourers' excursions, therefore, will be arranged by the C.N.R. so that the labour will be available in the western provinces when required.

TOW GERMAN SPIES PAY DEATH PENALTY

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 2.—Two German spies were shot on the morning of July 30, according to the following announcement by the Official Press Bureau:

"Two prisoners, charged with espionage and tried by general court martial at Westminster Guildhall on July 16 and 17, were found guilty and sentenced to death. The sentences were duly confirmed and carried out this morning."

Yesterday it was stated that of the spies the sentences of two were awaiting promulgation. It is believed that these were the prisoners executed this morning.

FRANCE NEVER MORE VIRILE SAYS RIBOT

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Aug. 2.—"Words cannot diminish the confidence of the country," said Alexandre F. Ribot, the French Minister of Finance, replying to-day to another violent attack made by Deputy Leon Accambray, in the [illegible]

"Never has the country been more virile," he added. "The Government does its duty as the Chamber also can. At this hour should alone be reiterated the steadfast purpose of the nation to do its whole duty to obtain victory."

The Direct Taxation bill then under discussion, was put to a vote following Finance Minister Ribot's speech. The measure was passed by 490 to 1.

Aids His People Without Home

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 31.—M. Paul Berryer finds a pathetic inconsistency in his title of minister of the interior for the stricken Belgian nation. His rule now covers a strip of territory of about ten miles wide and thirty miles long—out of an original total of 18,000 square miles. The "interior" of Belgium is now a little everywhere—in France, Holland, and England — where the civilian Belgians have found shelter.

M. Berryer has not only to look after the several million exiles in three countries, but is responsible for a civilian population of 125,000 persons crowded in what still remains intact of Belgium.

One of the most difficult problems has been the prevention of the spread of disease. Notwithstanding stout resistance and innumerable subterfuges to avoid it the authorities have forced 70,000 of these civilians to submit to vaccination against typhoid. M. Berryer has rendered probably the greatest service to his country in looking after war babies. Many of them, born in a manger during the confusion of retreat, are carefully sought out and placed where they may have every care. The little ones that have no controlling hand to keep them out of the streets are sent to the Belgian schools in France, and those of families along the battle front, where a stray shell is likely to fall, are no longer allowed to take the risks of their elders.

TURKS CONFER ON DARDANELLES DEFENSE

Special to The Examiner:

GENEVA, Aug. 2.—A Salonika dispatch states that an important conference has been held in Constantinople between representatives of Germany, Austria and Bulgaria and the Grand Vizier of the Ottoman cabinet. General von Der Goltz also was present.

The object of the conference was to discuss the co-operation of Italy with the allies in the attack on the Dardanelles, which Turkey considers to be inevitable. It also discussed the coming Greco-Turkish conflict.

There was violent interchange of views in which the Grand Vizier and members of the Turkish Government did not conceal the fact that they blamed Germany for their situation

British Army Discards Puttees

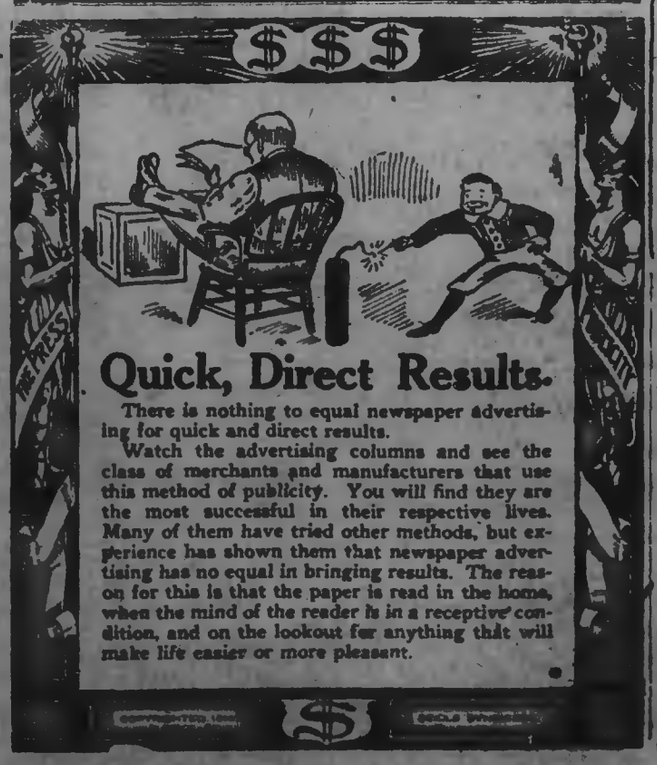
Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 2. — The British army has decided to discontinue the use of the puttee and to substitute the Russian boot.

Last winter it was found the puttee was little or no protection and led to the men suffering, not from frost-bitten, but from benumbed feet and legs.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Every sore sustenance, the heart had and unutterable feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."



Quick, Direct Results.

There is nothing to equal newspaper advertising for quick and direct results.

Watch the advertising columns and see the class of merchants and manufacturers that use this method of publicity. You will find they are the most successful in their respective lives. Many of them have tried other methods, but experience has shown them that newspaper advertising has no equal in bringing results. The reason for this is that the paper is read in the home, when the mind of the reader is in a receptive condition, and on the lookout for anything that will make life easier or more pleasant.

NOT THE BIGGEST
—BUT THERE'S NONE BETTER

The size of an institution doesn't necessarily determine the quality of its product or service.

The biggest doesn't always produce the best.

It all depends upon the quality of the materials used; the skill and interest of the workmen, and the intentions of "the men behind."

We frankly admit that ours is not the largest Optical Establishment in Ontario.

But we do maintain that, with our thoroughly modern equipped shop, and with well paid workmen personally interested in its welfare, and working under the supervision of Mr. Fowler, we get better results at less cost to the customer than do the larger shops.

Guaranteed quality, better prices, and all-round "better" service—that is what you are assured at Fowler's Optical Parlors.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

I got to Tom Smith's mound about four and before that Mexican boy got thrugh feedin' me his face was full o' worry. Some folks bother because they see double, but that boy got excited because he was feedin' six and only seein' one. Just as I put my saddle back on my own hoss, a tough roan, Tom Smith's hoss came in with the saddle still empty, and I reckon him follerin' me through the night had been some of my visions, but at the time I had thought the hoof-beats I'd heard were sure part o' my starvation.

I had eaten myself sleepy and when I started on again, it was about one man's work to keep me awake, but I reached the Lion Head a little after nine, and told Jim what I had heard about the rustlers up north bein' just a fake to lure our boys up there and that Big Jeff and Panther intended to swoop down on us, burn our buildin's, clean out the Horse-shoe, and then come back while we were fightin' fire and polish things off.

He grinned comfortable when I got through and said he had felt the same way himself after havin' tried out too many fixtures of alcohol at one session; but that he could say with a clear consicence that he had never come home with such a pair of eyes as I was sportin'. It took me some time to convince him that I was not only sober but serious, and even then he thought the whole thing was a stretch.

I finally told him he could do as he pleased, but I intended to warn the other boys, and I gave Monody an earful and told him to make it as strong as he could to the rest when they came in, and then I went on to the Horse-shoe. I found old Josiah sittin' out at his door smokin' his pipe and puttin' his whole mind on lookin' satisfied.

"Mr. Cornell," I sez, "how many men have you in your outfit?"

He forgot to puff his pipe he was so took back. "Well, only one that I'm plumb sure of," sez he. "What are you goin' to do — run for office?"

Then I told him the whole story, and he looked serious enough to suit me. "It's a fact," sez he, "that I generally have a few boys playin' at heain' regular scouts around here; but truth to tell, I'm purt' nigh the whole force just at present. Wherever Big Jeff happens to be, why a couple o' my boys are within' seein' distance, and a couple more of 'em 'll be in before night; but if Big Jeff comes before that, why, I reckon we'll have to prove out how we'll stand a siege."

"You can't guard this place alone," sez I.

"It's purty well located," sez he, "and then, I can't quite believe 'at Big Jeff 'll have the nerve to tackle me. If he does it means that he's plumb ready to leave the country, 'cause I taught him his place some years back. No, I reckon if they come they'll come slow and cautious, and we'll be able to entertain 'em plenty."

"Will your slave fight?" sez I.

Old Josiah threw back his head, and leveled his eyes at me. "What do ya mean by that?" sez he.

"Oh, I've heard tell that you keep an old slave here; a feller named Duffield saw him when he was turkey huntin'," sez I.

For a moment the old hermit regarded me as though he was tryin' to decide between spankin' and shuttin 'me into a closet, and then his face loosened up and he sez: 'Bein' as how Duffield got weary o' life about seven years ago, I don't think I'll bother to caution him again meddlin' into my affairs; but if I was you, I'd either put cotton in my ears or a bridle on my tongue."

"Will the slave fight?" sez I.

'Yes, he'll fight," sez Josiah; "but he ain't no slave. I've freed him fifty times and I drive him off regular twice a year. You seem to have the idy that—"

"All the idy I have" sez I, "is to find out how you're fixed to take care o' Kate. It don't look to me as though you're overly numerous here, and yet I hate to leave the Lion Head until I'm sure they're takin' sufficient precaution. There's a woman there, too, ya understand."

"I'm not much used to bein' took care of," sez old Josiah, "so you go on back. Your buildin's are scattered and if they really do mean to burn 'em they can easy do it. I reckon we'll be able to look after the Horse-shoe."

Friar Tuck quotes frequent about a poet who said: "Vanity, vanity, all is vanity"; and that poet dealt more in common sense 'n airy other poet ever I heard quoted.

It was only about eight miles from the Lion Head to the Horseshoe and so I thought I'd be able to attend both functions and humour the old hermit at the same time. I took dinner with 'em, but I tried my best to keep from givin' Kate a chance to ask me about Tom Smith. I worried conside'able about what had become of him, and I didn't want to pass this worry along.

Just as I was ready to start back, a man came ridin' in from the south on the very hoss old Josiah had furnished me, on the day we went after Kate's father. He was a man about five years or so older 'n I was but he looker older, had a regular one-thing-at-a-time look and he don't ride as though a saddle was home to him. He had a close cropped moustache, and yaller leather leggins.

Old Josiah was settin' at the doorway, Kate was gettin' ready to overlook my hints and stroll with me a piece, and old man Kastle was sittin' in an easy chair just inside the door, noddin' his head in the half-doze that eatin' food generally gave to him. I knew mighty well 'at Josiah was took off his guard this time, and so I walked my hoss back to him and sez, "You're goin' to have some company, Mr. Cornell."

"I've had company before," sez he a little short, and he sat there tryin' his best to look as free from curiosity as a tree.

The man rode around the corner of the house, lookin' eager and expectant and when he saw us all there, he flopped off his hoss and hurried forward. He looked younger now, and his eyes were sure-enough boy's eyes as hurried to the dozing figure of old man Kastle. "Father," he said huskylike, "Father!"

The old man's eyes opened and gazed into his face, his mouth fell open and for a full moment he just looked dazed. "Douglas," he whispered, "Douglas, is it really you"

The young feller hurried to the old man's side, took his hand, and put his arm across his shoulder. "I just heard about you're bein' here, father," he sez. "I supposed that you were still at the old place and doin' well. I am helping to build a railroad across the state down below here, and I sent my letters from different addresses so that you couldn't tell where I was, and I changed my name so you couldn't find me."

I wasn't any surprised at this, white folks not havin' much luck in fixin' names on a boy. The Injuns, now, they give a feller a name 'at means somethin' and just fits him, and he's suited with it and hangs on to it, but I hadn't more 'n got used to filterin' alkali before I gave up the notion that a white man's name was a permanent fixture. My folks stuck John on me, and my own mother never called me nothin' else, but no one else ever did.

Well, the father and the son opened up freely to each other, but Kate and the young feller was about like strangers, though they did get through with a harmless kiss. He said, "Why, how you have grown!" and she said, "I never in the world would have known you!" and then the old man got tremulous and began to confess how he had ill-treated the boy and the boy got fussed up and said he deserved it all, and I felt as much at home as a pigeon at a hawk dance, and started to edge out.

I reached the corner of the house again just a sanother feller came in from the south on a corkin' big chesunt hoss purty well beat out. It was Tom Smith and he was purty well beat out. He didn't notice any one but Kate. "Thank Heaven you're safe!" sez he.

"How did ya think she'd be?" sez old Josiah.

And then Tom Smith started to tell about how Big Jeff and Panther were minded to clean things out, but the old hermit shut him off pronto. "Where you been all summer 'at this is the first you've head o' that?" sez he.

"It's the truth," sez Tom Smith; "I know it's the truth."

"It is the truth," sez Douglas Kastle; 'I have been for several years on friendly terms with a man named Corrigan—he has seen to the mailing of several of my letters home—and he is the one who told me where I could find you, father. He also told me to warn Mr. Cornell to be on his guard as some outlaws intended to do harm."

"It can't be the truth," sez Josiah, shakin' his head. "The' was never a time durin' the history o' mankind that so many people agreed on the same thing as bein' the truth."

The Right Road.

The road to successful business may not be so easy as the well worn road to failure, but the trail has been well marked by those who have passed that way. They never needed any brakes on the road to success, but often required a whip, particularly at the rough places. The whip they invariably used was newspaper advertising. If you will think of the most successful merchants or manufacturers you know of, you will find they were liberal users of newspaper advertising. They began as small advertisers, and grew to be large ones, as a natural consequence.

Will you, Mr. Merchant, profit by their experience?

Degeneration of the House.

No jokes are better appreciated than those that are made unwittingly by sober minded men.

Not long ago a solemn member of congress was holding forth in that body in a pessimistic strain about what he felt to be a great falling off in the character and standing of that august body.

"Since I came into this house four years ago," he announced with the utmost gravity, "the confidence of the public in it has much diminished."—Philadelphia Ledger.

No Explanations Needed.

The lady jury was out longer than the importance of the case warranted. The judge grew impatient.

"What's the trouble in there?" he said to the bailiff.

"I'll see," replied the bailiff.

"Hold on," cried the judge. "Tell 'em if there's any knotty points about the case that bother them they should appeal to me."

"Yes, your honor."

The bailiff goes to the door of the jury room and returns.

"Well?"

"They ain't got to the case yet, your honor. They're still discussin' th' plaintiff's clothes."—Baltimore American.

Look Ahead!

There are some persons who ride all through the journey of life with their backs to the horse's head. They are always looking into the past. They are forever talking about the good old times and how different things were when they were young. There is no romance in the world now, and no heroism. The very winters and summers are nothing to what they used to be. In fact, life is altogether on a small, commonplace scale. Now, that is a miserable sort of thing. It brings a kind of paralysing chill over life and petrifies the natural spring of joy that should be forever leaping up to meet the fresh new mercies that the day brings bringing.—Exchange.

Some Extremes.

The coldest place on earth inhabited by man is Verkhoyansk, above the arctic circle, in northeastern Siberia. The thermometer there drops to 90 degrees below zero in January, but sometimes rises to 90 degrees above zero in the shade in July, dropping, however, to the freezing point on the warmest summer nights.

The hottest place in the world is the interior of the great Sahara desert, in Africa, where the thermometer rises to 122 degrees. The wettest place is Greytown, Nicaragua, where the mean annual rainfall is 200 inches. The place of least rain is Port Nolloth, in South Africa, where less than an inch sometimes falls in a year.

French Foreign Legion.

It is the boast of the French Foreign legion that it can provide men from its own ranks to meet any contingency. Its commander once said his men were capable not only of winning a war, but of writing its history. On one occasion, when a new barracks was being erected, the legion ranks supplied half a dozen qualified architects, and time and again on the battlefield, when the call has been for doctors, the legionaires have stepped forward and acknowledged their medical qualifications. Once, says tradition, when no padre was available to conduct a burial, the commandant appealed to the ranks. A man stepped out and saluted. He had been a bishop.

JUSTICE THE BASIS OF TRUE CHARACTER

Failure to Recognize Justice Has Brought About the Time of Trouble.

Justice the Foundation of God's Throne—Justice the Underlying Principle of the Mosaic Law—Difference Between Justice and Love—The Christian Obligated to Keep the Golden Rule—Justice in the Home, in Business, in the Church — Appreciation of the Rights of Others—Love's Victory Over Justice Through Self-Sacrifice.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 1.—Paster Russell is here in attendance upon the I. B. S. A. Convention assembled in our city. To-day he delivered a strong discourse on the Golden Rule — "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." (Matthew 7:12.) He said:

No part of God's instructions to His Church is more important than [illegible] thing that God does is based upon absolute justice, and He invites His people to be like Him—to cultivate and develop in our characters the great qualities which He possesses, and which He has magnified and illustrated to us. Many have the thought that justice is a very ordinary matter, which practically everybody recognizes and follows. But such is not the case. Many would say, "Do you not know that we are Christians, and that to practice justice would naturally be the duty of all Christians? Why do you not rather exhort us to cultivate love?" We reply, Justice should always take precedence; we have no right to do less than justice to any member of the human family or, for that matter, even to an animal.

The trouble with the whole world is the failure to recognize this very principle. Justice is the foundation of God's Throne. It is the basic principle upon which He would have us build character, and upon which He deals with all His creatures. It is because this principle of justice is not being recognized that the world is in trouble, and that the great tribulation is coming upon our race, the Scriptures assure us. While in mankind in general there is very little to love, yet every human being should receive justice. As followers of Christ, we are to be the foremost in exercising justice towards all.

What a grand world this would be if every human being would resolve to carry out the instructions of this text! There would be no "doing" of a neighbor before he could "do" you; but there would be a sparing of the neighbor, a taking into account his weaknesses and his interests. Whoever would take advantage of another would do something contrary to the welfare of the other. As ye would, as Jesus said, that others should do to you, do ye even so to them.

Thirty-five hundred years ago God called the Israelites out of Egypt. In substance He said to them, "Four hundred years ago I made a Covenant with Abraham that his Seed should bless the world. Are you ready to have that promise fulfilled to you?" They declared that they were ready. So He brought them to Mount Sinai, where they entered into a Covenant with Him to do whatever He directed. He gave them the Ten Commandments and said to them, "If you wish to be the Seed of Abraham that is to bless mankind, keep these commandments."

That Law Covenant was based upon justice alone; it did not ask them to love their enemies. According to whether or not they would render justice would be the Divine decision as to their worthiness of being considered Abraham's Seed that would bless the world. But they were not able to render justice, to do to their neighbor as they would that he should do to them. This failure was due to their fallen condition, because sin had become ingrained in human nature. (Romans 3:20.) The grasping disposition which has ever since manifested itself amongst that people began to appear; and so, although God bore with the nation for more than sixteen hundred years, not one of them obtained the reward of everlasting life which was offered to those who would keep the Law.—Leviticus 18:5; Romans 10:5.

It is not an easy matter to keep the Law Covenant of Justice. We see that the Jews failed to do so. We know that the Apostle declared that by the deeds of the Law no imperfect flesh shall be saved. Nevertheless God says, "Unless you keep the Law, you shall not be the Seed of Abraham that will bless all the families of the earth."

The Scriptures point out that the Church of Christ is the Spiritual Seed of Abraham. (Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.) Therefore they are obligated to keep the Law. To enable them to do what no fallen flesh can do, God has made a special arrangement for the Church, though not for the Jewish nation, the typical people. Knowing that mankind were so fallen that none could keep perfectly His Law, He sent His Son into the world to help our race. Our Lord, being perfect, uncontaminated with the fallen race of Adam, [illegible] separate from sinners," was able to keep the Divine Law and did so. Then, in obedience to the Divine will, He offered up Himself in a sacrificial sense. The merit of the life which He sacrificed constitutes a credit which, according to the Father's Plan, our Lord will give for Adam and his race, as their Ransom-price, at the end of the Gospel Age.

As soon as our Lord shall have offered that merit to the Father, the whole world will be turned over to Him; and immediately He will begin His great work of ruling and blessing all the families of the earth. The long delay has been because of another part of the Plan. It was the Divine will that He should select a Church from the world, to share with Him the great future work of blessing humanity. Therefore He will not begin His Reign until the predestinated number of the Church class shall have been selected, tested, and changed by the power of the First Resurrection. Then the Spiritual Seed of Abraham will be complete.

It is well to note that the Spiritual Seed of Abraham is not the natural kind. Even Jesus as a man could never have blessed the world. He could have set up a good human government, but could have no right to give life to the dead. Therefore He could never have rolled away the curse of death, with all its concomitants. So it was for Him to do something more than keep the Divine Law—something that Justice never required, something of self-sacrifice. Keeping the Law merely authorized Jesus to live forever; and if He had set up His Kingdom without giving His life as a Ransom, He could not have blessed mankind; for all are sinners under condemnation to death.

Besides keeping the Law, Jesus presented His body a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, and His reasonable service of sacrifice—prompted by love. It is our first duty also to keep the Law, to live up to its standard as nearly as possible. But having enlisted under the banner of Christ, it is additionally our duty to present our bodies a living sacrifice, as those who walk in His steps, faithful unto death. Thus we Christians are obligated beyond all other people. All are obligated to the Golden Rule of Justice, but we by love — something much more than justice.

If we could, we would be absolutely just in thought, word, and deed. But this we cannot do; for none of Adam's race can keep the Divine Law. Selfishness is deeply ingrained in our natural body; and by reason of this fact we fail to reach full perfection. But when we fail, we are not condemned; for with us the conditions are not the same as with the Jews. (Romans 8:1.) The blood of Jesus Christ cleanses us from all im- [illegible] justice; the mercy of Christ covers all that we cannot do.

This does not excuse us, however, from doing our very best. If with our hearts we recognize the Golden Rule, we shall seek to conform even our thoughts to it. We shall think and speak as generously of our neighbor as we would wish him to think and speak of us. We shall act as generously toward him as we would wish him to act toward us. This principle would be exercised daily toward all. No matter how imperfect we are to begin with, the work of God's grace should more and more transform us, that we may be more and more like our Lord Jesus.

As far as our hearts are concerned, we must become exact copies of God's dear Son, though not reaching His glorious standard. To that we may not attain while in the flesh. Daily we may need to ask Divine forgiveness for our shortcomings. But He who knoweth the heart is pleased to see us doing the best we can do, seeking to grow in grace, in knowledge, and in all the requirements of the Divine standards. This was the disposition of our Lord Jesus; and the Father loves all who manifest the same spirit. It is not enough that we recognize the downward tendencies of sin, and start out to walk in God's ways of righteousness. If we have His Spirit we shall meditate on His character and copy His attributes. Whoever seeks to do good to all will never wish to do less than justice. He would rather do more. Therefore the Apostle says, "Love is the fulfilling of the Law."

When our Lord gave His Church a new commandment (John 13:34), it included everything that pertained to the Law. Whoever has this love will appreciate that it was love, not justice, that led our Lord to leave the Heavenly glory and sacrifice His life on behalf of humanity. The Father did not command the Son to make this sacrifice. God does not command any one to sacrifice his personal interests on behalf of others. He had a Program to be carried out. If the Son desired to carry it out, He would receive the reward promised.

So our Lord was quite willing to endure death itself, even death on the [illegible] Having the Father's disposition, He sympathized with fallen humanity. God had purposed to redeem mankind and to bring all the willing and obedient back to Divine favor and blessing. Our Lord Jesus longed to do this work. This was more than justice. If we have enlisted under His banner, to share with Him in the sufferings of this present life and in the future glory, honor, and immortality, then we covenant to follow the Law of Love. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." Love would do more than keep the Mosaic Law. Love includes everything along the line of justice; it would lead one to sacrifice for his neighbor, for his friends, and for his family. This is more than justice.

Many of God's people seem not to realize that justice takes precedence of love. God requires justice; and if we have agreed to give Him more than justice we are not thereby excused from rendering justice. Everywhere around us we find injustice. There are parents who do not deal justly with their children, who take advantage of their children in various ways. A parent owes it to his children not merely to bring them into the world and to get them to work for the family interests, but to provide them with a reasonable education and a religious home training. Each should know what are his own rights in the home and should observe the rights of others.

A good man's sons might run away from home, but very seldom will a rightly trained child do so. In many homes the children are not treated according to the principles of justice. Often parents fail to realize the rights of grown sons and daughters, but continue to treat them as children. Parents should cultivate that broad sympathy which would enable them to help their children to decide all their affairs. As a child matures, there should be an independence of thought. Suddenly it breaks over the boundary; and if the child has been properly trained while the body has been growing, the youth is bound to think and act for himself, but will always seek the guidance of the parents.

There are employers who have failed to give their employes all their reasonable rights. Of course, one cannot give everybody all that each might ask; for some people would demand everything and then not be satisfied. But with the right kind of employer the employe does not find it necessary to ask for his rights. The employer will insist that he shall have them.

Then there are people intent upon managing their friends. They are always telling others what to do and how to do it. We should be modest and respect the rights of others, but should not attempt to force our opinions upon them. When others ask us what to do and how to do it, then it is time to tell them, should we consider it proper to do so. If people come to me for advice I say to them, "If I were in your place, I think that I would do thus and so; but the matter is for you to decide." By speaking in this way, we put the responsibility upon the proper individual.

We have spoken about the obligations of parents. Let us consider the obligations of children. The Golden Rule would say, As you would that your children should do to you when you become advanced in years, do even so to your parents. Children should get this viewpoint. If every child were taught along this line, when it reached maturity the parent would have no need to worry about the child's manifesting gratitude for the parental love and care which it has received. The parent would say, "My children have had the principles of justice deeply ingrained from childhood that they would be entirely dissatisfied with anything wrong."

We have spoken of the employer; let us now look at the employe. Imagine their positions reversed. What would each think it right to do for his employes or toward his employer? What would be the right kind of terms, the right kind of feeling? This course would bring about a great change between employers and employes.

So all will consider what would be [illegible] thing to do, and are willing to do what is right, we become more just in our dealings with all, including our business associates. Whether we buy or sell, there is a fair, reasonable way of dealing. It is wrong to buy so as to cause those who sell to lose money. We should be satisfied that the man who sells goods to us should make a reasonably fair profit. If we were selling, we should expect to make a reasonably fair profit, not an unjust one. The Golden Rule would regulate the matter.

While the whole Church is built upon the principle that the Gospel Church are to lay down their lives for the brethren, nevertheless some of God's dear children fail to recognize the principles of justice in their dealings with each other. Whenever a difficulty arises, we need especially to examine our own hearts and conduct to see whether the fault be ours. These difficulties nearly always result from a violation of the principle of justice.

The foundation of God's Throne is Justice. The Church that is built according to His arrangement is based upon this same principle. Each member may yield his own rights, but he must not transgress those of others. We should be very glad to see others act justly toward us; but we should not necessarily stand on our rights anywhere. Love ignores many of its own rights. Our Lord's life on earth was one of sacrifice. In the Church or in the family or in business we should use good judgment in the doing of God's will rather than in taking advantage of others.

As we do this, we are cultivating the spirit of justice. Do we not see how this applies in every direction? For instance, God's Law was originally given to Adam; God's Justice inflicted the death penalty for the breaking of that Law. He would not set aside His Law, His Justice, but He would bring in a blessing through the Lord Jesus Christ. Love gains this victory over Justice, not by violating Justice, but by sacrificing self. So it is for us to sacrifice ourselves in the interest of the Lord, the Truth and the brethren; and by thus doing, we are really conserving our own best interests and are growing in grace, in knowledge, and in character-likeness to our God.

"I wouldn't marry a man for his money," "Nor I. Still, I'd hate to disappoint one who was willing.

Abbey's Effer-vescent Salt

Made in Canada

is the best answer to the S.O.S. call for help in relieving Constipation and preventing all the dangerous complications that follow in the wake of its neglect.

Abbey's Salt is a granular concentration of the medicinal salts extracted from juices of pure, fresh fruits. It is palatable, with a clean, invigorating taste, and a gentle, sure action, quite unlike the griping and painful effect of cathartic drugs.

For many years the value of Abbey's Salt has made it the choice of careful physicians in prescribing bowel, stomach and liver complaints. And, perhaps, even more to the point is the fact that these physicians use it themselves.

Snapping Turtles.

In an article in St. Nicholas on snapping turtles the writer says:

"Considered from a scientific standpoint, the turtle is of some interest, for, although classed with the reptiles, he has many of the attributes of other groups. Thus he has a shell like the mollusks, legs like the mammals, lays eggs like the birds, can live in the water or on the land like certain amphibians and hibernates in the mud during the cold seasons, as do many of the other cold blooded creatures. The fact that his flesh is edible, however, and that 'turtle soup' is somewhat of a delicacy marks his chief claim to distinction with many of us."

Spinning an Egg.

If you place a hard boiled egg on its side on a smooth table and give it a spin it rises on one end and rotates on its tip. A raw or soft boiled egg will not do this. This habit of hard boiled eggs was a favorite illustration used by Lord Kelvin in demonstrating gyrostatic motion before his classes at Glasgow university. A raw egg will not rise to spin on end because of the unstable condition of its contents. These, being liquid, are agitated by the spinning motion and a series of whirlpool like motions is set up in them. These produce such a confusion of forces that any slight gyrostatic effect is stopped.—New York World.

GIVE PLEASURE.

There is a difference between trying to please and giving pleasure. Give pleasure. Lose no chance of giving pleasure, for that is the ceaseless and anonymous triumph of a truly loving spirit. "I shall pass through this world but once. Any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer it or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."—Henry Drummond.

The Great Dane.

It seems somewhat strange that the dog which is usually looked upon as the national one of Germany is the Great Dane.

It was in 1870 that the German authorities raised the Great Dane to this position. Previous to this the true Deutsche dogge was what was known as the Ulmer dogge—a much coarser and heavier dog, lacking all the grace and outline of the Great Dane. The Ulmer was nearer to the make of the British mastiff, minus the quality and refined demeanor of the latter. The nearest approach to it might be the Bordeaux dogge, the progenitor of the ideal draft dog utilized on the continent.—London Tit-Bits.

Pride of the Japanese.

The Japs are a jolly people and fond of a joke, and they are generous and trustful to a marked degree. They also have a strong sense of pride, and travelers relate a peculiar instance of this trait. If a traveler is annoyed by being followed by a crowd—which, however, is always quiet and respectful—he can cause it to melt away like snowflakes on a hot stove by simply halting and holding out a coin. The Japs feel hurt at being taken for mendicants. Fancy what the result would be if a traveler adopted this expedient in the fee taking cities of Europe. He would be almost torn to pieces by the crowd trying to get the coin.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Eczema Was Cured Twelve Years Ago

Dr. Chase's Ointment Proved to be a Permanent Cure

The old idea of eczema being a disease of the blood has been pretty well exploded by the record of cures made by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some doctors still advise internal treatment, but the results are slow and uncertain, and too often a lamentable failure. With Dr. Chase's Ointment it is different. You apply the ointment to the sore parts. It cleanses the sores, and soon sets up the healing process. In a few days you can see with your own eyes the wonderful change that is taking place and are encouraged to keep up the treatment until the cure is complete and the sores replaced by smooth, natural skin.

It is wise to look after your general health, keep the bowels regular and the blood rich but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure the eczema if you will do your part and apply it regularly.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering from itching skin disease. I had eczema on my leg and suffered horribly from the itching. I had a doctor treat me for four months without relief, and I was getting worse all the time. A second doctor gave some relief for a time, but made no cure. I tried several advertised treatments, but without relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ointment cured me in a month. That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a sign of the old trouble since.

'Since then we have always kept Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house, and find it invaluable for chafing, chilblains, insect stings and burns. I would not be without it if it cost $5 a box."

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. W. H. Roberts, and believe his statement regarding the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct.") — (Signed) Alex. Horne, Justice of the Peace.

Sharpening Himself.

When the trains stopped at the little southern station the tourist from the north sauntered out and gazed curiously at a [illegible] creature, which was rubbing itself against a scrub oak.

A Startling Hat.

A lady's hat which would no doubt create as great a sensation today as it did at the time of its first appearance in 1362 was that worn by Blanche de Bourbon, queen of Castile, wife of Peter the Cruel. It cost £35 and was made in Paris. The hat itself was composed of de chypre and relieved with great pearls, garnets and enamel work. Children, carved in the whitest of ivory, were depicted picking acorns of pearls from the oak and scattering them to the swine below. Birds were singing in the trees, and at the foot were bees stealing honey from the flowers springing up from the verdure. —London Mail.

The Chinese Burglar.

"The Chinese burglar is the most difficult to nab," declared Lecoq, the detective. "I might say he is impossible to nab. When this yellow scoundrel goes burgling he goes naked and covered with oil, and thus he is as slippery as an eel. But, you say, why not nab him by the pigtail, hey? The answer to that is that his pigtail is done up in a knot on top of his head and stuck full of needles and hatpins with the points turned outward. You often see a Chinaman in Peking or Shanghai with his clothes stained with oil and tiny red pricks all over him. He's been having trouble with a burglar."—Exchange.

PLEASURE AND PAIN.

How singular is the thing called pleasure and how curiously related to pain, which might be thought to be the opposite, for they never come to a man together, and yet he who pursues either of them is generally compelled to take the other. They are two, and yet they grow together out of one head or stem.—Plato.

A RECORD AT SEA.

Captain Carey Has Sailed a Million and a Half Miles.

With 1,500,000 miles of ocean navigation to his credit, and 606 safe voyages, Capt. Frank Carey, commodore of the Atlantic fleet of the C.P.R., was presented with a suitably engraved memorial of his half century at sea in Liverpool one day recently. Capt. Carey is one of the best known skippers on the Montreal service, having sailed the S.S. Tyrolia, formerly the Lake Erie, out of the port for many years. In every part of the world there are scores of people who have been the guests of the little Irish captain some time during the fifty years since he first went to sea.

From deck boy on a tiny little sailing craft to commodore of the Atlantic fleet of the Canadian Pacific Railway is a long way, but it is the climb that Frank Carey has made since he left his father's home in 1864 to begin his career on the ocean blue. That was in the days when the sailing craft was supreme and the steamship was only vaguely conceived. He was a deck boy then, and possibly dreamed of the time when he might be master of a craft. Little did he think, however, that the next fifty years would bring to him such a career of honor and adventure as has been his fate. When he steps off the bridge for the last time, it will be with great honor to himself and complete satisfaction to the shipping companies whose vessels he has guided safely to port on six hundred voyages.

Frank Carey was the first of his family to follow the sea, so when he sailed out of a British harbor fifty years ago last summer on the little old sailing barque Catherine, bound for Quebec, there was unusual excitement in the Carey home. Quebec was farther away in those days, the world was larger then, so his mother was fearful of the trip. No disaster occurred, however, on the voyage, so he went to sea again. From deck boy he rose rapidly until he became mate of a sailing vessel. Then he transferred to a steam craft sailing for several years as [illegible] in all parts of the world. For two years and a half he was in the Allan service, leaving it to enter the Beaver Line service. With the ships of that fleet he was taken over by the C.P.R. in 1880, and he stayed with the company until his fifty years was completed.

Few officers sailing the north Atlantic have figured in so many thrilling events as Capt. Carey—certainly there is no one in the Montreal fleet whose career has been so filled with stirring episodes—but the silent nature of Capt. Carey prevented most from knowing his story. He is a "bridge" captain. While he was the acme of courtesy towards his passengers, he believed it was more essential to bring the ship home safely than chat with his passengers. He was reserved always—so few got the stories that his wide experience had brought to him.

When the big liner Empress of Ireland was ready for sea, Capt. Carey was promoted to the command. He was an Irishman and he got the Ireland. Four trips he ran the big ship; then he went to the office of the superintendent and begged him to give him back his old Lake Erie. The Lake Erie changed her name to the Tyrolia later, but Capt. Carey stuck with her through all the years. It was his ship, full of tender memories and vivid experiences, and the lure of the biggest craft of the St. Lawrence-British Isles route would not take him from her. At the end of his first voyage with the Empress of Ireland he was presented with a loving cup, rose bowl and an album, all suitably inscribed, by the passengers.

During the last couple of seasons he has been sailing the Tyrolia on the Montreal, Trieste, Naples route.

The St. Lawrence.

The St. Lawrence river owes its name to the accidental conjunction of the Festival of Saint Lawrence with the day upon which the first explorer imagined he had discovered the river. Jacques Cartier in 1534 heard from the natives of the Magdalen Islands of a mighty stream threading the continent to an unknown source, and it was while testing this legend that he sailed up the gulf until he could see the land on each side.

In the following years he made a bolder expedition with three ships and the blessing of the Bishop of St. Malo. He sailed past Rimouski and on to Quebec, then known by the Indians as Stadacona. Here the fleet anchored. The French, however, failed in their efforts to colonize the country until a century had passed, largely owing to their high-handed treatment of the Indians.

ATHLETICS FOR GIRLS.

Semi-Invalidism Is No Longer Admired Among Men.

Every girl should know something about one sport at least. This does not mean necessarily that she must become an amazon or go to any extremes in the line of masculinity. But she can excel in a sport or two and be all the more feminine for it, for it will give her a radiant health that only accentuates her charm.

The day of the fragile, clinging vine is long past. The semi-invalid type that used to be adored a century ago has become practically extinct. Nowadays women have grown to realize the value of independence. They have come to know that, while it may be sweet to have some one to cling to, it is much sweeter to stand upright and to need no support. They have entered the man's world of business, and the man's world of sport, and, considering the comparatively short time of their habitation, they have done remarkably well.

Men have grown used to seeing the other sex in the roles of business and athletic companions, and the girl who is neither is rather left out of it. Aside from the indubitable question of the health to be gained from the exercise of one or more sports, the girl will find that her excellence in the field of athletics will add greatly to her personal popularity. The girl who plays a winning game in tennis or golf and is an expert swimmer as well is never lacking in invitations to house parties, for every hostess loves to have a guest so athletically versatile.

Of course, it takes a few years to become proficient in anything, even in sports, and no girl can expect to be a champion at the very start. So long as she sticks to it she will make rapid strides, and soon she will play well enough to enter the games with fine players. It is important that the beginner should be opposed by players of much greater skill than herself from the very start, for that is the only way she will ever learn. For two equally poor players to oppose each other is bad for both. The beginner must not be discouraged by the odds against her, nor must she play only to beat, but to learn.

Tennis, golf, swimming, all take time and patience to learn, but progress comes quickly once the beginner is well started.

The girl who is making her start in sports must be careful not to overdo it during the first couple of days. Her unaccustomed muscles will cause her many an ache and pain, and her hands and feet, too, may blister, but will pass off, and the toughening and strengthening of her whole body will ensue. The first day only half an hour or three-quarters should be spent on the tennis courts or golf course. This will be quite enough to lame her all over, and she will probably not feel like moving the next day. But if she can keep right on doing a little exercise every day the lameness will go not to return again that season.

The benefits to be derived from athletics within reason are unquestionable. The exercise strengthens the body, and the amount of fresh air and sunshine taken in is like a tonic to the entire system.

Many a girl who always hated walking just for the sake of exercise will take splendidly to golf or tennis.

A Huge Map.

The biggest and the best railway map in Canada is that which hangs in the directors' room of the C. P. R. general office—a map 100 feet long by 10 feet high and which took the combined efforts of three of the cleverest men in the drawing department of the company eighteen months to complete. This map is minute and comprehensive to the last detail. Every inch of railway, every tiniest islet, rearing its head in the lake or river, every city and town and village, it might be said, in the whole of the Dominion, is limned in characters which, however minute, are entirely legible.

The double tracking is shown; the course of each system from its commencement to its ending set forth; nothing had escaped the faithful and able chartographers or mapographers, if one may use the words, so that at a glance the high officers of the company may see the course of the system, the river, the lake, the mountain, the stream, in any part of the Dominion.

New Stays Are "Old Fashioned."

A new "1830" corset, made of silk tricot, with gussets of elastic which allow a slight spring over the hips, is being shown. The top of the corset comes rather high over the bust, and very straight, trim lines are given the upper part of the figure. Below the waist this "old fashioned" corset is only six inches long and makes no pretense of holding in the hips. A radical departure, this, from the low busted, long hipped corset to which women have become accustomed, but the new stay is supposed to give the proper silhouette under the close bodiced, full petticoated dance frock of the moment. Whether it is comfortable or not is another matter which women inured to the loose waisted, low busted corset must decide for themselves.

They Told the Belgians.

The Belgians in Belgium lost no time in learning the news of Italy's declaration of war. At dawn on the day Italy decided to enter the field airmen journeyed forth, and from a great height dropped thousands of cards on Brussels and many Belgian towns bearing the glad tidings in French on one side and in Flemish on the other.

"Tommy Brown."

The Australian soldier has been dubbed "Tommy Brown," and at a patriotic meeting in Melbourne the other day the following impromptu toast was given: "Here's to Tommy Brown, grandson of John Bull, cousin to Tommy Atkins, and a distant relative—very distant, some of you may think—of Uncle Sam."

The teacher was holding up a picture of a zebra. "Now, children, what is this?" "It looks to me like a horse in a bathing-suit," answered little Arthur.

Is this a clue to Point 7?

How gum benefits the teeth

DENTAL research has found that only 1.2% of the Maoris of New Zealand have any decay of teeth. Next come the Esquimaux, only 1.4% of those examined having teeth unsound. Third rank certain tribes of Canadian Indians.

Some years ago the British Dental Association examined the teeth of 10,500 English school children. 86% had some decay of the teeth!

Why? From leading dental authorities we get this answer:

Races having the best teeth chew foods which excite the salivary glands. The Maori flavors food with the juice of the tutu-berry—a keen exciter of the salivary flow. The Canadian Indian chews wood of the sugar pine.

The human saliva is endorsed by these same authorities as Nature's own mouth wash—the best conserver of the teeth—best since man began.

In encouraging a normal flow of saliva, the clean, pure Sterling Gum brings distinct aid to the health of the teeth.

It acts against what dentists call "oral (mouth) stagnation."

The importance of this fact may lead you to suppose it the 7th Sterling point—but no; that 7th point is still as much a mystery as ever.

Condemns Slanting Desks.

Stiff criticism of the old style slanting school desk is made by Inspector J. W. Rogers in a report to the Toronto Board of Education. These slanting desks are gradually being replaced by the level desks in Toronto, but not fast enough to suit Mr. Rogers.

He says: "It is now many years since oral work was dominant in the schools, yet still we follow the old custom of the slanting desk, modified, it is true, yet in such a form that no business man of standing from Halifax to Vancouver, would tolerate it in his office for 24 hours. Then why do we inflict on the child who is learning to use the pen under the conditions which render it well nigh impossible for him to succeed?"

Dominion Officials Enlist.

The Canadian Department of Immigration will be well represented at the front. Twenty-three officials connected with it, who have resided in different parts of Great Britain, have enlisted. Most of them are old countrymen connected with Canadian offices.

A WEAK HEART

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

BOY'S MIDDY SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

There is no better suit for playtime for the very little boy than the middy garment. In the illustration we show the latest and most practical form of this pretty garment.

The trousers are made without a fly and with the open edge at the knee. Over these is worn the blouse, which is quite long. It is slipped on over the head, the opening for this purpose at the neck being made long enough and closed by a lacing. There is also a wide sailor collar at the neck, but this may be omitted and a plain finish adopted if preferred.

The sleeves are plain and they may be made long or short as preferred.

Nice suits of this type are made of duck or of galatea, while really handsome ones are made of dress linen. They may also be of serge for damp, cold days, but it is better to use heavier underwear on such days and have the outer suit of washable material.

The suit pattern, No. 7,273, is cut in sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. Medium size requires 2 yards of 36-inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

A BIG GERMAN ARMY ATTEMPT TO CUT OFF RAILWAY

The Russians Are Still Holding All Lines Around Warsaw

British Warships Busy On Three Seas, Enemy Warships Have Been Sunk

Desperate Fighting Has Been Resumed on the Western Battlefront---Germans Are Using Liquid Fire at All Points

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 3.—British warships are busy on three seas. Enemy warships have been sung in the Baltic, North Sea, and Sea of Marmora.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Desperate fighting has been resumed on the western battlefront. The Germans are using liquid fire at all points.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 3.—Russians still retain lines around Warsaw. A great coup by Russians is still possible.

ROME, Aug. 3.—Italians have taken Mount Modetta. Austrians are strongly entrenched.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Germany now has ten million men under arms and in munition factories.

ATHENS, Aug. 3.—It is unofficially stated that a British submarine has destroyed the famous Galata bridge in Constantinople.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Latest despatches say eleven were drowned in the sinking of the Clintonia, torpedoed by a German submarine.

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—Germans have occupied Mitau, capital of the Province of Courland. On the fronts before Warsaw no important changes have occurred in the last twenty-four hours, according to official despatches.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The Admiralty last night announced that a German cruiser was sunk by a British submarine near the German coast on July 26th.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The British steamer Benvorlich, 3,381 tons, has been sunk by German submarines. Seventeen of the crew were landed, but Captain Smith and the other members of the crew are missing.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The Allies are now preparing for at least three years more of war, according to W. E. Cory, former President of the United States Steel Co., who returned from France to-day.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 3.—"We may hold out for ever," said the Minister of War last night, when asked if the German forces had yet entered Warsaw.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Military experts here are surprised that the Germans have not yet entered Warsaw, and there is a feeling of new optimism.

GLASGOW, Aug. 3.—It is reported that a German submarine was caught and destroyed off Scotland's coast last night.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Renewed fighting took place in the Vosges yesterday. The French advanced several hundred yards at one point.

Evacuation of Warsaw Is Not Yet An Accomplished Fact

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Aug. 3.—Even yet the evacuation of Warsaw is not an accomplished fact. The deliberation of the Russian withdrawal is an encouraging feature of the situation. A semi-official statement says:

"The strategic aspect of the situation at Warsaw has not changed. The front which is nearest Warsaw remains as yet unshaken. There are deep reasons which demand our withdrawal from the Polish theatre of war. The abandonment of territory is only temporary, and, judging from all data available, will not be prolonged.

"The retirement of our troops to positions prepared in advance between the Vistula and the Bug was accomplished with absolute freedom. The Germans in no way impeded our occupation of the new front, the flank of which rests on a fortified position. This circumstance shows how the Teutonic strength is being reduced through exhaustion to impotence. The retirement of our army was carried out at our own good will and not under pressure, and shows the initiative is on our side."

The Russian fleet is now absolute mistress of the Black Sea, as the Goeben, for several reasons, now never emerges from the Bosphorus. The Breslau has been rendered unseaworthy by a mine.

In spite of this, however, under stress of a shortage of supplies in Constantinople, the Turks every day send out a number of empty vessels in the hope they may reach one of the Asiatic ports and return laden. These blockade runners are being captured or sunk literally by the hundreds by the Russians.

SUPERZEPPELIN LAUNCHED.

Switzerland, July 31.—A superzeppelin launched at Friedsichshaven has two cabins and is furnished with small cannon and three propellers, each triple bladed.

5 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Tamworth, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

BERLIN REPORT OF THRILLING BATTLE IN AIR

Battle-planes in Clash of Air Armades in Endeavour to Revenge French Raids—Great Fleets Sweep Sky

Special Morning Cable:

Berlin (via Amsterdam), Aug. 3. — German battle aeroplanes have gone into action on a wide scale in revenge for recent French attacks on German railway supply depots and aeroplane hangars in Northern France and Belgium.

The activity in the air on the western front surpasses anything of its kind yet seen in the war.

Great fleets of aeroplanes are patrolling the sky, darting here and there on sudden raids for both sides and on one occasion at least two of these sky armadas have come into conflict, with the Germans getting the best of the duel on high, according to an official statement issued to-day by main headquarters of the General Staff.

This air battle was fought over Chateau Saline, and raged for forty-five minutes as the battling aviators poured shot and shell and hurled bombs at one another's frail machines.

Six German aeroplanes attacked fifteen French machines which apparently were on their way to make one of their numerous raids, striking waspishly at some point across the German frontier and scuttling away into the clouds before German machines could take to the air.

The fight raged for more than three-quarters of an hour, several of the French aviators being forced to descend. At the end of that time heavy reinforcements arrived for the French and the Germans flew away. Not a German machine was lost.

A German battle aeroplane shot down a French machine over Douai in an attempted raid on the German aerodrome near that place. Another French machine was forced to descend north of Saargemund, its occupants being captured.

Despite a swarm of French aeroplanes, which rose to parry the attack, a German air squadron rained bombs on the French flying ground near Nancy this morning. In all 102 missiles were dropped and eighteen hits on the French hangars and tents were observed.

The British flying ground at St. Pol, near Dunkirk, also was attacked, 39 bombs being dropped.

300,000 Germans Have Started Drive to Cut Warsaw-Petrograd Railway

By Crossing the River Bug at Vyskok, Thirty Miles Northeast of Warsaw---Aim is to Surround Armies Still Holding the Salient.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Aug. 3.—Three hundred thousand Germans under Gen. Von Gallwitz, have begun a terrific drive southward in an attempt to cut the Warsaw-Petrograd railway by crossing the River Buk at Vyskof, 30 miles northeast of Warsaw. Their aim is to seize the railway at Tluscz, twenty miles northeast of Warsaw, and surround part of the Russian armies still holding the salient around Warsaw. Von Gallwitz is equipped with heavy guns of all calibres, and has been supplied with fresh troops, presumably from the western battlefront. He evidently has been ordered to batter in by quick, smashing blows, the northern defences to the capital and force the city's fall without further delay. The War Office declared to-day that the Russians' positions along the Bug near Vyskof are good, and that there is no ground for belief that the Germans can crush their way through to Warsaw-Petrograd railway by a short campaign. On the contrary, it was declared possible that Russian tenacity and stamina may prove a match for the enemy's superiority in weight of guns and metal. The actions around Ivangorod and in the Lublin district are declared to be progressing satisfactorily, though the Russians are withdrawing at some places.

An Attempt To Bribe Italian Socialists To Oppose War

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Aug. 3.—The Rome Giornale l'Italia publishes a statement issued "by direction of the socialist party," alleging an attempt to bribe Italian socialists to oppose Italy's entrance into the war.

An accusation of corruption against Italian socialists, made by the Cri de Paris, has evoked an explanation to the effect that on May 16 last a Zurich chemist named Nathan was presented at a socialist council at Bologna by Mr. Greulich, dean of the Swiss socialists, as having just returned from the United States, charged with a mission by an American woman which should be of interest to Italian socialists on account of the financial difficulties of the party.

Nathan, asked to explain, is alleged to have said that an American woman living in Chicago and a well known peace advocate had charged him to offer from $20,000 to $40,000 to aid a peace propaganda by the Italian socialists. Mr. Greulich then was closely questioned, and is allaged to have given the name of Mrs. Warren Springs, of Chicago, as that of the woman concerned.

The statement adds that the socialists passed a resolution deploring Mr. Greulich's participation in the affair

Declares Germany is Able To Wage War Indefinitely

BERLIN, via London, Aug. 3.—Dr. Karl Helfferich, Secretary of the Imperial Treasury, has prepared for the Associated Press a signed statement on German economic and financial affairs as he views them at the end of the first year of war. His statement follows:

"The economic and financial features of the first year of the war are in my opinion, ahe following:

"First—The British starvation war has failed. Once and for all it has been proved that our domestic production of food-stuffs, bread card system and maximum prices assure even the poorest the necessary supply of food, and that at prices lower than prevailing in Great Britain.

"Second—Nor can we be 'starved out' in raw materials. The difficulties cast in the way of the importation of raw materials, in violation of international law, are unpleasant for us, but are not fatal. We have in our own country an ample supply of the most important raw materials—coal and iron—and of others we have on hand, unmanufactured or manufactured, great supplies which, with the economical employment thereof insured by our methods of organization, are virtually inexhaustible.

"Third—The spectre of unemployment has been banished. There is more work than workers. The war has proved itself to be a greater employer of labour than our export trade was.

"Fourth—So far as finances are concerned Germany will carry the war through for an unlimited time. We produce in our own country practically everything needed for war. Thus expenditures for war purposes resolve themselves into savings. These again are at the empire's disposition, as payments on the war loans and deposits are flowing into the banks and savings institutions more plentifully than in times of peace. The total of deposits to-day, after more than $3,000,000,000 has been paid on war loans, is higher than at the beginning of the war. The gold reserve of the Reichsbank has almost doubled since the war began. Notes and deposits in the Reichsbank covered by gold at 33½ per cent. as compared with 24.7 per cent. in the Bank of France and 21.7 in the Bank of England.

"Fifth—The confidence of the German people in our financial strength is as unbounded as their confidence in our military superiority. After twelve months of war Imperial 3's are quoted at 70 which is eight points below the quotation in March, 1914; the minimum prices of British consols, 65, is eleven per cent. below the quotation in March, 1914; three per cent. French rentes, at 69, are nineteen pr cnt. below March 1914.

"Work skill, discipline organization, economy and, last but not least, the categorical imperative of patriotism have upheld Germany in the first year against world enemies, and will help us further to win the war."

TWO HUNDRED TURKISH VESSELS ARE DESTROYED

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Aug. 3.—Two hundred Turkish sailing vessels, laden with coal or munitions, have been destroyed by Russian torpedo boats along the Asia Minor Coast. Ammunition, in some instances, was confiscated where it was found available for use by Russian forces.

Three ship-building yards were fired and destroyed by Russian torpedo boats and a coal depot wrecked.

German Critic Lauds Work of Grand Duke

Special to The Examiner:

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 3.—The tone of the German newspapers with regard to Warsaw is remarkably restrained. Apparently they are preparing the public for a disappointment of their hopes of a great Russian debacle. Major Meraht, the best known German military critic, who had hinted that the Russian army was in peril, is much more cautious in to-day's comments. He writes:

"Grand Duke Nicholas is fighting against the spirit of von Maltke. He has done more than was expected of him, but this trial will be too hard for him. The next chapter of events in the main theatre of operations may be entitled, Ivangorod-Lublin-Cholm, and the fortress of Brest-Litevsk, and probably will exercise a magnetic attraction upon the Russian troops, and particularly their leaders."

NOT THE BIGGEST
—BUT THERE'S NONE BETTER

The size of an institution doesn't necessarily determine the quality of its product or service.

The biggest doesn't always produce the best.

It all depends upon the quality of the materials used; the skill and interest of the workmen, and the intentions of "the men behind."

We frankly admit that ours is not the largest Optical Establishment in Ontario.

But we do maintain that, with our thoroughly modern equipped shop, and with well paid workmen personally interested in their welfare, and working under the supervision of Mr. Fowler, we get better results at less cost to the customer from our parlors than do the larger shops.

Guaranteed quality, better prices, and all-round better service—that is what you are assured at Fowler's Optical Parlors.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

Tom Smith had clambered stiffly down from the chestnut, and stood there holdin' the reins in his hand, and lookin' at Kate, and somethin' fooled old man Kastle into believin' 'at this was his time to say a remark; so he spoke up and sez: "Douglas, my boy, that man"—pointin' his finger square at Tom Smith—"is a goat expert and a criminal and an outlaw. For over a year now he has been prowlin' about your sister Kate, and he has fooled her into takin' an interest in him. I have ordered him to stay away from her, and this story about other outlaws coming is only an excuse for him to get in here, himself. Don't let him fool ya."

"There, I knew it wasn't the truth!" sez the old hermit, winkin' at me with his outside eye.

Douglas Kastle took a step toward Tom Smith and looked at him intent. Tom Smith returned the look with his nostrils wide and his eyes steady, but the red came up his face and the redder the rest of his face got the whiter the scar across his lip became.

"I have nothing to say," sez she, "and there are some things which I do not wish to listen to."

I was so tickeld I could 'a' danced, and I reckon my eyes did for a minute, and then they climbed out of my head and set on my eyelids with their feet danglin' down on my cheeks; for happenin' to glance through a little window in the tangle I saw Big Jeff fordin' the crick with his face all twisted up into a smile of welcome.

CHPTER THIRTY-NINE.

Prepare for War.

I glanced at old Josiah; his head was cocked to one side and he was listenin' the way a terrier listens at a gnawin' rat; and I joined in offhand and listened along with him. From the rear wall of the cabin came a low scratchin' and a tappin', and I knew at least one of his scouts had got back and was signalin' to him.

"Kate," sez old Josiah, with that mild freshness in his voice you feel after a hot spell and just before the norther gets into action, "take your brother part came out strong. "Kate' sez he, with just as much sternness as though he had stuck around the house day and night in order to bring her up right, "what have you to say?"

the whole reward-offered sign on it.

When Douglas and Kate had first met they seemed consid'able like foreigners to each other; but now the and colse and bar the windows at the first shot."

"Hadn't I better stay here?" sez Douglas.

"And you two boys," sez old Josiah "step into the sittin-room. You'll find plenty o' guns on the wall. Keep track of what I say; but don't chip in unless you want to tell me that you have turned again' me and gone over to the other side."

We stepped right in and Douglas took the hint and went on into the bedroom. Big Jeff was out of sight in the timber, and Tom Smith and I took down a couple o' guns and prepared to back up the old hermit. The outside of the cabin was covered with vines, the inside with skins. I moved the skin in front of me and found a wide angle loophole, so I fastened back the skin and had a good view out through the vines.

Big Jeff came up the path slow and unconcerned; he was dressed out with extras and the hungriest wolf in the world couldn't have looked any more polite and trustworthy. He dismounted when he got close, and came on leadin' his hoss, the same big blazed-face.

"How do ye do, Mr. Cornell?" sez he.

"Puff, puff, sez old Josiah, "well, puff, puff, I dunno, puff, puff, as I'm a-complainin' much, puff, puff. What do you want to know for?"

"Why, I-uh," sez Big Jeff, as though his langwidge was bogged down and his tongue was tryin' to jerk it loose, "you see—well, the fact is that I've allus been friendly to Tom Smith, and I wanted to know if you could tell me where to find him?"

"Puff, puff," responded old Josiah, "so that's it, huh? Puff, Puff. I thought maybe you come to see the gel who's been livin' here with me. Puff, puff. She's livin' here yet, you know."

"She ain't nothin' to me, why, it's nothin' to me where she does live."

The old hermit didn't make any reply to this except to puff slow and loud as though his tobacco was mighty comfortin'.

"Do you happen to know where Tom Smith is?" asked Big Jeff.

"Puff, puff," went that provokin' old hermit. "Why, yes, puff, puff, I do. Puff, puff. He's inside the cabin."

"He is!" sez Big Jeff, in genuine surprise, and this surprised me. I had supposed that when Big Jeff was crossin' the ford he could see us as plain as I could see him, but when I examined afterward, I saw that the only openin' was close to me and so far from him that a feller couldn't even make out the cabin.

"Yep, he's inside," sez Josiah.

"Well-uh," sez Big Jeff, tryin' to think up somethin', "would you mind askin' him to step out here?"

"Yes, I would," sez old Josiah, puffy and slow as ever.

'You've both done me the honour to make me a call, and I'd be ashamed to have you do your talkin' anywhere else except right in my sittin'-room."

"I'd rather speak to him out here, in private,' 'sez Big Jeff.

"Well," sez Josiah, "the next time I see him, I'll let him know what you'd rather do—though I don't reckon he'll think it any of his business".

Right now the' came some scratchin' and tappin' right behind me, and when it stopped, the old hermit sez, "I got a favour I'm goin' to ask you; I wish you'd call up Panther Emmons and tell him I want to speak a few words to him. I've heard tell that he's been keepin' sorry company lately. You call him up and I'll call Tom Smith out and you and him can confab while I'm speakin' my mind to Panther."

"I havn't any idy where Panther Emmons is," sez Big Jeff. "I haven't seen him since—"

"Don't trouble yourself to make up a lie to me," sez old Josiah, givin' the advice in a gentle, motherly tone. "You're here in front of me, Panther's not far off, and there's eighteen others, just about the whole sorry pack that's been pesterin' this neighbourhood for some time back. I feel complimented that you all came to see me in a body, and I'm goin' to do my best to entertain ya."

"That's not so," sez Big Jeff in a whiny voice. "Somebody's been lyin' about me. I never meant you no harm and you ort to know it. I'll tell you somethin' you ort to know; Tom Smith is the Panhandle Kid, and there's a regard out for him — for murderin' a deputy marshal."

"Either your momery's failin', or you think I've lost my grip," sez old Josiah, in a pleased tone. "I tried to make it clear to you some years ago that I didn't like to be interfered with; but here you are again, and hanged if I can see how you're goin' to get out of it this time."

"I don't mean you no harm, and I never did," sez Big Jeff, shiftin' his eyes. "I came to give you a friendly warnin', and now I'll go away again."

"Just a minute," sez the old hermit, gettin' to his feet: "I haven't hit a man for years, and I'm curious to see if I'm beginnin' to fail."

The scar on Big Jeff's face puckered and drew until he looked more like a crooked-burnin' candle 'n he did like a human. "Don't," sez he, holdin' up his hands like a scared child.

"Then tell me what you did come here for," sez the old hermit.

"I've changed my mind, I have, honest," sez Big Jeff; "but I came here to see if I couldn't get the gel."

"I've been wainin' for that for over a year," sez Josiah Cornell. He swung his left open hand across a short circle and then slapped Big Jeff on the left cheek with the back of it. This took Big Jeff's hands out of the way and made him wink, and while he was winkin', Josiah struck him a short blow, but straight in the centre of the forehead. The was a hollow sound like strikin' a squash with a mallet. Big Jeff's knees gave way, and he just settled down without even staggerin'. I knew about the soft spot in the head of a cow or a hoss, but this was the first time ever I saw it worked on a human.

"Put up the shutters and bars," sez old Josiah, steppin' inside. "Boys, pick up arms and legs, unless they crowd us and then the pit o' the stomach's the best bet. Dead men tell no tales but it won't do any harm if a few tales are started as to the way prowlers are treated on the Horseshoe, so keep cool, and use the best judgment you got."

He was a lucky old codger was that hermit. Fightin' was the thing he was fondest of, and yet he was entirely opposed to makin' trouble or takin' life needless. He had waited patient at his own front door and now just the brand of trouble he was most hungry for had been brought to him, and he had even been given the chance of showin' what a mild old soul he was, by hittin' Big Jeff with nothin' but his fist when even the law would have said he had a right to use an ax.

I didn't approve of fist fightin' at such a time, but when a boy refuses to grow up, why, you just got to humour him, and old Josiah's face was shinin' gleeful, so I had to smile with him.

"Listen, boys," sez he, "there's a sod roof, and these vines keep the logs damp so they'll have a hard time settin' fire to it; they're plumb scared of my tricks as it is, so they'll have a hard time comin' up close enough to knock in the door, and if you'll just be choicy in yonr shootin', I reckon we can do a heap o' reformin' here today."

The shutters were of two-cross-layers of wood with raw-hide on both sides, and the door was of planks runnin' up and down and fastened with a heavy bar. I felt cooped up and smothery, but the old hermit understood this and he talked to us open and cheerful.

FOR SUMMER HOMES

Drinking Water Rendered Immune From Typhoid by Montserrat

Most epidemics of typhoid are traceable to impure water.

City people going to the country for the summer months or even for week ends, very often bring back typhoid germs owing to vegetable decomposition in lake, river and well water.

The bacteriologists at McGill University have proved that a small quantity of Montserrat Lime Juice will destroy typhoid germs in water, in twenty minutes.

Typhoid can be prevented at home or at the country cottage by using Montserrat Lime Juice. It makes the water absolutely immune, besides providing a wholesome, cooling and thirst assuaging beverage.

Keep a pitcher of this healthy beverage in the ice box.

MONTSERRAT LIME JUICE is for sale at all druggists and grocers.

WATER WAS BAD. GOT DIARRHOEA.

Change of water, change of diet, catching cold, eating unripe fruit, etc., are all causes of diarrhoea.

The safest and quickest cure for diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cholera, cholera morbus, cholera infantum and all looseness of the bowels is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mr. W. J. Quinn, Shelburne, Ont., writes: "About two years ago I was out in the West for harvest. The water out there was so bad that I took diarrhoea, and became so bad I was not able to work. I procured a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and when I had taken half of the bottle the diarrhoea stopped, and by the time I had taken the entire bottle I was able to resume work. I sincerely recommend it to all those troubled as I was."

There are a great many imitations of "Dr. Fowler's" on the market, so see you get "Dr. Fowler's" when you ask for it.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Collaboration For a Picture Play

It Leads to Something More Real Than Photographs

By F. A. MITCHELL

"Oh, Mr. Fielding, I'm so glad you have come!"

"And why, may I ask, are you glad that I have come?" The gentleman's eyes lighted with pride and pleasure.

"Because I have use for you. You're just the person in all the world I have wished for this morning."

Mr. Fielding's countenance fell. But Miss Meriweather was so eager, so vivacious, so evidently absorbed in a dominant idea, that at heart he was not troubled. Nevertheless he said half reproachfully:

"I am disappointed. I hoped your pleasure at my coming was disinterested."

"Don't be silly. I have received an important proposition."

"Show me the man that I may kill him."

"You mean thank him. I anticipate no end of pleasure from the opportunity he has given me."

"And I no end of pain."

"There you go again. Now listen to me. It has been proposed to us—any of us, here at Wildwood—to make a scenario for a picture play, be the performers if we like, our house and grounds to be used for the scenes. Now you know why I am so glad you have come. It is because you are a literary man and can make the scenario."

"You mean an apology for a scenario. Well, I'll do the best I can for you—that is, I'll help you to construct the scenario. With such a palatial house and grounds, we must make it a high grade society play. I must look up a theme."

"I can't wait for you to look up a theme. I wish to begin right off."

"Suppose we take for our motif a runaway match?"

"The very thing!"

"It's not new, but picture plays are more dependent upon the scenery, the attractiveness of the actors and actresses and all that than the novelty of the theme. With this residence, grounds and, above all, your own sweet self for the heroine, any sort of play must be a success."

"Just think—to be a heroine!" And she clapped her hands gleefully.

"To begin," continued Mr. Fielding, "you, being the leading lady"—

"You mean the heroine."

"You being the heroine, we'll call you Sophia Waterman."

"My favorite name for a heroine is Constance Maltravers."

"Very well, you are Constance Maltravers, in love with—whom shall we have you in love with?"

"Do you mean really in love with, or only for the play?"

"For the play, of course."

"You know so much more about stage matters than any of the rest of us that I think you had better take the part yourself."

This was said haltingly and with eyes bent on the floor.

"We will not, of course, use our own names. I must have another. How would Enoch Rogers do?"

"It wouldn't do at all. I like Howard Mortimer much better."

"Howard Mortimer it is. Howard Mortimer, being in love with Constance Maltravers and her father being a grim curmudgeon"—

"Is it necessary to make papa that?"

"Oh, no. He may simply wish for you to marry a prominent politician who, though younger than himself, is his intimate friend."

Miss Meriweather looked up at Mr. Fielding with an expression he understood, though another would not have.

"And who is to play that part?" she asked, after a long pause.

"The gentleman him— I mean Mr. Cogswell, perhaps, might"—

"Mr. Cogswell would do no such thing—that is, if the heroine is to marry Howard Mortimer."

"I never thought of that. We must find some one else."

"Perhaps I can persuade Mr. Cogswell to take the part."

"And give place to Mortimer at the end of the play?"

"I don't know. Is that necessary?" Mr. Fielding smiled.

"Why couldn't that be left till later?" asked Miss Meriweather.

"I was not aware," replied Mr. Fielding, with a slight hauteur, "that a woman who is so deeply in love that she is about to defy her parents by running away with a man would have any doubt as to what man she intends to run away with."

"Mightn't she change her mind at the last minute?"

"That is a feature of realism which would be difficult to work into our play, considering the theme. It would be incongruous."

"I suppose we will have to leave Mr. Cogswell out."

"Whom would you put in his place?"

"Mack Gregory would play the part well if he could be induced to assume it."

Mr. Fielding frowned. In Mr. Gregory he recognized another of Miss Meriweather's admirers. He changed his tactics.

"Mr. Gregory," he said, "has not the personnel for any prominent part. He is too dumpy."

"Mack is not dumpy at all," replied Miss Meriweather; "he is very symmetrical."

"His nose would not photograph well. It's too long. You see, in photographing an object the nearer it is to the camera the larger it is. Gregory's nose photographed facing the camera would look like an elephant's trunk."

"Do you really think so?"

"I know it."

"Who else is there we can get for the part?"

"It seems to me that if the heroine doesn't know her own mind we'd better put off making the scenario till she finds out which way the wind blows."

"Is she a weathercock?" reproachfully.

"She may be what she likes in real life. When she goes on the boards she must follow the dramatic laws."

"What are the dramatic laws?"

"The one that especially pertains to this theme is that the leading lady must be desperately in love with the leading gentleman."

"Doesn't the leading gentleman have to be desperately in love with the leading lady too?"

"Certainly, but I can't see how he can act his part to advantage if he thinks she doesn't know whether she loves him or not. Besides, her uncertainty would spoil the play. At the last minute, when the audience is expecting to see her run out of this door, flit along the piazza to the porte-cochere, to run away with the leading gentleman, she might be descending a ladder at the back window to make off with the villain. That would make a pretty mess of it."

"How ridiculous!"

"I should think so."

"Why," she asked after a pause, "couldn't the heroine be photographed first running along the piazza to get into a car with the hero and then descending a ladder from a back window to run away with his rival? Then during the performance she could make up her mind which suitor she wanted, and the scene to correspond with her decision could be used. When I read a story or see a play I never like to know which way it's going to turn out. It seems to me our play would be much more interesting my way than the other way. The audience wouldn't know who was going to win."

Mr. Fielding's eyes were bent on Miss Meriweather's face with ill concealed wonder while she promulgated this suggestion. When she had finished she looked up at him and, noting his expression, asked what had caused it.

"Wonder that such a marvelous advance in the dramatic art should have remained hidden from dramatists for so many centuries. Who would have thought that a girl of today should have made such a discovery!"

"Are you speaking ironically?"

"Permit me to withdraw from collaborating with one whose ideas are so far above mine that I could never reach them and would therefore never be in accord with them."

He rose, shook down his trousers and gave his coat a hitch, as if to retire.

"Sit down," said Miss Meriweather. "I don't think you quite understand me. Perhaps it would be better for one of these gentlemen whom I have suggested to take the part of a rival"—

"A villain?"

"What you like, rival or villain. Perhaps we can agree better if Mr. Cogswell, for instance, should take the leading part and you take the part of the—the villain."

"If you mean the rival, I would say that a real rival might be inspired to act the part better than one who does not consider himself worthy to"—

"To what?"

"Unlace the heroine's shoes."

A prolonged silence.

"It seems to me," said Miss Meriweather, "that we have spent a lot of time without getting anywhere. Suppose we begin. If you are to act the part of my lover it seems to me that you should be getting used to act lover-like toward me. I have noticed that lovers in picture plays give each other real kisses. Must we do that?"

Mr. Fielding brightened up. He assured Miss Meriweather that they must do everything that professional actors and actresses do in picture plays, and he proceeded to practice a lover's bearing toward his ladylove by drawing very near her. Then he took her hand and a few minutes later stole an arm around her dainty waist.

"I wonder if I can have the face to be photographed in this position," said Miss Meriweather doubtfully.

"I think that if we remain awhile in this position you will become so accustomed to it that you will not mind the camera."

The latter portion of the rehearsal came in after he had made real love to her, asked her to be his wife and she had accepted him. The kiss was never better performed in the most artistic photographic production.

As to the collaboration for a picture play, that is in embryo. But so much time is taken up in rehearsing lovers' parts that it is questionable if the scenario will ever be finished. Meanwhile it has got out that a pair of real society lovers are collaborating in the construction of a picture play in which they will take the leading parts themselves, and multitudes are waiting for the opening performance.

But those who know aver that the picture play will never be constructed. Some declare that Miss Meriweather had been angling for some time for Mr. Fielding, who was considered a great catch; that no proposition whatever for a picture play had been made to her, and that she devised the scheme for the purpose of bringing him to terms. At any rate, the announcement of their engagement will soon be made.

The Old Stradivarius.

It always gives me a shiver when a Stradivarius violin is sold for thousands. For it generally means that all its music will be locked up by somebody in a burglar proof case, where all the best violins are stored. Now and then a Kubelik is permitted to play on them. But there are hundreds in bond! Meanwhile a man in the adjoining flat is playing good tunes on a fiddle that contains nothing but a squeak. With a fifth rate Stradivarius he—and I—would be happier.—London Chronicle.

"Dad," Welsh Term of Affection.

A correspondent of the Christian Herald, the Rev. John K. Nutting, writes: "I am convinced that the custom of using 'dad' or 'daddy' as a substitute for papa or father has not arisen from any other motive than sincere affection. 'Dad' (sometimes 'tad' or 'thad') is a word for father in Welsh, and is used as such in the Lord's Prayer in the Welsh New Testament. Doubtless 'dad' or 'daddy' has come to us through the intermarriage of Welsh and English. So considered it is really an affectionate enrichment of our language."

Successful Men.

The successful man—the financially successful man, that is—not only works himself to skin and bone, but he puts such enthusiasm into his employees that they, too, work themselves to skin and bone for his sake.

The manager of one of Andrew Carnegie's mills once telegraphed him:

"Have broken this week all records in steel making."

"Thanks and congratulations," Mr. Carnegie telegraphed back. "Why not do so every week?"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Inefficiency of Broken Steel.

Experience has shown that the end of a bar of steel that has been broken off should never be used for the working or cutting end of a die or punch. The fibers in the end of such a bar have been so severely strained in breaking that the steel is unsuitable for performing the work done by a punch or die. The broken end should be made the shank of the punch, while the end of the bar that was cut off should be used for the cutting end of the tool.

DEBUTANTE'S GOWN FOR PARTY WEAR.

BLUE EVENING GOWN.

For the social activities that crowd into the period preceding Lent the debutante frequently needs to replenish her stock of party frocks. A model that is both attractive and up to the minute in style is pictured here. It is fashioned of pastel blue satin, with a three tiered overskirt of printed blue net. The short sleeves and vest are of acre net.

Eugenic Impossibility.

Peace and War.

Lucky Thirteen.

The number 13, so universally decreed as unlucky, is considered a lucky number by the pupils of the French military school of Saint Cyr. At the final examination the man who ranks as the thirteenth is believed to have a brilliant career before him. Marshal MacMahon as well as Bourbaki were graduated thirteenth in their classes. General Lavaucoupet, who distinguished himself in the defense of Metz during the Franco-German war, also ranked thirteenth.

Locust Plagues.

History mentions many pestilences caused by the decaying bodies of dead locusts. On one occasion so many locusts perished off the coast of Africa that a bank four or five feet high and fifty miles long was formed on the shore by their dead bodies, and the stench of them reached inland for 150 miles. In another part of Africa early, in the Christian era a plague of locusts is said to have caused the death of 800,000 persons, and in 591 nearly as bad a plague occurred in Italy.—New York American.

Greatest Cavalry Fight.

The most tremendous cavalry fight, perhaps, that the world has ever seen took place at Doryleum, Syria, during the first of the crusades between the mailed chivalry of Christian Europe and the Saracens. The cavalry of the crusaders numbered 110,000, while that of the Saracens reached the prodigious figure of 300,000. Completely surprised by the enemy, the Christians recovered themselves and won the day. It is said that 50,000 of the Turkish horse were left dead upon the field.

Not Desirable.

John was grieving because he had no gift for his mother's birthday.

"Do not quarrel with little sister all day," suggested grandmother.

"That would be the best gift she could have," John agreed.

"Can't you see how much mother enjoyed your gift, John?" asked grandmother at night. "Why don't you do this every day?"

John drew a breath that came from his very boots. "I'd rather die, gram, than live like this every day," he said fervently.—Baltimore Sun.

Cream of Potato Soup.

Boil and mash six good sized potatoes. Heat a pint of milk to the scalding point and stir into it a tablespoonful of butter rubbed into an equal amount of flour. When the milk is smooth and thick beat into it slowly the potatoes (mashed) and stir to a cream like soup. Season to taste with pepper, salt, and onion juice, and just before removing from the fire add a teaspoonful of minced parsley.

"Never Again,"

Said the housewife, will I waste money on cake soap when, by cutting up a bar of N.P. SOAP, I get more and better soap than by buying other kinds in cakes. One bar of N.P. SOAP at 15¢ contains more by weight than four or five 5¢ cakes of any other kind—It's Made in Canada too."

Totally Discouraged by Nervous Prostration

After Many Weeks of Doctoring a Friend Recommended Chases' Nerve Food and She Was Cured

There is nothing more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. Because of the exhausted condition of the nervous system, weakness and helplessness take possession of the body. The faculties of the mind as well as those of the body are affected and hope and courage disappear.

The patient, often appearing well, gets little sympathy, and few doctors understand diseases of the nerves well enough to treat nervous prostration intelligently. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is founded on the prescription of a great nerve specialist, and hence its wonderful success in curing ailments of this nature.

Mrs. Edith May Williams,, Tilsonburg, Ont., R. R. 3, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I suffered for years with my nerves, and at one time I was confined to my bed with nervous prostration for several weeks. I cannot just explain my feelings, but I was weak and helpless and so discouraged and despondent that I thought I would lose my mind. I doctored with several doctors and received but little benefit. At last I became very much discouraged and thought I would never get better. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had finished the first box I knew that it was helping me. It took several boxes of the Nerve Food to make me well and I can truly say that it is a wonderful builder-up of the nervous system."

It is only wise to prevent such dreaded diseases as Nervous Prostration, Paralysis and Locomotor Ataxia by keeping the nervous system in good condition at all times. When you cannot sleep well, have headaches and indigestion, be warned of approaching dangers and restore the nervous system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

THE LAST DEBT.

You must pay at last your own debt. If you are wise you will dread a prosperity which only loads you with more. Benefit is the end of nature. But for every benefit which you receive a tax is levied. He is great who confers the most benefits. He is base—and that is the one base thing in the universe—to receive favors and render none.—Emerson.

THE GERMAN ATROCITIES AS OFFICIALLY REPORTED BY BRYCE COMMISSION

Dinant.

A clear statement of the outrages at Dinant, which many travellers will recall as a singularly picturesque town on the Meuse, is given by one witness, who says that the Germans began burning houses in the Rue St. Jacques on the 21st of August, and that every house in the street was burnt. On the following day an engagement took place between the French and Germans, and the witness spent the whole day in the cellar of a bank with his wife and children. On the morning of the 23rd, about 5 o'clock, firing ceased, and almost immediately afterwards a party of Germans came to the house. They rang the bell and began to batter at the door and windows. The witness's wife went to the door and two or three Germans came in. The family were ordered out into the street. There they found another family, and the two families were driven with their hands above their heads along the Rue Grande. All the houses in the street were burning. The party was eventually put into a forge where there were a number of other prisoners, about a hundred in all, and were kept there from 11 a.m. till 2 p.m. They were then taken to the prison. There they were assembled in a courtyard and searched. No arms were found. They were then passed through into the prison itself and put into cells. The witness and his wife were separated from each other. During the next hour the witness heard rifle shots continually and noticed in a corner of a courtyard leading off the [illegible] with a mantle thrown over it. He recognized the mantle as having belonged to his wife. The witness's daughter was allowed to go out to see what had happened to her mother, and the witness himself was allowed to go across the courtyard half an hour afterwards for the same purpose. He found his wife lying on the floor in a room. She had bullet wounds in four places, but was alive and told her husband to return to the children, and he did so. About 5 o'clock in the evening he saw the Germans out all the young and middle-aged men from the cells, and ranging their prisoners, to the number of 40, in three rows in the middle of the courtyard. About 20 Germans were drawn up opposite, but before anything was done there was a tremendous fusillade from some point near the prison and the civilians were hurried back into their cells. Half an hour later the same 40 men were brought back into the courtyard. Almost immediately there was a second fusillade like the first and they were driven back to the cells again. About 7 o'clock the witness and other prisoners were brought out of their cells and marched out of the prison. They went between two lines of troops to Roche Bayard about a kilometre away. An hour later the women and children were separated and the prisoners were brought back to inant, passing the prison on their way. Just outside the prison the witness saw three lines of bodies which he recognized as being those of neighbours. They were nearly all dead, but he noticed movement in some of them. There were about 120 bodies. The prisoners were then taken up to the top of a hill outside Dinant and compelled to stay there til 8 o'clock in the morning. On the following day they were put into cattle trucks and taken thence to Coblenz. For three months they remained prisoners in Germany. Unarmed civilians were killed in masses at other places near the prison. About 90 bodies were seen lying on the top of one another in a grass square opposite the convent. They included many relatives of a witness whose depositions will be found in the appendix. This witness asked a German officer why her husband had been shot, and he told her that it was because two of her sons had been in the civil guard and had shot at the Germans. As a matter of fact one of her sons was at that time in Liege and the other in Brussels. It is stated that besides the 90 corpses referred to above, 60 corpses of civilian were recovered from a hole in the brewery yard and that 48 bodies of women and children were found in a garden. The town was systematically set on fire by hand grenades. Another witness saw a little girl of seven, one of whose legs was broken and the other injured by a bayonet.

We have no reason to believe that the civilian population of Dinant gave any provocation, or that any other defence can be put forward to justify the treatment inflicted upon its citizens.

"As regards this town and the advance of the German army from Dinant to Rethel on the Aisne, a graphic account is given in the diary of a Saxon officer. A copy of this diary was given by the French military authorities to the British Headquarters Staff in France, and the latter have communicated it to the committee. This diary confirms what is clear from the evidence as a whole both as regards these and other districts, that civilian were constantly taken as prisoners, often dragged from their homes and shot under the direction of the authorities without any charge being made against them. An event of the kind is thus referred to in a diary entry: "Apparently 200 men "were shot. There must have been "some innocent men amongst them. "In future we shall have to hold an "inquiry as to their guilt instead of "shooting them." The shooting of inhabitants, women and children as well as men, went on after the Germans has passed Dinant on their way into France. The houses and villages were pillaged and property wantonly destroyed.

The Aerschot, Malines, Vilvorde and Louvain Quadrangle articles, will commence, Wednesday Evening Examiner, August 4th.

KAISER SEEKING WAR WITH AMERICA, SAYS MR. PATHE

Famous Motion Picture Man Declares Kaiser Would Have Peace Excuse With World Against Him —Owen Johnston in Allies' Trenches.

HOW MOTHER FOUND SON

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.— Mr. Emile Pathe, senior member of the Pathe Freres Motion Picture Company of France, who arrived on board the steamship Chicago of the French line, from Bordeaux, is positive in his assertion that Germany is endeavouring to draw the United States into the controversy which ultimately will cause war, thus giving to the Kaiser an opportunity to make peace overtures on the ground that he cannot combat the world. The Chicago brought 104 first and 98 third cabin passengers.

"I expect to remain in the United States for several months, and will make my home in New Jersey," said Mr. Pathe. "France is keenly interested in the controversy between the United States and Germany, and the French people feel sure that the Kaiser is seeking war with a view to the ending of all hostilities. He will declare that he cannot combat successfully the entire world. There is no ill feeling in France against England. I say this because I have been asked the question. The French nation feels that England has done her best, especially in bottling up the German fleet and sending ammunition to Russia. Another thing in which England has aided has been her assistance to France along a financial line. It is generally believed that the Allies will win, but the struggle will be along one."

Mr. Russel Hunting, mechanical director of the Pathe concern, accompanied Mr. Pathe. It was learned that Mr. Pathe has come to this country in connection with a thirty-five million dollar deal, the details of which will be announced later.

Mother Sought Son.

Another passenger was Mrs. Rose Planet, who left this country on board the Espagne last June to find her son, who is in the French artillery. Mrs. Planet said she searched the greater part of France in an effort to locate him, but was unsuccessful until one day while passing in a train she saw several soldiers unloading a freight car and recognized her son among them. She rode on to the next station, ten miles further on, and there she left the train and returned to her son.

Author in Trenches.

Mr. Owen Johnson, writer, and Mr. Walter Hale, writer and illustrator, also were passengers. They stated they had been to the front in France and had seen numerous abandoned German trenches. In the trenches could be seen parts of bodies covered with lime. They were within fifteen yards of the Germans. Mr. Johnson said, when they were discovered by the latter, who opened fire on them. They were forced to crawl several miles to the main French trenches.

Keep apple, pear and plum trees clean by spraying them well in the evenings. Use a wineglassful of paraffin in about two gallons of soapy water.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

The possibilities of this waist are so many and so varied that it will be found useful for dresses of different types and materials.

It has, as a foundation, a body lining, made without darts, in the simplest possible manner. To this lining the sleeves may be attached and over it is placed the bolero waist. This bolero is really a sham and a delusion, as the effect is obtained merely by the use of trimming placed where the pattern is perforated for the purpose.

Front and back are both gathered at the shoulders, and by cutting off the lower portions of the waist at the perforations and adding a second material a very dressy bodice will be obtained.

The sleeves are plain and are very loose, so that they hang well away from the arm. At the wrist is a flare cuff.

Such a waist as this will be ideal for embroidered lawn and batiste as well as for bordered nets when combined with plain material, silk, net or chiffon. The sleeves are to be of something as sheer as possible and chiffon is excellent for these.

Organdie will be dainty to the last degree made in this manner with little frills of lace to give the bolero outline, and cotton voile also is suitable.

The waist pattern, No. 7,246, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 1¾ yards of 44 inch chiffon, ¾ yard of 40 inch lace and 2⅝ yards of edging.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age if a child.

This Will Remove Hair or Fuzzy Growths

(Toilet Tips)

A safe, certain method for ridding the skin of ugly, hairy growths is as follows: Mix a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface about 2 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is entirely harmless and seldom requires repeating, but to avoid disappointment it is advisable to see that you get genuine delatone.

WHEN WAR WILL END.

When will the war end? The Figaro gives the following curious prophecy in answer to this question:

Take the total of the two years of the Franco-Prussian war, 1870 and 1871, add them. The result will be the sum of 3741. The first pair of figures in this sum, 3 and 7, when added, give a total of 10, while the other gives a total of 5. The peace treaty ending that war was signed on the tenth day of May, the fifth month in the year.

Using the same process for the years 1914 and 1915, the total is found to be 3829, and the respective pairs give each a total of eleven, which fact, in the opinion of the prophet, indicates that the war will end on the eleventh day of the eleventh month, that is, on Nov. 11th.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B. C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was for merly completely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

CREAMED SPINACH.

Wash carefully and boil until tender. Drain and rub through a colander or chop fine. Then put in frying pan a good lump of butter, the spinach, and salt and pepper to taste. When hot beat in three spoonfuls of cream. Garnish with sliced hard boiled egg.

German Attacks Numerous on West, but Fruitless
Russian Duma Angered by Shortage of Munitions

Complete Victory or No Peace for Russia

The Duma Expresses Resolution Not to Conclude Peace ---Demands Punishment of Those Responsible for Shortage of Ammunition.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 3.—The Russian Duma to-day called on the Government to prosecute "those criminally responsible for the shortage of ammunition for the Russian armies, regardless of their position." The demand was contained in a vigorous resolution, urging the Government not to conclude peace with Russia's enemies "until victory is complete," and bespeaking the assistance of the entire population to supply means for continuing the great struggle. Members who spoke in support of the resolution expressed their indignation that a lack of ammunition had compelled the Russian armies to retire from Galicia and finally to prepare for the evacuation of Warsaw. They expressed the conviction, however, that existing shortcomings in the production of munitions will be speedily removed by the new department organized along lines similar to those laid down by the British and French Governments.

GERMANS LOST HEAVILY IN ATTACKS ON FRENCH LINES

Riddled by Machine Gun Fire in Souchez Region—Repeatedly Attacked With Grenades—Enemy Artillery Active at Various Points.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Aug. 3.—(French Official Communique).—Around Souchez and in the Vosges, the Germans lost heavily in repeated attacks against the French trenches throughout yesterday and last night. Every assault was repulsed. Attacks with grenades kept the French infantry on the alert all day. In the Souchez region the Germans showered hand bombs in attempts to rush the French positions, but were forced to fall back, their lines riddled by machine gun fire.

Soissons was bombarded during the night with no great damage. At several other points along the valley of the Aisne, German artillery was active. Further east, in the Argonne, the enemy launched unsuccessful attempts to regain ground previously taken by the French on the Meuse Heights. Eparges was heavily bombarded by the Germans, but without result.

BRITISH TAKE CREST OF RIDGE AT DARDANELLES

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Fresh successes for the Allies in an attack on the network of Turkish trenches on the Gallipoli Peninsula were reported in official despatches to-day from General Ian Hamilton, commanding the Expeditionary Forces at the Dardanelles. "Because of the dominating position of the enemy's works, the safety of the Australian outposts was threatened, consequently a charge was ordered. The British first bombarded the neighbouring works, then exploded mines under the central Turkish positions, and finally drove the enemy out by bayonet attacks, the Turks leaving seventy dead. The enemy failed to counter attack," reported General Hamilton. "We gained the crest of a ridge at this point, improving our position,"

FRENCH SOLDIERS ON VACATIONS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Aug. 3.—A sure sign that France anticipates a long war, and at least another winter of trench fighting, is seen in the fact that the army is now "taking a vacation." Trains arriving here to-day brought a large number of men who have been doing heavy work along the fighting line. They are being allowed four days at home, the first furlough they have had since the beginning of the war. Under present arrangements every fifth or sixth man along the line

11 OF 14 VOLUNTEERS THWARTED BY THE WITHHOLDING OF HOME CONSENT

Out of seventeen volunteers examined yesterday for the 8th Mounted Rifles, seven passed; and of these six have to secure consent from parents or wives. In addition, there were fifteen examined for the infantry; seven were accepted, but five of this quota are awaiting consent. In other words, of thirty-two who were examined by Dr. Eastwood, fourteen were found physically fit, but only three could be reported by the officers as accepted recruits. Eleven of the fourteen are awaiting consent. These figures illustrate an influence that is materially opposing and, apparently in many cases, preventing enlistment. How many of the eleven who are awaiting consent from home will return to the recruiting officers to sign the papers for enlistment? Dr. Eastwood expressed slight hope of receiving ony of them.

"THERE IS NO USE OF YOUNG MEN UNDER TWENTY-ONE YEARS PRESENTING THEMSELVES FOR PHYSICAL EXAMINATION," he said, "UNLESS THEY HAVE FIRST OBTAINED THE CONSENT OF THEIR PARENTS. When we don't hear from them again after being passed, it means that our time has simply been wasted."

In the number of volunteers examined yesterday was a fairly active day; but only three recruits received from the thirty-two, especially from the fourteen accepted, must have been discouraging to the officers. Col. Johnston did not express himself directly upon this point, but he left no doubt that home consent withheld, as in these cases, was decidedly disappointing.

ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT

Report Embodying Form of Reorganization For Department is Characterized as a "Makeshift" by Ald. Duffus

REPORT ADOPTED

The report of the sub-committee appointed to enquire into the matter of re-organising the city engineering department, was adopted at last night's meeting of the city council after a brief but pointed discussion among the Aldermen. The reports contained the following:

5. Your Board appointed a sub-committee to enquire into the matter of changes in the staff in the City Engineer's office. This committee made a report in which were the following recommendations, which we recommend be adopted:

(a) "That a more complete system of keeping accounts of the cost of work be established and kept in the Engineer's Department so that the cost of each work can be more quickly ascertained, and in the case of local improvements the assessments therefor made sooner after the works are completed."

(b) "That a stenographer be placed on the staff to be engaged by the City Engineer and paid on his certificate. This will allow of the staff being so re-arranged that one of the present assistant engineers will not be required."

(c) "That the City Engineer have full control of the arrangement of the work in the office and the allotment of the work to each member of the staff, and that his orders in this respect be carried out."

(d) "That the City Engineer report to this sub-committee at any time when called upon to do so, and at any rate make a first report not later than October 1st next, on the re-arrangement of the staff, the keeping of the accounts and records, and on the manner in which the work is kept up-to-date."

OBJECTED TO REPORT.

Ald. Duffus took exception to the report, claiming that it was not broad enough to accomplish the desired purpose. He characterised it as a "makeshift." He was of the opinion that the department should be under the supervision of the City Engineer, whom he claimed, did not receive the sole support of the Council. He thought that the time had arrived when the council should go ahead and formulate something definite, and in this connection moved that the engineering department be placed under the City Engineer. Ald. Duffus pointed out that on three previous occasions the Council had made a futile attempt to reorganize the engineering department.

Ald. Edgar contended that clause (c) of the report covered Ald. Duffus' proposal.

Ald. Duffus replied that he was not satisfied with that part of the clause. He wanted something more definite.

Ald. Edgar reminded Ald. Duffus that he once introduced a resolution similar to that proposed by Ald. Duffus and failed to receive the latter's support.

In reply Ald. Duffus said he not altered his position respecting that particular matter in three years.

On motion of Aldermen Green and Stratton the report was adopted as read, while Ald. Duffus contented himself with going on record as being opposed to its adoption in its present form.

BOAT OF TORONTO MILITIA IN STORM

1,500 of the Mississuga Horse Overdue on Caruga in a Big Storm on Lake Ontario

DISTRESS ON THE LAKES

Examiner Special)

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—A heavy downpour of rain, accompanied by strong, variable winds, swept over most parts of Ontario this morning, bringing disappointment to farmers and distress to steamers on the Great Lakes.

The storm was general and all the big waterways of Ontario were more or less affected. The wind, which blew from forty to sixty miles an hour, was at first from an easterly direction, then suddenly changed to westerly, upsetting the calculations of navigators. Several passenger steamers cancelled sailings, while others were unable to make Toronto harbour till long overdue. For some hours the greatest anxiety was felt here regarding the steamer Cayuga with nearly fifteen hundred soldiers of the 75th Mississauga overseas battalion aboard for Niagara training camp.

Word was received at noon, however, that she arrived safetly at Niagara after a tumultuous passage.

The steamer Chippewa, one of the Niagara line, was struck by a heavy wave which smashed a huge hole in her bow. She was forced to return to port.

HEAVY FIGHTING STILL CONTINUES

Report Says Casualties Are Heavy on British Front Near Ypres

Special Cable to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 3. — Heavy fighting is again in progress on the British front near Ypres and the vicinity of Hooge. It is reported that the casualties are heavy.

GEORGE STREET EPWORTH LEAGUE

The Epworth League of George Street Methodist Church met at the Protestant Home last evening and conducted an old-time concert. About sixty members were present. Solos were given by Mr. Dartnell, Miss Kemp, and Miss Lottie Hanson, while a duet was given by Miss Wright and Miss Hanson, and a reading by Miss Beatty. A very acceptable instrumental number was rendered by Miss Grieve. The remainder of the programme was made up of readings, choruses, etc., the whole providing a fund of entertainment for the inmates of the Home. Refreshments were served towards the close of what proved to be a very enjoyable evening. Rev. Mr. Annis acted as chairman.

OBJECT TO EXPOSURE

Persons Bathing Along the Waterfront Must be Properly Attired—Police Will be Notified

WILL SUPPRESS NUISANCE

The City Council has decided to take some action with a view of alleviating a nuisance that has existed along the water front since the bathing season opened, namely that of bathing in the river without a proper borm of bathing costume. The chief point of complaint is near the C.P.R. bridge, where a number of boathouses are located. Here the youth of the city congregate on almost any fine day for the purpose named. The matter was brought up at last night's meeting of the City Council by Ald. Stratton, who said he had had a number of complaints.

The Mayor assured the Council he would take the matter up with the Chief of Police. No exception is taken to people bathing at this or any other proper point providing they attire themselves in a fit and proper costume.

DROWNED BEFORE EYES OF HIS WIFE

Toronto Man Washed From Deck of His Yacht During Wind Storm

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—Casper C. Basters was washed from his yacht's deck and drowned before the eyes of his wife and two men, and two women passengers, when their craft was overtaken in a windstorm off Sunnyside last night.

The survivors were rescued this morning after a wild night on the waves.

STONEY LAKE REGATTA

Representatives of the Stoney Lake Regatta Committee were in the city to-day preparing the official programmes and other announcements for the big annual Regatta event, which takes place on Peterborough's Civic Holiday, Monday, August 9th, at Stoney Lake. From information which was gleaned, the attractions this year will be on a scale unapproached by any former years. Watch for further particulars.

Providing Seats For 1,500 at Armouries

Plenty of Accomodation in Comfort for To-morrow Night's Big Meeting---Programme as Arranged Includes Big Band Feature---Weather Promises to be Favourable

Massed bands 8 p.m. to 8.30 p.m.

Opening address, His Honour Judge Huycke.

Speech, Prof. (Trooper) W. L. Mulloy, Organizing Secretary 3rd Division.

Song, Mr. Ed. Hanrahan.

Speech, the Hon. Sir Geo. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Song, Miss Dorothy Allan.

Pipers' parade of recruits for overseas.

Speech, Col. T. R. R. Hemming, District Officer commanding 3rd Division.

Speech, Capt. H. A. Stethem, lately returned from the front.

Song, Mr. Asa Huycke.

Closing address, Mr. Daniel O'Connell.

The Seating Accommodation.

Seating accommodation is being prepared for an immense crowd, and it is fully expected that the Armouries will be thronged to capacity. A large platform has been erected and in addition to the principal speakers it is expected that the reeves of the townships, the City Fathers, clergy of the city, and various civic officials will share positions in the spot light. There will be music by a massed band, vocal numbers and of main importance the addresses for an occasion which stands alone in the history of this city. It should be a wonderfully enthusiastic meeting, with so much at stake, with a great duty to be done, and surely a great people to do it. Among Canadian orators, parliamentary and otherwise, Sir George Foster holds a place among the most finished and forcible. On any subject he should be received by a very numerous audience. To-morrow night Peterborough should show its appreciation of his efforts, and the efforts of other leading Canadians who will be speaking elsewhere in behalf of the Empire and its protection.

Hence, the citizens are assured of comfortable accommodation. In every other respect it is up to them.

Band Programme.

A deachment of the 57th Band will mann the recruiting car at 11.55 Wednesday morning, Aug. 4th. Fife and Drum Bands from No. 50 and No. 80 L.O.L. Lodges will mann the recruiting car Wednesday night at 7 p.m., also on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at 7 p.m.

On Wednesday night the following six bands will parade from the outskirts of the town to the armouries, (recruiting centre).

1st—Salvation Army Band, Forde's section, Braund's store, corner Park and Chamberlen, via Rubidge, Charlotte and George streets.

2nd—57th Band, Sergt. Hughes' section, from corner Park and McDonnell, via McDonnel to Armouries.

3rd—Bugle Band, start Nicholls Hospital, via George to Armouries.

4th—57th Batt., (Sergt. Chambers' section, start East City, start cor. Rogers and Hunter, via Hunter and George to Armouries.

5th—Salvation Army, Peryer's section, start corner Lock and Crescent, via Lock and George to Armouries.

6th—Maple Leaf Band, start Exhibition Park, foot of Aylmer, via Aylmer, Hunter and George to Armouries.

COUNCIL TO CONSIDER FUND FOR BATTALIONS

Have No Present Finances to Meet Requests for Contributions and Expects Future Battalions May Make Similar Appeals---Special Meeting Will Be Called.

Officers of the 59th Battalion, of which the Peterborough detachment forms a part, waited upon the City Council last evening with the request for a grant of $1,500 towards the regimental fund. This fund is used to purchase various extras not provided for in the regular equipment, and which are essential for the comfort and well being of the men. After due deliberation, the Council decided that the best interests of all concerned would be served if a special meeting was called at an early date when the whole matter will be brought to the attention of the Council in a way that promises success. The aldermen as a body were impressed with the necessity of creating a regimental fund and were willing to make a substantial contribution towards it. At the same time, they were of the opinion that as long as the war lasted other battalions would be created and similar demands would be forthcoming. In consideration of this it was felt some steps should be taken to ascertain the actual as well as the prospective needs of the 59th as well as future battalions and endeavour by some means or other to raise a sum sufficient for all purposes. This may be done by direct application to the Executive Council of the Ontario Legislation for permission to issue debentures covering a period of ten years.

At present funds are not available for such a purpose as set out in the request of the officers of the 59th Battalion. If such requests are to be met from time to time an emergency fund will have to be provided. The Council expressed its intention of devising ways and means of securing sufficient funds for the needs of both the 59th Battalion and the 8th Mounted Rifles, in the form of a resolution which received the unanimous endorsation of the entire Council.

The Speakers.

Capt. M. Park, representing the 59th Battalion, said it was the intention of the regiment to raise, if possible, a regimental fund of $5,000. He made an earnest appeal for a contribution from the City Council which was followed by a similar appeal made by Major S. T. Medd of the 8th Mounted Rifles.

"After all it seems to be a question of what we ought to do and what the members of the Council should do as our representatives," said His Honour Judge Huycke, who was present at the meeting on behalf of the battalion. Continuing he said, "Things are in a critical condition. We might disguise it or we may not, just as we like. It is a fight for life and death. If the war went on the way our enemies would wish we would have a Prussian drum major coming in here and demanding whatever was required. Of course every grant that is made by this Council increases the taxation. There are cranks in the community as in other communities who would object to a grant regardless of the purpose. Such cranks ought not to be considered. By helping the men who have gone forth to fight the Empire's battles you will be the benefactor of the homes and dependents of those men. As aldermen you will be abused anyway."

In conclusion Judge Huycke paid a glowing tribute to the manufacturers of this city who had offered every facility for encouraging enlistment even to the extent of promising men who enlist, positions upon their return. He also reported a donation of $100 made by the newly formed Woman's Chapter out of $150 which the treasury contained.

The Stay-At-Home's Part.

Mr. D. O'Connell said that the matter was one which should meet with ready response. It meant increased demands upon those at home, but then that was the part we who stayed at home would be expected to pay.

"This is one case where we cannot be generous to a fault," said Lieut.-Col. Walker of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., who is an active member of the Peterborough Cheese Board, promised to take the matter up with the Board and see if it would not be possible to have one day's make of cheese set aside for patriotic purposes.

Mr. H. Winch expressed his approval of the grant.

In reply to the request of the deputation, Ald. Duffus said that while he approved of the proposal, he felt that in view of the absence of any special fund for such a purpose, a special meeting should be called and the matter thoroughly dealt with. He pointed out that a great many people were at present suffering privation as a result of the war and in many cases were unable to pay their taxes.

Ald. Green concurred with Ald. Duffus, adding that he thought it would be possible to secure some form of legislation from the Provincial Government authorizing the Council to borrow money for such a purpose as named by the deputation.

Both Ald. Edgar and Ald. Dobbin expressed their approval of the proposed grant.

Mayor Buller promised to call a special meeting of the City Council at an early date in accordance with the resolution passed by the Council.

AN EXAMPLE.

Every male member of St. Luke's, Anglican, Church, Brantford, capable of bearing arms, is at the present time either at the front, or in one of the training camps preparing to go. They realize the situation, they see the peril and nobly respond to the call of King and country, home and humanity.

TEN MILLION ARGUMENTS.

See what we have to meet. Major Eric Dillon, of the British General Staff, in a sworn statement, asserts that the German Government has under arms a total of ten million men. These are ten million arguments for recruiting. When we note the stake for which we are playing — national life and individual liberty — there should be no laggards in offering to serve in the Canadian forces. There is need for every man that is fit; for every man that can do his bit.

MANITOBA ELECTIONS.

The Liberal Government of Manitoba, under the leadership of Hon. T. C. Norris, is appealing to the country in a general election. This seems to be, and is, an inopportune time for holding an election; but in this case it is practically unavoidable. The Roblin Government fell asunder of its own rottenness. Confessing guilt in respect of serious charges of improper conduct in office, of exploiting government contracts to secure campaign funds, etc., the Roblin Government resigned, and Mr. Norris, Liberal leader, was called upon to form a government, which he did. So far, however, it is a government only in name; it has not received the endorsation of the electors, and cannot be called a government in the constitutional sense. It has not a majority in the present legislature, and so an appeal to the people is compulsory. Of the result of this appeal there seems to be little room for doubt. The Roblin Government, by its own admission, had forfeited the confidence of the country; its record was bad. The record of the Norris Government is unimpeachable; as a government it has no record at all. A ludicrously lame attempt was made to besmirch it in advance. The Roblin party brought a charge against Leader Norris and his Government, that as members of the Opposition they had colluded with the Conservative party in a corrupt attempt to stifle election petitions. A Royal Commission was appointed, and its report completely exonerates the Liberal leader and his associates. The failure of the Fullerton charges, made on the assertion of fourteen Conservative members, was, under the circumstances expected; they were very evidently made without foundation, for not one of the fourteen Conservative members was called to testify as to the truth of the charges he fathered. They were evidently made with the sole object of breaking the force of the charges against the later government, which were in process of being proved to the hilt, with other, as serious charges, in reserve—but to form the subject of further investigation. The Norris Government will probably be returned with a good majority. The electors can do no other, unless they rehabilitate the Roblin Government, which is still under judgment; for the Aikins-Rogers new combination is plainly only the Roblin-Rogers party under a new name. The people of Manitoba have suffered too much under the Roblin-Rogers regime, to vote for a continuance of the reign of extravagance and governmental corruption, which became so heavy that the Roblin Government itself grew sick of it and condemned it by resigning office, one of the few good actions to its credit. Partyism is strong in endurance, but there are some things it cannot, and will not stand.

THE DUTY OF DEFENCE.

The man who does not sentimentally, and, in time of need, practically, recognize the duty of defending his country, native or adopted, does not deserve to have a country to defend. The man who is not in the fighting ranks in one capacity or another, is a mere camp follower, a cipher in citizenship.

In this great war, which, according to indications, is only fairly begun, we are all enlisted, or should be enlisted. It is the duty of those who can fight to join the ranks; it is the duty of those who are deprived of the privilege of active service to fight in their own way.

We are all, from the child to the grandsire, from the able-bodied man of military age, to the ineligible for service, called upon to do our bit.

First of all comes the call for the soldier who can bear arms. When our eligibles are in the field then comes the duty of other citizens to back them; to form the home reserves; to furnish supplies, and other things that will contribute to the comfort, well-being and fullest efficiency of the men in the field.

Do we all recognize the duty whose call comes to us all? Do we realize the necessity, the absolute necessity for the presence in the ranks of every fighting man? Do we realize that the call of military service in this tremendous crisis, comes to us with both the voice of patriotism and with the voice of divine authority? Our Blessed Lord distinctly commanded our service—

"Show me a penny. Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, Caesar's. And he said unto them, Render, therefore, unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's."

Here we have a distinct and definite command to be loyal to the state; to stand by and defend the state as constituted by man. This loyalty involves defence of the state for its preservation, from the enemies that would destroy it. Our state is menaced; Canada, as a country, as a part of the Empire, is threatened with the worst of calamities, the destruction of the liberties, the freedom which our fathers won for us with their blood. Without these liberties, with German tyranny, German cruelty, German brutality of administrative methods, substituted, as they will be if we don't help prevent it, our country would not be worth living in.

The first step in preserving our country and our liberties, is to join the ranks of the army that is fighting the most powerful, most determined foe, to human liberty, and human happiness the world has even seen. This is the plain duty of the citizen, and the plain duty of the men who would heed the divine command. The words of the Master show that the duty of loyalty, of defence of one's country, is placed on the same level as our duty to God—"Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." Loyalty to our country, and loyalty to our Maker, are commanded in equal terms.

Loyalty to our country, and loyalty to its demands for service, are not only divinely ordered duties, but natural duties. Shall not the young men of Canada have as high a conception of patriotism as the heathen Roman? In Macaulay's matchless Lays, he makes the self-sacrificing Horatius say:—

How can man die better
Than facing fearful odds,
For the ashes of his fathers
And the altars of his gods?—

Than dying for his country and his religion. Both are involved in the present crisis. If our country goes — passes under German domination, our religion, our Christianity, goes also. Germany in practice, has denied the faith and become worse than an infidel. Germany has deposed the head of Christianity and substituted, in injunction and methods, the cruel gods of the heathen Saxons, Odin and Thor, and are offering up the reeking sacrifices of human blood. The issue in this fight is between Christianity and its fruits, and heathenism and its harvest of horrors.

The choice to-day is between God and Mammon; between British freedom and Prussian slavery. We are making our choice to-day. It depends upon ourselves—upon our young men of military age, and the rest of us behind them, to make the choice. Every volunteer for the ranks is a vote for Christianity, civilization, freedom. Every slacker and holder-back, represents a vote for the Hun, the rule of the Hun, the spirit of the Hun, the rule of blood and iron; for, as surely as we permit Germany to conquer, so surely shall we come under German domination, and all that that catastrophe implies.

SERVICE AT ST. LUKE'S AT 7 A.M.

The anniversary of the declaration of war will be observed at St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, to-morrow morning, when there will be a celebration of Holy Communion at seven o'clock.

THERE'S WORK IN THIS WAR FOR EVERY LOYAL CANADIAN

In such a war as that now being waged there is but one issue for every loyal subject; and that is how to help to win. All other questions are trifling and trumpery or traitorous by comparison. To attach importance at such a time to local party, class, or sectarian subjects is treason; and to weaken the national defence by creating division among the people, by means of appeals to sectional prejudice, is the most despicable treachery of which a man can be guilty.

Why? The enemy is paying lavishly for just such rascally business. Why should any human being do the Kaiser's dirty work for nothing? Invincible ignorance, unconquerable stupidity, contemptible meanness, are among the least loathsome causes of such criminal follies. When our own people are being slaughtered in thousands; when our homes are threatened; when the integrity of our Empire is menaced; when the women and children of Belgium are being outraged and tortured; when unarmed men are being murdered by wholesale; when whole cities, towns and villages are being reduced to ashes; when the temples of the living God are being profaned, His altars thrown down, and His prophets slain with the sword, for any man to lift a finger or to utter a word, to prevent Canada's doing all that she can do to stop these crimes, he is a dastard and is doing the work of the devil.

Yet there are men who declare that they are embarrassing the national defence for the sake of their religion. And some of them are doing it conscientiously. Let all such work be left to the benighted barbarians and their hired spies.

We are doing much for the cause of humanity and civilization, but we are not yet doing enough. We have not yet achieved the ideal of a nation in arms. This does not mean conscription. Conscription is not necessary in Canada; it is only a bogey with which to frighten cowards, and we haven't enough cowards in Canada to call for conscription. But just now service should be practically universal, although not compulsory. It should be recognized as a disgrace—which it really is — not to be doing something for the defence of the Empire. We may have to be a nation in arms and the sooner we show that we are ready for any emergency, the less likelihood there is that we shall have to join the colours. If Great Britain had been ready for war there might have been no war. The tension between the United States and Germany is approaching a critical stage and Hyphenated Huns on this continent may cause trouble on both sides of the border. We ought not to be dependent upon our neighbours to save us from hostile raids; we should be prepared to co-operate with them in the protection of both countries. Let Canada present the spectacle of a thoroughly united nation in arms and there will be no invasion of Canadian territory. There is no room here for mealy-mouthed mollycoddles or for easimists. The lugubrious lubbers who go around prophesying defeat and disaster would do infinite damage to the morale of the nation if people generally were to take them seriously. The answer to their jeremiads ought to be: "If you really believe all that melancholy rubbish, why are you not doing something to prevent the disaster which overshadows you?"

Not every man is physically fit to serve in the trenches of France or Belgium, but nearly every man can do something to help in the fight. Battles are won to-day not so much in the cricket fields of Eton as in the factories. Then in a country like Canada, it is the exception for the native-born and the British-born at least not to know something about firearms. If all the men who know one end of a rifle from the other and can hit a haystack at forty yards were organized and given a little instruction, no Hyphenated Huns would want to come here, or to stay long if they did come.

The Home Guard is a move in the right direction, if only wants developing and every loyal man and woman will lend a hand. The man who cannot shoulder a rifle can buy a rifle for some other fellow to shoulder. The mere fact of seeing the great majority wearing the King's uniform will be enough to make traitors tremble and Kaiser's spies going up and down in the dry places of the earth will find Canada a very dry place. —Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

PORT HOPE AND PETERBORO'. RINKS ARE THE WINNERS

The Annual Tournament of the Central Ontario Bowlers' Association Was a Decided Success

In the annual tournament of the Central Ontario Bowlers' Association, held here yesterday, the Port Hope rink, skipped by Rev. T. D. McCullough, won the Hon. J. R. Stratton trophy, and the Peterborough rink, skipped by Mr. R. M Waddell, won the G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A. trophy.

The tournament yesterday, although a decided success in every way, was not the largest in the history of the Association, but there was a counter attraction at Bowmanville for bowlers, where another tournament was being held. However, the tournament in Peterborough was most successful and harmonious and the weather was all that could be desired.

The results of the final games were as follows:

STRATTON TROPHY.

Port Hope.	Cobourg.
H. Dore	F. Bridge
Jas. Bonny	G. Scott
H. Walker	Dr. Furis
Rev. T. D. McCullough	E. A. Hargraft
Skip 16	Skip 12

GILLESPIE TROPHY.

Peterborough.	Port Hope.
R. Grant	A. Gordon
E. Taylor	W. Telford
Jas. Skinner	D. Howie
R. M. Waddell	D. McMillan
Skip 9	Skip 8

—30—Messrs. Sutton, Williams, Fletcher, Cressman, Weller, Smythe, Meyers.

—15—Messrs. Scott, Darling, Cranfield, Payne, Griffin, Thompson, Jackson, Bowness, B. Hamilton, Jepson, Gilchrist, G. O. Cameron, Shields.

O—Messrs. Lillico, R. Turner, Moore, J. McKee, Kerr, Hamilton, Walton, Robinson, McNellan, Whatley, Lee, Hartshorn, A. F. Knight, Dearle, Roy Smith, Preston, Gilbert, Kelly, Father McCauley, Sisson, Heaslip, C. McKee, Adair, Dobbin, Raynor, Palmer.

+15—Messrs. Hillier, Lefevre, McDonald, Lateilier, Murray, Gordon, Rush, McFadden, Corkery, Williams.

Will secretaries please send the results of the games played to Mr. Ed. Walton as soon as possible as several games in the doubles have not as yet been reported?

HAMILTON ATHLETES FORMING A BATTERY

Hamilton's patriotic enthusiasm is gathering volume with its speed. To assist in buying machine guns every woman and girl in the city is expected to give at least ten cents, the main feature being that each individual should make a contribution. The athletes of the city have come forward with a proposal to form a Sportsman Battery. Those who will prepare for officers' positions have been selected. Command of the battery will be given to the following:

John L. Counsell, ex-'Varsity and Tiger Rugby star.

Gordon H. Southam, ex-'Varsity and Tiger hockey and Rugby player.

A. M. Boyd, former 'Varsity Rugby player.

T. A. Beasley, Trinity College Rugby and hockey star.

W. D. Wilson, ex-McGill hockey player.

N. E. Wallace, Trinity College player.

Those selected as non-commissioned officers include W. J. (Bill) Grant; R. F. Thomson, Harvey Moffat, Tiger Intermediates; J. M. (Mawk) McKenzie;; S. W. Turpin; James A. Young; Russel Davis, S. B. Nelson, Ralph R. Howell, W. L. Ballentine.

These steps were not undertaken until there was assurance that the ranks could be filled up, and this is now practically secured.

THE SOLDIERS IN KHAKI.

Splendid their gate! trained, resolute, bold;
They are the men of our hopes today,
They are the men that we trust to stand
Steady, and sure, in the awful fray;
Pray for them, succour them all you can—
Loyal, unshrinking, strong, ready, and true,
Let us honour the brave—both the khaki and blue!

THOSE INNOCENT DUCKS.

They Did Not Know About Father Healy's Green Peas.

Father James Healy, the Sydney Smith of the Irish metropolis, figures in many anecdotes told by Judge Bodkin in his "Recollections." Father Healy was poor, and used to say, good-humoredly, that he did not know how he would live at all if it were not for the "outdoor relief" he received. A fine clutch of young ducks reached him, and, seeing them sporting in the water, he exclaimed, with a whimsical compassion, "Poor innocents, how they enjoy themselves, never thinking that my green peas are growing on the other side of the garden wall!"

For one of the stories about the father, Mr. Bodkin does not vouch. One Christmas night, at a small gathering at the Vice-regal Lodge, the beautiful Countess Spencer (Spenser's "Faerie Queene," as she was called in Ireland) stood defiantly under a cluster of silver berries and sent a playful challenge to Father Healy. "Now, Padre, now is your chance under the mistletoe." Like a flash came the smiling reply, "Oh, no, my lady; we only do that sub rosa!"

On one occasion, Mr. Bodkin tells, Lord Justice Holmes was amusingly countered by a junior barrister who was defending a prisoner before him. Though the prisoner was a rather elderly man, counsel made frequent appeals to the jury to take into account the fact that he was an orphan. The judge grew impatient.

"I really don't see," he exclaimed, "how the fact that your client is an orphan bears on the case. He is old enough to take care of himself, and it is quite natural, at his age, he should have lost his parents. For instance, I myself am an orphan." "Yes, my lord," interposed the counsel, "and should your lordship ever have the misfortune to come before a jury of your fellow-countrymen, I trust that circumstance will be taken into consideration in your lordship's favor."

A Poser For Tennyson.

A well-known engineer recently took a magazine writer to task because the latter in an article on skyscrapers had used so many untechnical expressions.

The magazine writer replied to the criticism by suggesting that the engineer would better absorb the story which is told of Lord Tennyson, the great English poet, and Charles Babbage, the famous English mathematician, and which illustrates the folly of attempting to measure literature with a footrule.

Tennyson once wrote a poem called "The Vision of Sin," with lines which ran:

Every moment dies a man,
Every moment one is born

Babbage wrote to the poet:

"In your otherwise beautiful poem there is a verse which reads:

"Every moment dies a man,
Every moment one is born.

"It must be manifest that were this true the population of the world would be at a standstill. In truth the rate of birth is slightly in excess of that of death.

"I would suggest that in the next issue of your poem you have it read:

"Every moment dies a man,
Every moment 1 1-16 is born.

"Strictly speaking, that is not correct. The actual figures is a decimal so long I cannot get it in the line, but I believe 1-16 will be sufficiently accurate for poetry. I am," etc.

Imitating the Music of a Cascade.

Certain tribes on the Amazon have been fascinated by the music of the waterfall. Musical instruments were found in use among them consisting of a complicated mechanism by which water was poured from one bowl into another, in imitation of the cascade, and then returned by the receiving bowl into the vessel which had poured it, so that by a repetition of this mechanism a constant murmur of a cascade could be kept up so long as the audience desired or the player was able to perform it.

A GENIAL SMILE.

Who can tell the value of a genial smile? It costs the giver nothing, but is beyond price to the erring and relenting, the sad and cheerless, the lost and forsaken. It disarms malice, subdues temper, turns hatred into love and paves the darkest paths with sunlight.

SITUATION BEFORE WARSAW REMAINS UNCHANGED AND OBSCURE

But Austro-German Forces Occupy Mitau in Courland and Have Had Further Progress Beyond Cholm in South-east Poland

LONDON, Aug. 3. — While the Austro-Germans continue to tighten the wings of their great eastern battle front, with success at both extremities, including the occupation of Mitau in the north and further progress beyond Cholm in Southeast Poland, the situation before Warsaw proper remains unchanged and obscure.

Few additional details have reached London concerning the plans for the abandonment of the city, but apparently the time has not arrived for the Russians to relinquish their increasingly precarious hold on the capital, or, at least, no word of its evacuation has come to London.

Ivangorod, south-east of Warsaw, heretofore erroneously reported invested, is now nearing that state in fact, according to the Berlin announcement; but from Ivangorod eastward to Cholm, and beyond, the Russians, who had to abandon the railway, are fighting most desperately in an endeavour to hold up Field Marshall von Mackensen's advance northward into Poland, a movement which seriously threatens the Russian centre retiring from Warsaw.

Killing All They Can.

The Geneva Tribune has published a despatch from its correspondent at Innsbruck, Austria, who says that to the east of Warsaw the Germans have ceased their attack, but to the northwest the terrible fighting is still going on. The Russians are seeking to kill as many of their enemies as possible. North of Lublin, since July 31, the Russians have been fighting a powerful rearguard action. In this vicinity the Austrians have lost no fewer than 40,000 men during the past 40 hours. To the south of Cholm, the correspondent goes on to say, there has been constant counter-attacks, and the Austrians have not advanced in this sector since last Saturday. To the east of Ivangorod the Austro-Germans have advanced a distance of 40 miles in the last four days.

Eugene Lennhoi, correspondent of the Berlin Zeitung Am Mittag, telegraphs as follows from Austrian headquarters, under date of Sunday:

"Heavy fighting has been resumed to the north of Lublin. There and on the front in the region of the great band of the Vistula, the Russians are trying to check the energetic advance of the Austro-Germans in previously fortified positions, obviously aiming to meet the danger threatening Ivangorod from the south. Their resistance is stronger than further to the east between the Vieprz and the Bug, where the retreat continued Saturday.

Teutons Moving Forward.

"The German-Austrian front in this section is everywhere in steady forward movement. Wherever the enemy tries to hold points of support he is driven back. The Russians have now abandoned their efforts to break the Austro-German lines further up the Bug in Galicia after weeks of heavy losses and diminutive success."

PROOF THAT KAISER SANCTIONED SINKING OF THE LUSITANIA

LONDON, August 3.—The Daily says Edward Legge, whose books on the career of King Edward VII. created some sensation, brings forward in his latest volume, "The Public and Private Life of Kaiser Wilhelm II.," a remarkable piece of evidence as to the complicity of the Kaiser in the Lusitania crime.

An American gentleman, he declares, who had founded an organisation for succoring our troops and those of the allies, was sending his son out to further his benevolent work. Having been long on intimate terms with the Emperor, he wrote to inform him that his son would be passing through Germany, and expressed the hope that the young man would not be interefered with.

By return post came a letter from the Kaiser in his own peculiar handwriting, imploring his friend not to allow his son to take passage to England on board the Lusitania. Herr Ballin and Count von Bernstorff may have suggested the commission of the crime, but we have here the Kaiser's own admission that he knew all about it and sanctioned it.

A WORD TO THE MOTHERS OF PETERBOROUGH FROM A MOTHER

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The statement is being generally made throughout the country that many mothers are refusing permission to their sons to enlist for active service. Hence in the present recruiting campaign an effort is being made to convnice mothers that their duty to their country, to themselves and to their sons, forbids them to hold back sons who are willing and anxious to do their part.

The past year has proved that there is no need to urge the majority of the mothers of Peterborough to allow their sons to join the colours, of these sons feel enlistment to be a duty. A few mothers, however, are unfortunate in having full-grown, able-bodied sons, who are either quite unconvinced of the army's need of them, or unwilling to respond to the need, because such response means sacrifice in some form. Some of these unfortunate mothers, themselves women of fine character, are undoubtedly allowing these weask-spirited sons to throw upon them, the onus of the sons' refusal to serve the country.

Do these young men realize that it means to shield themselves behind the weakness of a mother's love? It means that the mother, and not the son, is judged selfish and unpatriotic, and is condemned for weakly allowing maternal affection to stand in the way of duty. Such young men can only reap, some day, a harvest of shame.

Some mothers, on the other hand, are holding back their sons because they have conscientious scruples against any participation in war. Do these women realize that our nation is committed to this war, to the bitter end, and that victory will come from God, working through the sons of women? Is any mother in this city really willing to say: "Other women's sons must do this work for us, mine may not?" Either brain or conscience must be at fault, if any woman can reason thus.

Such mothers are unfair to patriotic sons, and by over-ruling a son's conscience are weakening the bond that should be so strong between mother and son.

Many mothers are fully justified in restraining sons who are far too young for this terrible work, or whose first duty is to the home. I do not presume to sit in judgment on any woman, and am only anxious that any mother in this community who has refused to let her son enlist, should look into her own heart and see whether her motive in restraining him is one that she can justify to her own conscience.

A MOTHER.

MR. R. B. ROGERS' ADDRESS AT RECENT PATRIOTIC MEETING

The followng address was given by Mr. R. B. Rogers at last Friday night's Speakers' Patriotic League meeting:

"I need not tell such an audience as this that the Empire is passing through the greatest crisis in the world's history, and we are met together for the purpose of assisting this great Empire to which we belong to rid herself and the world at large of the terrible incubus that has fastened itself on the whole world.

We have asked the bone and sinew of the community to come together, and try and arouse the youth of this district to hear and obey "the call of the King and Country." The words of Lord Nelson never had a truer significance than at the present moment: "England expects that every man this day will do his duty."

Never before since the foundation of the British Empire has she called more earnestly for help than at the present time. The Allies' forces have done their duty nobly, but none have done better, we are told by the highest military authorities, than the men we have sent from Canada.

We have in this district, up to a short time ago, responded fairly well to the call for men, though, I am sorry to say, if it had not been for the British born among us responding to the call of duty that we would have lacked very much in the furnishing the quotas we were asked to send. But now we have reached a point when all those who were noble and manly enough to at once recognise their duty and come forward and offer their services to the Empire have gone, and we are up against the fact that few are now offering their services, and we will have to educate and use any means in our power to inspire the young men remaining in our community to a sense of duty they owe to their country. I feel sure if the matter is put plainly before the young men of the country that there will be no lack of men.

Personal Means.

We will have to accept means to reach every young man personally. This is a matter into which we will have to put personal work. It is not a matter which will require self-sacrifice on our part, but surely we are prepared to make such. Never before has the call been so urgent for the people of this Empire to rise to a sense of their duty. Never before has the need been so great. We can't think for a moment of shirking our duty now that we know that there is danger of our Empire falling from the high position she has always held. What it will be if the British Empire fails is too awful to think of. No, we must do what we can to avert such a catastrophe. We must not allow ourselves to live in a fool's paradise and delude ourselves with the idea that the allies will win no matter what may happen.

Premier Asquith has told us to be confident, but at the same time, he says that confidence will be misplaced unless we do our part in supplying men—and more men. It is a time when every man who feels citizenship in the British Empire is an honour to be proud of, should rise and "do his bit." We cannot go to the battle front, but we can do our part at home. It is not a time for false modesty. Where there is wrong it must be put right, no matter what unpopularity or inconvenience it may entail. No sacrifice is too great to save our Empire.

Let Us Not Shirk.

Don't let us shirk our duty by leaving it to others. We must furnish men, and the only method we can use is persuasion. If this fails, the only recourse left is by conscription, which, I hope, will never have to be resorted to. We see our hundreds, and, yes, thousands of young men parading the streets of our city, many who hardly know that there is a war on. The parents, also, of many young men who should feel the urgency of the call, hold back their sons. This action of the parents will certainly act as a boomerang to them. If there is any sense of manhood in such sons it will rise, after the war is over, and curse the advice of their parents, for they will feel for the rest of thir life-time a sense of self-reproach, for when the occasion came for them to do their duty and accept their responsibility that they miserably failed to do their part. The parents, themselves, will also feel that their sons are not the equal in manhood to those noble sons who heard their country's call and heeded it.

God knows it is a hard thing to give your sons to risk their lives, but it is not to be compared with the hardship that it will surely bring to feel that in after years that your sons lacked in manhood. Better have them die in a noble death than live a lifetime feeling that they played the part of a coward. When our noble boys come home after the war, what will they think of their former comrades who skulked at home and failed to back their efforts to save our Canadian homes from the hands of the oppressor.

It is up to the leading and intelligent citizens, the employers of labour and all others who who read the signs of the times, to rise to the occasion, and sacrifice if needs be, their personal interests during this crisis, and do what they possibly can to help the Empire in her great need.

MR. R. PICARD PREPARING FOR OVERSEAS SERVICE

Mr. Romulus Picard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Picard, Sr., left to-day for the training camp at Niagara where he will prepare for a commission for overseas service. At his parents' home, corner of Romaine and Lock streets, last night, he was tendered a farewell dinner. Mr. Picard has resided in St. Catharines for a number of years and was home on a short holiday. About 25 of his friends were present. The tables were decorated with the flags of the allies, flowers and lights, and presented a very pleasing sight.

Among those present were Rev. J. J. O'Brien and Rev. Father McAuley of the Church of the Sacred Heart.

Erskine's Puns.

A great wit of the Scottish bar was the Hon. Harry Erskine, who was lord advocate. Though punning is not, as a rule, a high form of wit, with Erskine it became a fine art. On one occasion he undertook to pun on the subject of his friend's first sentence. His friend began, "The king"— Harry intervened. "The king," he said, "is no subject." Again, a Mr. Dunlop challenged him to pun on his name. "Nothing easier," said Erskine. "Lop off the last syllable and it is done."—London Standard.

The Jester's Minstrels.

"Yes, Mr. Bones."

"Why am a cheese like a yacht club?"

"I don't know, Mr. Bones. Why is a cheese like a yacht club?"

"Because it's full of skippers."

"After our corps of eminent surgeons has dressed the wounds of the injured the world renowned tuner, Chuke in Quick, will render that very pathetic murder on the high C's entitled 'The Plaidre of Her Voice Was Full of Knotholes.'"—Columbia Jester.

Safety First.

The young man hesitated to believe the statement of her little brother that the young lady was not at home. He repeated the question, at the same time displaying a quarter. The boy eyed it longingly and again replied in the negative.

"But didn't she leave a message for me?" asked the disappointed swain.

"Yessir," said the lad—and nothing more.

As one who sees a great light the young man tossed him the coin. "Now," he said, "out with the message."

"She said she's not gonna see you any more and you're not to give me any money."—Chicago News.

BUYING BELGIUM.

It is suggested by Mr. John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, that the United States should buy Belgium for $100,000,000,000, place a prohibitive duty on American-made goods, and end the war in Europe. What is meant by a prohibitive duty on American made goods? As we understand the American constitution, there is no power at Washington to impose export duties. Even if such duties could be imposed Americans would probably injure themselves chiefly. An American the other day lamented that the war had "knocked h—l out of prosperity." That would be so if American products and manufactures could not cross the seas.

But what is most striking in Mr. Wanamaker's fantastic proposal is the attitude towards Germany. Germany, by violation of treaty, by ruthless slaughter, and by every form of outrage, harrassed the Belgian people, despoiled their churches and temples, and filled the land with desolation. In compensation a leading American citizen proposes to reward Germany with $100,000,000,000, and to secure her complete supremacy in Europe, and that means in the world.

It does not seem worth while to build asylums if the Wanamakers are to remain outside.—Toronto News.

USE THE REGINA ELECTRIC CLEANER

For Carpets, Rugs, Floors, Upholstery, Curtains, Walls, Ceilings, Beds, Furniture, etc., etc.

THE new REGINA ELECTRIC CLEANER is not only a high grade vacuum cleaner, but a sweeper as well, having a revolving brush inside the nozzle. The movement of the cleaner over the carpet operates the brush through a set of gears inclosed in a dustproof gear case. Thus the action of the brush is positive, and inasmuch as it is driven in the opposite direction to which the cleaner is being used it will loosen all threads, lint, etc., the suction drawing them into the bag. The Model "K" is the only electric cleaner having such a positively driven brush. This brush also raises the nap of the carpet, allowing the current of air to penetrate to the bottom of the fabric. The brush automatically adjusts itself to any kind of rug or carpet.

It is made largely of aluminum, to light in weight and easily handled. The nozzle is twelve inches wide and, tests of a very large air displacement, with consequent efficient results. It is so designed that it operates effectively in corners and close to baseboards and can also be used for cleaning stair carpets. The electric motor is high grade and consumes only about one cent's worth of current per hour. It can readily be used under furniture, beds, etc.

Ad. Duffus Submits Report Concerning Labour Question

In Which Observations Are Recorded Dealing With Meetings That Were Held in Ottawa and Niagara Falls for the Purpose of Devising Ways and Means of Dealing With the Question--What Peterborough Has Done to Alleviate the Situation.

At last night's meeting of the City Council Ald. J. J. Duffus presented the following report concering his attendance at a meeting of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, held at Niagara Falls, July 20th. There were present the President, His Worship Mayor Church, K.C., of Toronto, W. D. Lighthall, K.C., the Secretary, and a large number of Mayors and Aldermen from the different municipalities in Canada. The Province of Quebec was largely represented.

A number of questions of importance were discussed, the most important of which was the problem of the unemployed.

Government Can Aid.

The discussions which took place were very similiar to those at the convention which was held at Ottawa on May 25th, 26th, and 27th, last, said Ald. Duffus, by way of explanation. A number of the delegates, particularly His Worship Mayor Thurbur, of Longuille, P.Q., were strong on the point that the Government should be called upon to furnish capital at once to be spent on public institutions, public highways, and such other public works as would give employment to those who are willing to work at such work. However, it was pointed out that on account of the fact that the Government of this country is financing the greatest war in the history of the world, and owing to the fact that it was taxing financial means to the limit and particularly on account of the fact that there was no telling to what extent they might be called upon in the future along these lines it was necessary to proceed with a great deal of caution and to spend no money except which was absolutely necessary until such times as there could be seen at least in the far distance some signs of the end of the war.

Construct Highways.

"Taking these very serious facts into consideration it is quite apparent that the municipalities will certainly be called upon to take care of their own unemployed by furnishing immediate relief in the form of labour, money and suitable commodities.

The next probable solution in my opinion, said Ald. Duffus, would come from the Provincial Government to some extent at least, by furnishing money for the purpose of building highways, radial railways and other public works, as is within the limit of their financial means under the present conditions.

Then, as soon as possible, I am of the opinion that the Dominion Government should commence the building of such public buildings as are under contemplation, the building of highways and other public works, and the establishment of industrial farms and encouraging as much as possible those of the unemployed who are conversant with farm work to re-establish themselves in agricultural pursuits.

Work for a Committee.

After attending two meetings of this nature I have been giving the problem of the unemployed a great deal of consideration, and I am of the opinion that at the earliest possible moment a live, representative, and energetic committee consisting of members of the City Council, Board of Trade, and Charity Board, the Patriotic Committee, members of the Trade and Labour organization, lodges, societies, etc., should be systematically organized so that work may be fairly divided amongst the unemployed.

I am of the opinion, continued Ald. Duffus, that a Registration Committee should be appointed to as much as possible ascertain the condition and means of those in the city who seek admission and assistance during the coming winter as no doubt the cities have, and will be, called upon, to a considerable extent, to provide for those who are out of work, and "some" who come from other municipalities which we should not be called upon to take care of and should be dealt with accordingly, as it is a well known fact that cities and larger towns have been used somewhat as a dumping ground in such instances on account of the fact that a great number of men find their way in and partake of the hospitality of the cities during the winter months and by keeping close tab on those who take advantage of this, the city might be relieved of considerable expense.

Work for Winter Months.

I am also of the opinion that the city, through its Council, should provide such work as is absolutely necessary, and will have to be done, and can be done, in the winter months, to advantage, such work as the construction of sewers, the procuring of stone and material for roads and high ways. I am of the opinion that part of the cleaning of sidewalks should be done by those who are out of employment, instead of hiring men and horses to do the entire work.

Those Who Discriminate.

I am also of the opinion that such men as refuse to work when work is available because it does not suit them, should be dealt with accordingly by treating with them very sparingly and giving them only such assistance as would avoid extreme distress.

I believe, said Ald. Duffus, that the city of Peterborough has conscientiously taken care of the great majority of the unemployed in a very creditable manner, and I believe every means has been and should be adopted for taking care of the families of those who are taking part in the war, as they are entitled to every consideration. Words cannot begin to do justice to their devotion and bravery, for the risk they are taking, and the noble work they are doing for those who are fortunate enough to enjoy life at home.

In addition to this I would also respectfully suggest, as a note of warning, economy among all classes of people, particularly those who have been and who are likely to find themselves out of employment, and more especially those who will be forced to seek assistance in one way or another.

Following the presentation of the above report, Ald. Duffus was commended by His Worship Mayor Buller for the able manner in which he had performed the duties assigned him in connection with the meetings referred to in the report.

COMMITTED SUICIDE IN CELLAR AT COBOURG

Edward Tate of Port Hope, Charged With Taking Life of His Little Girl, Hanged Himself.

COBOURG, Aug. 2.—Edward James Tate, who was in custody in the counties' jail here, charged with taking the life of his little daughter, Elsie, committed suicide by hanging himself in his cell some time during Friday night or early Saturday morning. He was found about 6 o'clock in the morning by Governor McLaughlin. The condition of the body led to the assumption that he had been dead some hours.

He was last seen about 10 o'clock the night before, and appeared quiet at that time. When spoken to he answered rationally. He was fixed up for the night by the jail officials and left. Nothing was left in his cell excepting the bedding. He managed to hang himself by means of the sheet off his bed. The body was quite rigid when discovered this morning.

Tate has acted in a rational manner since being confined in the jail here, and gave no trouble, being quiet and well-behaved.

On Thursday night Governor McLaughlin took him to Port Hope, where the inquest was opened on the body of his dead child. Another daughter, about fifteen years of age, survives her father, besides his wife. It is stated by some who knew the family that Tate was apparently a loving father. An inquest is being held by Coroner Dr. George Ferris.

Should any foreign matter alight in the eye immediately apply one or two drops of castor oil;; it will almost at once allay the irritation.

GERMANS LOST 70,000 IN TAKING LUBLIN

Special to The Examiner:

Geneva, Aug. 3.—The Geneva Tribune prints the following dispatch from its Innsbruck correspondent:

The capture of Lublin cost General Woyisch 70,000 men in killed, wounded and prisoners. Four miles north of Lublin the Russians are fighting fiercely, disputing every foot of ground while covering their retreat.

"In an advance of seven miles with seven army corps, Field Marshall van Mackensen lost 35,000 men.

"The army massed from Lowicz to Ostrowiec has begun an advance upon Ivangorod and Novo Alexandria, the evacuation of which was commenced by the Russians Friday night, according to the Germans.

"The Germans have dispatched more than 100 trainloads of ammunition from Radom and Lodz toward Warsaw since July 23.

"The Russians who attacked south of Przasnysz killed 5,000, wounded 8,000 and took prisoners 1,300 of the Eighth German Army Corps."

Italians Take Mt. Modetta By Brilliant Stroke

Only Approach to Summit Was By a Steep Pass—Bravery of Alpinists

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The Italian troops have won a signal victory over the Austrians in the Carnia district, where after stubborn fighting characterised by the greatest bravery on the part of the Alpine troops, they succeeding in climbing a steep pass to the summit of Mount Modetta and dislodging the enemy. On the Carso plateau the Austrians attacked in force the army of King Victor posted on Monte Seibusi, but were defeated and many prisoners remained in the hands of the Italians.

The following statement from the General Headquarters of the Italian army was made public to-night:

"Our seaplanes made a fresh raid the night of July 31, on Riva, throwing bombs with excellent results. They escaped unharmed from a lively fusillade. The following morning our heavy artillery made good practice on the Rovereto railroad station, where observers had reported the arrival of troop trains.

CONQUEST OF MOUNT MODETTA

"In the Cadore Valley the fog which had been prevailing for the last ten days lifted and our artillery resumed with fresh vigor the work of demolishing the defences of Upper Cordevole, Upper Boite, Landro and Sexten. The conquest of Mount Modetta northeast of Cima Cuestralta, marks a new and brilliant episode in the struggle in Carnia. The enemy was strongly entrenched there and had the support of artillery batteries posted nearby. The terrain was rough, the only approach to the summit being by a very steep pass. After a long fight, with varying fortunes, our Alpine troops, aided by an effective and accurate fire from the artillery, placed in the rear, succeeded with great bravery in dislodging the enemy. The latter having received reinforcements, made a series of violent counter attacks, and it was only at nightfall that the disputed summit could be said to be solidly in our possession.

Prisoners taken by the Italian forces now number 17,000, including 380 officers. The prisoners come from all parts of Austria-Hungary. While under the surveillance of Italian officers they are under the direct command of their own superiors. Their rations are the same as those served to the Italian soldiers.

THE DANCER.

Vernon Castle's name has come to be identified with dainty dancing. The men of the street would look upon him as being a trifle effeminate, but just the same Vernie who, with his wife, has been making $30,000 a year teaching dancing in New York, has heard the call of his England and is going back, giving up a lucrative career to join the aviation corps.

U.S. EXPORTERS WANT AN END TO INTERFERENCE WITH TRADE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—An ultimatum or message forceful enough to amount practically to one, is what a strong contingent of American exporters want from President Wilson in answer to Great Britain's refusal of modification of her Orden-in-Council. The cotton growers are the strongest single group behind the movement. The meat packers were next in importance. Their plan in brief is to demand that the Allies cease all interference with their shipments to neutral European ports. In the event of a refusal they call for an extra session of Congress to put an embargo on American shipments of all kinds to any of the allied nations.

OKUMA MINISTRY MAY REMAIN.

CORNER STONE OF BYERSVILLE SUNDAY SCHOOL DULY LAID

Mrs. Hugh Waddell Officiated—A Rare Occasion of a Lady Presiding at an Event of This Kind in Peterboro'—Financial Statement Presented.

CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED

The corner stone of the Salvation Army's Sunday School at Byersville was declared "well and truly laid" last night, by Mrs. Hugh Waddell. It was a simple ceremony, but beneath it is the fact that the Sunday School has quadrupled its attendance during the few short weeks of its existence. That a lady had been selected to officiate at this event was an exceptional circumstance, and yet it was only a recognition of the moral and material assistance which Mrs. Waddell has bestowed upon this struggling Sunday School, by the way not the first religious undertaking which in her unassuming way she has generously aided.

Quite a gathering of Byersville people attended the corner stone laying, and they were joined by many friends from remoter parts of the city. There were few flourishes to the ceremony. Adjt. McElhiney, who had just wheeled in from the country after a day's pitching sheaves in an effort to help a farmer shelter his crop before rain forestalled him, opened with prayer and a hymn. A band, composed of members of the Junior and Temple Corps, played a selection, and Mr. R. C. Braund then took charge of the major feature of the evening. The total cost of the building, he said, would be about $1,400, of which there remained a balance to be paid of about $535.00. The work had been done most economically throughout, and the building represents considerably more than its actual cost. The Sunday School is thriving, Mr. Braund continued. It is maintained for the good it can do and not particularly as part of the Army. The children were taught that which was good and right, and to do the service of God with true hearts.

Receptacle's Contents.

Behind the stone was placed a tin box containing copies of the Examiner, Young Soldier, a few coins, the names of the members and officers of the Sunday School and other records, including a book with the names of many persons written with their own hands.

Mr. Kerneghan, the bricklayer, performed the preliminary duties of placing the stone in position. On its outer face were the words "S. A. Temple." face were the words "S. A. Temple, 1915." Mrs. Waddell completed the laying and added a few appropriate remarks. She thanked Adjt. McElhiney and Mr. Braund for the honour conferred upon her, and continuing, said that she hoped the mothers would not forget to bring the children to the Sunday School, remembering Christ's words: "Suffer the little children to come unto Me."

Mr. J. H. Burnham spoke a few words, remarking that the Sunday School was another of the Army's out posts. "Wherever you are," he said, "there the people are kind, sober and good, and by your fruits you are known."

Mr. J. W. Byers added an appreciation of the Sunday School and expressed his wishes for its future welfare.

Ald. Duffus was present, but left shortly before eight o'clock to attend the Council meeting. It is understood that Miss Chamberlen, Mrs. Waddell, Mr. Burnham and Ald. Duffus each left a donation to help pay off the balance.

Mrs. Waddell's benefaction was a cheque for $100.60, and she had previously assisted the Sunday School at its opening. It is expected that in a short time the remaining debt will be completely wiped out.

Mr. Braund stated to-day that he had received additional contributions of $5.00 from Mr. W. H. Hill, and $2 from Mr. J. J. Cunningham.

BOY HELPED CHECK MASSACRE IN TURKEY

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Neville Ussher, fourteen years old, son of Dr. Ussher, a missionary, stationed at Van, Turkey, which is close to the Russian border, was a passenger on the Russian-American line steamship Kursk, which arrived on Saturday from Archangel. Neville, who was at the head of a detachment of Boy Scouts, employed in the ambulance work during the fighting of the Turkish troops and the Armenian rebels, in May, told of a Turkish massacre of 1,000 Armenians, and how he, with several influential Armenians, managed to curb the vengeance of the Armenians who would have massacred 5,000 Turkish women and children by way of retaliation.

During the time that they acted as ambulance workers Neville and his youthful companions were under fire almost all the time. On April 20, according to the boy, the shot that caused the Armenian massacre was fired. The Armenians refused to join the Turks against the Russians, and Djevadeh Bey, the Governor, ordered the death of five of the Armenian leaders. The Armenians rose in arms, seized the barracks and prepared for defence. A Turkish army besieged the town on May 15, and the fighting was continual until a Russian army was reported approaching. The Turks withdrew, leaving the women and children behind. It was then that Neville and his friends succeeded in preventing a massacre. The boy was accompanied by Miss Cariline Silliman, a missionary worker.

Another passenger was Samuel I. Gloushanok of Windau, Russia, who comes to this country as a representative of Russian railroad and steamship companies. He will seek to improve trade relations between Russia and the United States, both at the present time and after the war. He is interested personally in the cotton trade. The Kursk shaped her course far to the north of Iceland, going as far as 73 degrees north latitude. She encountered ice in the Straits of Denmark and also off Cape Race. The voyage was made in eleven days and eight hours, which is a record run from Archangel to New York.

TENDERLOIN AND MUSHROOM PIE

Two lbs. tenderloin, cut in small pieces, boil 1 1-2 hours, one tin mushrooms, boiled one hour. Put both together with one lb. of milk. Thicken with flour. Season with salt, pepper and nutmeg, over with rich paste. This is without doubt one of the most appetising meat pies one could wish to eat.

NUMBER OF MATTERS DEALT WITH BY THE CITY COUNCIL

Matter of a Police Court Fine is Juggled Back to the Legal Committee--Fire Chief Howard Will Have to Forego American Fire Chiefs' Convention---The Hydro Radial Scheme.

William Fair's attempt to have a police court fine of five dollars and costs remitted, was given another hoist at last night's meeting of the City Council. It will now have to go before the Legal Committee which may not meet for another six months. If it survives this ordeal it will eventually find its way back to the Council. The trouble arose out of the use of a certain type of garbage can which Fair used for the collection of refuse, and which was credited with a capaity of thirty gallons. It appears that Sanitary Inspetor Spence authorized Fair, to clean out a place on London Street. This he did at a cost of about nine dollars. The owner of the property contested the charge, claiming that it was excessive, and brought action in the Police Court, charging Fair with using cans that were not properly stamped. Defendant was fined five dollars and costs, amounting in all to about eight dollars and a half. The complainant who happened to be the Weights and Measures Inspector for this district, claimed that the cans only held a little over eighteen gallons, whereas by actual measurement, (by means of a gallon measure), Sanitary Inspector Spence asserted they held over twenty nine gallons. This evidence he submitted before the Council last evening in support of Fair's claim for the remission of the fine, which was based upon the grounds that Fair operated his scavenger business according to the by-law and under the authority of the Sanitary Inspector.

"A Nocturnal Jaunt."

Ald. Green asked the Sanitary Inspector if he had used a properly stamped gallon measure when testing the capacity of the can. The Inspector replied that the measure was devoid of the government stamp, but he was prepared to vouch for its accuracy. In order to satisfy the Council the Inspector and Mr. Fair were asked to take the can out and have it measured at the watering trough outside the Police Station, using a properly stamped measure. This they did, returning from their "nocturnal jaunt," as Ald. Dobbin characterized it, about an hour later, with the information that the can held exactly twenty-seven and a half gallons of water.

Ald. Green then moved that the fine imposed on Mr. Fair be remitted. He regarded the case as a "piece of petty spite" directed at the Sanitary Inspector and Mr. Fair.

Ald. Stratton, in seconding the motion, said he would like to know how Mr. Howson, Weights and Measure Inspector, could come to the Council with the information that the can only held a little over eighteen gallons, when, as a matter of fact, it held twenty-seven and a half imperial gallons.

Ald. Duffus was inclined to the view that the matter was worthy of more consideration as the question was a peculiar one. The fine had gone to the Government.

It was finally decided to send the matter on to the Legal Committee.

Grant for an Airship.

A request from the Overseas Club for a grant towards the purchase of an airship to be donated to the British Government was left over until the Council meets in special session to deal with the question of grants to the regimental funds, which will probably take place to-night. Ald. Stratton disapproved of such a grant, claiming that it came under the head of munitions of war, which the British Government was able to supply without resort to public subscription. Taxation was increasing by leaps and bounds, and he believed that a more justifiable use could be found for any grants that the Council might be in a position to make. He would prefer to make a grant to the men to supply them with some of the things not regularly supplied by the Government, such as field kitchens, etc.

Fire Chief's Convention.

All likelihood of Fire Chief Howard attending the Fire Chief's convention in Cincinnatti was dissipated when the Council voted down the expenditure. Both Ald. Green and Ald. Duffus pointed out the advantages that were to be gained by having the Chief attend the American convention, and concluded with an eulogistic reference to Chief Howard's ability as a fire fighter, claiming that his fire-fighting abilities were only exceeded by his ability to prevent fires, which the worthy aldermen seemed to regard as a product of fire chiefs' conventions. Chief Howard will be permitted to attend the Provincial convention in Ottawa, in company with the Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee and such other Aldermen as would like to attend. Ald. Green announced his intention of attending at his own expense, asserting that such a convention was of value to him as a manufacturer.

Will be Laid Off.

Adam Cox, a teamster residing in East City, will be laid off by the city until such time as he appears before the Board of Works and proves his right to a job as a property owner. A deputation of teamsters waited upon the Council last evening. They were armed with evidence said to have been obtained from the registry office, which discounted Cox's claim to ownership of property within the city limits. Some time ago Cox wrote a letter to the Board of Works asking for a position of teamster upon the grounds that he was a property owner and had been for twelve years. Cox will be asked to appear before the Board of Works and state his case. In the meantime he will be laid off, commencing to-day.

Ald. Duffus' Report.

Prior to adjournment Ald. Duffus presented a verbal report concerning the opening of the London and Port Stanley Railway, which he attended as a representative from the city. He described the work as a worthy achievement.

It was moved by Ald. Green and seconded by Ald. Duffus, that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, be on behalf of the City of Peterborough, to investigate the feasibility of constructing hydro-electric railways through the township of North Monaghan, South Monaghan, Cavan, Dummer and other logical points, said enquiry to cover estimated cost of operation and prospective revenue, etc. The resolution received the unanimous support of the Council.

Surface Drainage.

Surface drainage will be undertaken by the Board of Works on streets which have been advertised incident to the construction of permanent paving. Ald. Green is of the opinion that surface drainage should be laid at least one year ahead of the street paving and in order to facilitate such a course the Board was authorized to proceed with the work as occasion demanded. This will mean that surface drainage will be laid on streets that may not be paved for a year or two.

WAS COMMITTED FOR SPEEDING

Harold Legrow Sent Up for Trial by Magistrate Dumble

On a charge of having driven an automobile recklessly, negligently, or at a rate of speed or in a manner which was dangerous to the public, contrary to Sec. 11, Sub-section 2 of the Motor Vehicles Act, when little Harold Grady, son of Mr. Frank Grady, was injured on Monday, July 26th, Harold Legrow was this morning committed for trial by Magistrate Dumble, to come before a Court of Competent Jurisdiction. He was allowed out on bail.

According to the evidence this morning, Legrow, who is a professional automobile driver, was taking a party of people in his car to a point between Norwood and the city, on Monday evening, July 26th. As he drove east on Romaine street, and came to the crossing at Park street, Harold Grady, the four year old son of Mr. Frank Grady, with a little sister and another small girl, was about to cross from the north side of Romaine to the south side. The girls got safely across, but the boy became confused and was hit by the car. He was attended by Dr. Gallivan and taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he was found to be suffering only from a cut on his temple and bruises, none of which should result in any permanent injury. On Thursday he was taken to his home, and although the stitches have not been removed from the flesh, he is getting along very nicely and is able to be about.

Mr. G. W. Hatton, Crown Attorney, conducted the case for the prosecution and Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for the defendant.

ROSEBERY'S SON WOUNDED.

London, July 31.—The Press Bureau announced officially that Lord Dalmony, of the Grenadier Guards, son and heir of Lord Rosebery, has been wounded in the fighting in France.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles--Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The Peterborough Utilities Commission will be asked to refrain from erecting poles until the location has been approved by City Engineer Parsons.

Temporary Crossing.

The Board of Works has been instructed to proceed with the construction of a temporary crossing on Benson avenue to serve ahouseholder who at present is isolated from the sidewalk, which only skirts one side of the street.

Street Lights.

Complaints have been made regarding the inadequacy of the street lighting system on Sherbrooke, Prince and Mark streets and a number of other places throughout the city. The matter will be brought to the attention of the Utilities Commission.

Claim For Damages.

The city has been notified through Peck, Kerr and McElderry that the municipality will be held responsible for alleged damages said to have resulted to the property of H. Zacks, 467 Stewart street, unless remedial measures are adopted. The damages are said to have been caused through the raising of the sidewalk.

Appointment Confirmed.

The Council has confirmed the appointment of Mr. W. H. Moore as arbitrator on behalf of the city in the arbitration to ascertain the amount to be paid by the city to the county for the expenses of the administration of justice, etc.

Debenture Issue.

The Council passed a by-law authorizing the borrowing of $50,000 to be expended in the purchase of land and the erection of an electric sub-station which will form a part of the service provided by the Utilities Commission.

Oil on Cedar Street.

An appeal has been made for an application of road oil on Cedar street between Park and Cross streets. The matter has been referred to the Board of Works.

Additional Hydrants.

The Council has authorized the placing of two fire hydrants on Chamberlen street in connection with a new water service that is being laid in the vicinity.

Col. Dennistoun's Launch Burned To Water's Edge

KEEWATIN, Ont., Aug. 2—The fine gasoline launch owned by Col. R. M. Dennistoun, and which has been leased by Alex. Bain for the season, was burned to the water's edge last night about 7 o'clock, and Mr. Bain and several other occupants had a narrow escape from serious injury. Fortunately the occupants were able to reach the wharf, and, although a little singed, were otherwise uninjured. The launch was afterward sunk.

Your Future If They Win

THAT IS FOR YOU to think of. If they (Germany) win what use will it be to you to hope to live in a free country? The right of brutal might will be against you. Your life will be ordered for you. You will hold your job because you may be useful in the general order of things. That is all.

You are enjoying the rights of property and the protection of the Crown in those rights. So your protection comes from the Crown, which is a term we use to express a certain condition of things that can be neatly and convincingly expressed no better in any other way.

These rights came to the original holder of the property in the shape of a patent from the Crown. Possibly for a consideration. Possibly not. Anyway they came. And have been handed on to you. You feel secure. What would happen did the Germans secure control?

A new Crown would come upon the scene, the Crown of Germany. All lands and property would revert to the Crown by right of conquest. Yours with the others. Your possession counts for nothing for you have not as yet paid to the new Crown anything for the lands. You are ordered to pay at once, or give up possession. No use to appeal to the Courts, for they are under military control.

So that you would have to set about paying over again for the property that has been yours and if you did not, then goodbye John. You are thrown out. This looks to be an absurd assumption, BUT IT IS JUST WHAT HAPPENED IN ALSACE AND LORRAINE, in 1872. Put that in your pipe and smoke it. Your duty rests with you. Either to help fight the common foe, or to bend your best energies to convince those who can and should go, to do so.

There are a thousand points of view that make a man's blood boil at the possibility. We now have some squabbles over the routine in our schools. As to the teaching of French. As to the reading of the Scriptures. Under German occupation these matters would trouble us little. If they did we should not trouble the masters. We should be instructed that the German language must have large place in our educational routine. That means teachers of German. Our courts would be made to use pleadings in the same language. Hence German judges and lawyers. German constables and court officials. Then when the Canadian carried his complaint to the court he could go hang. We should be a German-ridden country.

These things are what Germany's success would mean to us. The only way to do is to smash her on the plains of Europe. Get about it and help do the smashing.

We have been living on "Rule Britannia." Brought up on the idea that Britain had always, and always would rule the waves. The song urged her to do so. We went beyond the song, and crystalized the expression into a certainty. Now we are likely to have our doubts as to the continuance of the ruling unless we hustle in and help. Let us get to it. Our young men. Our men of a few years older. Those who can best go and leave the activities that must be carried on as intact as possible.

Here are a few catchwords of the hour:

"HALT. WHO GOES THERE? IF YOU ARE A FRIEND JOIN THE BRITISH RANKS AND HELP THE BRAVE LADS AT THE FRONT."

"RALLY ROUND THE FLAG. EVERY FIT MAN WANTED."

"WHAT IN THE END WILL SETTLE THE WAR? ENLISTED MEN. THEN JOIN IN THE RANKS AND BE ONE."

"ANOTHER CALL, MEN AND THEN MORE MEN, UNTIL THE ENEMY IS CRUSHED."—Kitchener.

"FALL IN. ANSWER TO YOUR NAME IN THE HOUR OF YOUR COUNTRY'S NEED."

"ROBERTS — HE DID HIS DUTY. WILL YOU DO YOURS?"

"Why more men are needed? It is now known that it will be a long drawn struggle. We shall not sheath the sword until Belgium recovers all, or more than all she has sacrificed.

"Until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression.

"Until the right of smaller nations are placed on an unassailable foundation.

"Until the military domination of Prussia is finally destroyed."—Words of the Prime Minister of England.

OBITUARY

A. W. LOCKHART.
After an illness during the past nine months Mr. A. W. Lockhart passed away at his home, 531 Park Street, at 11.30 Sunday night. The deceased was born at Newtonville, Ont., in 1850, and had resided in Peterborough for 25 years, during which time he has been employed with E. F. Mason for 16 years. He leaves his wife, one son; W. A. Lockhart, of Regina, and one daughter, Lulu, at home. The late Mr. Lockhart was a member of St. Paul's church.
The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, from the family residence; interment in the Little Lake cemetery.

MR. ALBERT GUTHRIE
The many friends in the city and vicinity of Mr. Albert Guthrie, will regret to learn of his death, which occurred in St. Luke's Hospital, Ottawa, on July 27th. Mr. Guthrie, who was a traveller for the Savoy Candy Company, of Toronto, formerly resided in Smith Township. He covered the Eastern Ontario district. He was 24 years of age. The cause of his death was typhoid fever and peritonitis.
Mr. G. Graham, Frederick Avenue, Peterborough, accompanied the body to Toornto, where the funeral took place last Friday to Mount Pleasant Cemetery under Masonic auspices. Mr. Guthrie's mother survives. She resides in England.

FARM AND GARDEN.
Spray the roosts with a solution of kerosene, carbolic acid, and soapsuds, and the hens will be healthier.
The apple exports from the port of New York last year reached a total of 894,407 barrels. Boston was second on the list with 515,239.
Remove all dead flowers before they run to seed unless one desires to have seed. Many plants continue for a longer time in flower if this is done.
Liquid manure applied at intervals of about a week, or sometimes less, according to the richness of the soil, will do wonders in increasing the productiveness of cucumbers and melons of all kinds. Tomatoes with liquid manure also bear more and finer fruits.
Where fields are badly infested with weeds an attempt should be made to clear the entire field by thorough tillage. Investigations in eradication in Minnesota and Canada indicate that all of these pests will yield to good tillage and short-term crop rotations which include clover and the grasses.
American farmers have planted nearly 13,500,000 acres more of the three principal cereals, wheat, corn, and oats, this year than last year, largely as the result of the high prices for the 1914 crops caused by the war and expectation that the Foreign demand will continue large this year. At present the indications are for total yields of these three cereals of 5,176 million bushels, an increase of 472 million over the final figures for 1914.

IRISHMEN AS FIGHTERS.
Mr. Redmond then spoke of the Irish troops, and unatintedly praised their bravery, adding as an illustration the following:
"I heard a good story the other day about an English officer who was asked his opinion of the Irish troops. 'Oh,' he replied, 'they are magnificent fighters, but rotten soldiers. When they receive an order to retire, the answer is 'Be d——d if we will!'"

Women and Children Are Massacred

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Aug. 4. — B. Varazdate, member of the committee of the Armenian Social Democratic party, writing to L'Humanite says that the committee has received word to the effect that the Turks, after massacreing all the males of the population in the region of Bitlis, Turkish Armenia, assembled 9,000 women and children and drove them to the Tigris, where they shot them and threw the bodies into the river. These advices have not been substantiated from any other source.

The Armenian population of Cilicia, in the Turkish villayet of Adana, also has been subjected to persecution, according to the reports of the committee.

More than 40,000 persons are dead, and it is feared that the Armenians at Moucke and at Diarbekr, Kurdistan, also have been massacred.

Twenty members of the Armenian Social Democratic party, M. Varazdate says, have been publicly hanged in Constantinople after being charged with wishing to found an independent Armenia.

The Enemy So Far Fails in Their Effort to Reach Warsaw

THE GERMANS ARE LOSING BY TENS OF THOUSANDS

Russians Continue to Strongly Resist German Closing Movement

Enemy Lose Tens of Thousands---Germans Have Made Very Scant Progress the Last Few Days and Russians Maintain Their Stand.

AUSTRO-GERMANS MAKE SUPREME EFFORT

Special Morning Cable:

PETROGRAD, Aug. 3.—With sanguinary fighting in progress north-east and south-east of Warsaw, where the Teuton allies are struggling to draw closer the horns of the semi-circle which now stretches around the Russians, the Austro-German forces in front of the Polish capital have begun to bombard the Russian forts with their heaviest guns.

That Field-Marshal Von Hindenburg will not consent to the enormous losses that would result from an attempt to carry the forts by storm is shown by the great number of howitzers of the biggest calibre which are being placed in positions to reduce the forts of Warsaw and Novo Georgievsk.

Warsaw is undergoing violent attacks from the air. On Sunday a fleet of German aeroplanes dropped more than twenty bombs upon the city, killing seven persons and wounding fourteen. Two of the aircraft were hit by the Russian high angle guns, which fired 100 shells at the aerial invaders.

BIG CAVALRY ATTACKS.

In the Mitau-Bausk district the German forces under General Von Buelow are making the most terrific efforts against the Russian line, using cavalry forces on a scale hitherto unheard of in warfare. All along the same front in Poland, except at the extreme ends, the Germans and Austrians are using enormous numbers of guns to batter their way through the Russian lines.

AMMUNITION INEXHAUSTIBLE.

At a single point they concentrated cannon with which they swept the Russian trenches with a hurricane of shot and shell that could not be withstood. The ammunition resources of the Teutons seems to be inexhaustible. In the sector of Wyskow, 30 miles north-east of Warsaw, where the Austro-German forces of General Gallwitz are locked with the Russians, the Russians were more than holding their own when artillery reinforcements arrived and the Germans turned the day with their guns.

CRITICAL SITUATION.

The situation east of the Vistula and south of Warsaw is becoming critical. The tenacity and courage of the Russians could not withstand the superior artillery and munition supplies of the Germans. The fortress of Ivangorod is in danger, and, further to the east, between the Vieprz and Bug Rivers, the Russians, though holding strong positions, are menaced through the cutting of railway lines by the enemy.

On the right bank of the Narew River, south of Astralenka, bloody fighting is in progress. It is there that the Austro-German forces are making their supreme effort to sever the railway link between Warsaw and Petrograd. The Russians defending the position have been ordered to die fighting, but not to retreat nor surrender.

GETTING REINFORCEMENTS.

A detachment of 100 German soldiers, disguised in uniforms taken from the bodies of dead Russian soldiers, were annihilated by Cossacks while trying to throw a pontoon bride across the Vieprz River, east of Ivangorod. The Germans have lost very heavily around Ivangorod, and the fields and woods are full of unburied corpses.

Field-Marshal Von Hindenburg has received reinforcements from the western front, it is reported from Warsaw. He is personally directing the operations of the Germans upon the Narew-Bug River front, where the Teutonic forces are striving to cut the Warsaw-Ostrolenka railway, a branch of the Warsaw-Petrograd railway, although that army is nominally under General Von Gallwitz.

Str. Alexandria Breaking to Pieces on Scarboro Bluffs

Crops Along Lake Shore Ruined

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Aug. 4.—The steamer Alexandria, of the Canada Steamship Lines, is breaking to pieces on Scarboro Bluffs, where she went ashore yesterday afternoon. The crew was rescued by means of a life-line. Captain Bloomfield was the last to leave the ship, being brought ashore at 2 a.m. this morning.

ROME, Aug. 4.—Italians have launched a new movement to envelope the Austrian forces.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 4.—Germans have made very scant progress the last few days, and have lost tens of thousands of men.

TORONTO, Aug. 4.—It is feared the crops all along the lake shore counties of Ontario are utterly ruined by the storm.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Britain defends the seizure of neutral cargoes as quite within the law.

WRIES, Pa., Aug. 4.—Twenty-five were killed and millions of dollars' damage done by a cloudburst here.

ATHENS, Aug. 4.—Heavy reinforcements of the Allies' troops have arrived in Serbia, and it is expected will make a fresh advance on Austrian and Turkish territory from here.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—A new order-in-council prohibits the export of coal to any point outside the British Empire.

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—Fighting is still in progress outside of Warsaw. Our armies have been stayed by the stubborn defence of the Russians.

Discoloured or Spotty Skin Easily Peeled Off

The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which most skins are subject at this season may readily be gotten rid of. Mercollised wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any druggist's. There's no more effective way of banishing tan, freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process itself doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by weariness, worry or illness, are best treated by a simple solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz. dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in this produces a truly marvellous transformation.

Unusual Length of Corn-Stalk

A corn-stalk, measuring ten feet and a half in length, was grown on the farm of Sargent and Sons, Westwood. This particular stalk was cut on Saturday last and is now on exhibition in Sargent's store, Westwood. Throughout the district there are evidences of abnormal growth in both field and garden products.

Soap should be substituted for soda when washing silver and plated goods.

Verdun is Impregnable

Underground City Defies All German Attacks

Special Cable to The Examiner:

VERDUN, via Paris, Aug. 4.—The German hammering of Verdun, the fortress on which the drive of a year ago went to pieces like a wave on a rock, may continue for years and years without making the slightest impression.

The underground life with which the trench combats of this war have familiarized the world, and which the modern soldiers already are accustomed, here has reached its climax in an immense underground city prepared for the defenders of the key to Northern France. Miles upon miles of streets, alley, and public squares, chambers stocked with wine, flour, and tinned meats, and lodgings, recreation rooms, a bakery equipped to make bread for fifty thousand men, and heat, light and telephones, like a modern apartment house, have been constructed beneath the smiling, unrevealing surface of the meadows of the valley of the Meuse surrounding France's barrier which has been placed in the path of whoever attacks from Metz.

On the level of the old moats of the ancient fortress, 75 feet below the summit, the galleries begin. There are no evidences in the most perfect military preparation that already have been completed of any lack of ammunition necessary to stand an old-fashioned siege. Here also the staff is quartered and an entire army corps can easily be accommodated underground with everything necessary for its livelihood for months.

The last violent bombardment by the German long-range guns was a wasted effort. The stronghold was not even scarred.

3,034,202 Russian Prisoners

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—The German War Ministry furnishes in connection with the first anniversary of the war interesting figures relating to the successes of the Central Powers, says the Overseas News Agency. The statement follows:

"Germany and Austria-Hungary occupy 29,000 square kilometres in Belgium, 21,000 in France, 130,000 in Russia and 10,000 in French Alsace.

"Prisoners of war taken in Galicia, now in German camps and hospitals or employed as workers, total 630,000; men captured in the campaign last week and on their way to camp number 120,000; prisoners in Austria-Hungary, 836,543, making a grand total of 1,986,412.

Prisoners taken in Russia and now in Germany total 5,600 officers and 720,000 non-commissioned officers and privates; in Austria, 3,190 officers and 610,000 non-commissioned officers and privates; total, 8,790 officers and 1,330,000 men.

"German collecting stations received up to the middle of June 5,848 captured field guns and 1,558 machine guns. Many field pieces were not delivered to these stations, but were kept with the troops and are being used against their former owners. While exact figures are not available, it is estimated that nearly 8,000 guns and 3,000 machine guns have been captured."

Pressure on Rumanians

Will Not Take Their Grain Unless They Open Way

Special Cable to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Aug. 4.—The Gazette has the following under a Bucharest date: "The question of the export of the harvest this year is taking a serious turn. The Dardanelles being closed, the only country to which it is possible to export the surplus is Germany. The number of 'wagons' owned by Rumania is not sufficient to convey the quantity of cereals and it has become necessary to apply to Germany to supply the deficiency.

"Germany is seeking by this means to put pressure on the Rumanian Government in order to obtain transit of munitions to Turkey. I am assured by the highest authority that the Government will not yield to this pressure."

Wounded Prisoners Slain By Germans at General's Order, Says Commission

Findings of Atrocity Inquiry Give Additional Details of Violations of Rules of Warfare by the Kaiser's Troops ---"Take No More Prisoners" Was Order.

Special Morning Cable:

PARIS, Aug. 4.—The commission presided over by Mr. Georges Payelle, president of the French Court of Accounts, has presented to the Premier, Mr. Viviani, the final report of its investigations into acts on the part of German soldiers in violation of the rights of man.

This report contains twelve thousand words and gives in detail the evidence gathered concerning the use by German troops of military and civilian prisoners as shields against the fire of French troops, as well as of the employment by the troops of Emperor William of cartridges in which the bullets were reversed in order to cause more serious wounds, split bullets and other bullets cut to make them more rending.

Continuing, the report cites orders given by General Stenger, commander of the Fifty-eighth German brigade, ordering his soldiers to kill the wounded enemy and to take no more prisoners. Evidence confirming the issuing and the circulation of this order was obtained from German prisoners belonging to the 152th and 142d regiments. The report contains also evidence of the massacre of French soldiers as a result of this order, as fell as the massacre of wounded men after the battle of Fethe, in Belgium. It presents the allegations of many individual soldiers who declare they saw their wounded comrades put to death by a rifle shot, a revolver shot, the thrust of a bayonet or a blow from the butt of a musket by German soldiers, subaltern officers and officers. Some of the French witnesses testified that they themselves had been objects of such aggressive attacks after having been wounded.

The report devotes considerable space to allegations of the inhumanity of the Germans to their prisoners of war, which it says is proven by the evidence of the victims. Many prisoners of war have been shot, while others have had their skulls crushed by blows from the butt of a musket. At St. Die thirty French prisoners were assassinated in this manner by Bavarian troops. The truth of this is vouched for by five men who said they witnessed the acts. Other men who appeared before the commission declared they had found the dead bodies of a French patrol numbering seven men, an infantry corporal and six privates, with their hands tied behind their backs and dead from rifle shots. This incident was further supported by evidence taken before a Justice of the Peace.

The report closes with three columns of evidence to prove the bombarding of ambulances by the Germans, the firing upon stretcher bearers and the taking prisoner of surgeons. In some cases, it is set forth, French surgeons were arrested by German surgeons and by them sent to the rear to be interned.

Several cases are cited in which German wounded, succored by Frenchmen, are alleged to have taken the opportunity to kill those going to their relief.

KAISER CHRISTENS NEW GERMAN CRUISER THE VON HINDENBURGER.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—According to a despatch from Berlin by Reuter's Telegram Company by way of Amsterdam, the battle cruiser which was to have been named the Ersatz Hertha, which was launched on Sunday at Wilhelmshaven, was christened, by order of the Emperor, the Von Hindenburger.

This new battle cruiser is of 28,000 tons. She was laid down in July, 1913, and was to have been completed in 1916.

ARMENIANS APPEAL TO AMERICA.

TIFLIS, via Petrograd, to London, Aug. 3.—The newspapers print a second telegram which the Katolikos, head of the Armenian Church, has sent to President Wilson, appealing to the American nation to protest against "Armenian massacres and the violent removal of Armenians from Constantinople and Cilicia (Asia Minor) to Konieh and Mesopotamia, where they are doomed to perish."

Fields of Oats and Corn Battered By Wind and Rain

Serious Damage on Many Farms in Nearby Country But Farmers Are Hopeful If Weather Turns Favourable at Once--Some Fields Badly Injured.

FALL WHEAT NEARLY ALL IN

Tuesday's furious gale and heavy fall of rain flattened many fields of oats and corn in the neighbouring townships as if an immense roller had passed over them. It was the first serious blow to this summer's crops until yesterday, the most promising in recent years. Given an immediate return to favourable conditions the aggregate damage may not be serious, but in numerous cases, especially where the wind had wide stretches to gather force, it is believed there will be slight recovery. Fresh winds and rapidly drying conditions are needed almost immediately. A delay in the arrival of favourable weather will greatly increase the injury resulting from Tuesday's visitation.

Fall wheat and barley were for the most part harvested and drawn in, but even these crops where they were slow ripening are in the fields although cut. The work of the storm in adjacent townships is best illustrated by the reports of some of the farmers.

Oats and Corn Flat.

Mr. Clayton Telford of Emmamore, said: The best field of corn I ever had, ranging from 4 to 7 feet, is not a foot off the ground. Our oats are flattened. You might imagine that a road roller had gone over the fields. Most of the oats were beginning to ripen and these may come through in fairly good condition, but the late varieties will not amount to a great deal. We had all our barley and fall wheat in. We got the last of the barley in just as it began to rain.

Best Oats Suffered Most.

Mr. John McIntosh of North Monaghan:—One field of oats that was 5 feet high is not a foot off the ground. It had headed out splendidly and was in fine condition. On account of the extra weight of the heads it suffered most. The corn is flat on the ground. If we get a good fresh wind the damage may not be as serious as it appears at present. Most of the farmers had their fall wheat, barley and some peas in. Our wheat and barley are cut in the fields. They were not fit to be taken in having come on a little slowly.

Douro's Experience.

Mr. James Walsh of Douro—Most of the oats appear to be badly broken and bent. Corn wasn't a good crop anyway. I had mostly oats and peas. Practically all the fall wheat and barley is in. It was an east wind that did the damage and I think we may expect a west wind now that will at least partly straighten up the oats and spring wheat.

Crops Harder to Handle.

Mr. Smith-on of Otonabee—I don't think material damage has been done. Many of the fields of oats and barley are down. They will be much harder to handle. We had finished up the wheat, but considerable fall wheat is out yet. If it keeps cool and we get a wind things may be alright.

Reports From Smith.

Mr. J. K. Moore of Smith, said the damage did not seem to be heavy. The fall wheat was cut but not a great deal of it and barley were in.

Mr. S. T. Milburn said that corn had suffered considerably. It was about six feet high and had grown so rapidly during the past week that it had not gained strength and as a result offered but slight resistance to the wind.

Rev. Father Fitzpatrick said that fall wheat was mostly all in and the farmers of Emmamore had begun to cut their spring wheat. The oats had filled out well and was well ripened.

Mr. W. J. Scollard of Emmamore did not expect the damage to be serious, although the standing crops had been beaten down considerably.

When boiling potatoes do not add salt till they are nearly cooked. This makes them dry and floury.

NOT THE BIGGEST
—BUT THERE'S NONE BETTER

The size of an institution doesn't necessarily determine the quality of its product or service.

The biggest doesn't always produce the best.

It all depends upon the quality of the materials used; the skill and interest of the workmen, and the intentions of "the men behind."

We frankly admit that ours is not the largest Optical Establishment in Ontario.

But we do maintain that, with our thoroughly modern equipped shop, and with well paid workmen personally interested in its welfare, and working under the supervision of Mr. Fowler, we get better results at less cost to the customer from our parlors than do the larger shops.

Guaranteed quality, better prices, and all-round better service—that is what you are assured at Fowler's Optical Parlors.

LET THAT SERVICE SERVE YOU!

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

He told us that he had an active mind and that when he had decided to hermit in the wilderness he wanted a wilderness with enough variety to it to keep him from gettin' bored; so he had piped in water from up the crick and could irirgate any part of the Horse-shoe as much as he pleased. He had imported thorny vines and hedges from all over the world, so it was small wonder he could get tangles to suit him. Nearly all of his tangles were thorny on the fringe but open and sightly within, somethin' like his own character. Isaac had chattered a lot about the flora over at the Horse-shoe, but we none of us altogether savvied what he meant and Shorty never could get over the notion that it was the same Flora he had known in a dance-hall down in San Tonya.

The' was a tangle in front of each corner of the cabin at a distance of about thirty feet; but the centre was fairly open so that old Josiah could sit at his door and look a way out yonder. We were all usin' seven-shot repeatin' rifles, and even Douglas Kastle had took one, though Kate had to show him how to run it. Well, they were a new thing to me, too, and I didn't fancy 'em much at that.

All the while he'd been talkin' old Josiah had kept one eye glued to a loop-hole, and presently he broke off short. "There they come, boys," sez he, as though spreadin' glad tidings. "Remember, now, arms and legs."

I had allus supposed that Panther Emmons was plumb yaller; but there he rode at the head, and his eyes burned with a cold, wicked fire. He held his gun up over his shoulder and I reckon we all shot at his arm, but we all missed him, and he slowed up his hoss and shot at our flashes as fast as he could pop it. Some of the bunch rode past him, but most of 'em had to slow up when he did, and they sure threw lead at our loopholes.

The' was another lull durin' which we all loaded, and then they charged from the north side, but not quite so many of 'em. They didn't hesitate this time either in goin' by or to load up; but whirled and came right back. I could see Big Jeff on the ground from where I stood, but o' course I didn't keep my eye on him. After they'd swept past my range, I glanced down at Jeff just as a rope around his ankle tightened and he started to slide along the ground. I took a quick shot at him, but it was bothersome shootin'.

They went on across the ford this time, and I told the others about 'em gettin' Jeff. It was plain that one feller had crawled up along the wall and when they had charged south he had slipped on the rope and when they charged north they had snaked Jeff clear away. "Well, we didn't want him, anyway," sez old Josiah.

Me and Tom Smith started to talk about whether they had lit out for good, but Josiah told us to hush, and we caught the scratchin' and tappin' on a piece o' leather stretched over a hole in the rear wall.

"They're goin' to try it again," sez Josiah, "and we'll have to fool 'em a little. Kate, as they come by here, you stick out a rifle through each of these two loopholes, get low so you can't be hit, fire 'em as rapid as you can, and see that your brother keeps his two goin'. You can't hit any one if you keep your muzzles well up, so make all the noise you can. Come, boys."

We followed him into the dining-room where he swung back the dish-closet in the corner which was nothin' but a fake door leadin' into a garden behind. From the outside, the tangle was so thick that a buffalo-gnat would have to edge sideways to get through it; but inside it was the greatest little garden ever I peeked into.

At the far side was a whoopin' big cotton-wood from the top of which every approach to the Horseshoe was as plain as a map, and up here the nigger who refused to be free, spent what time he wasn't busy constructin' meals. The' was an Injun drum up there and by scratchin' and tappin' on it he told the one below what he saw. The only drawback was that other trees and the cabin itself hid the view in front, but the old hermit figgered he could take care o' that himself. Under the tree stood a young Injun buck and the half-breed who had give me the slip on Kate's hill that time. He grinned at me friendly and I grinned back.

When the signalin' began old Josiah listened and presently he said: "They're circlin' our way. Come on, boys."

A curious patch led through the tangle to the north, finally comin' out through a thicket that wasn't thorny, on to the rocks. We followed this upstream till we came to Kate's cabin, and then we went down her path towards the house. We now slipped into the open space inside the tangle and crept up to the hedge where the trail comin' from the Lion Head skirted the tangle on the south of the cabin, ran along the west front of it, and then bore off northwest to the ford. We went to the east of the path and the Injun and the breed to the west of it.

Josiah told us to kneel when we fired as they would make 'em most likely to shoot over us, and then we waited in silence. We didn't have to wait long, though, before a bunch of 'em swung around the corner, shootin' and yellin', and Kate and her brother from the inside began shootin' holes in the sky. We let 'em get well up to us, and then cut loose like puttin' up haw before a rain.

Then four fellers pulled off a stunt as neat as ya please. They came from behind the tangle in front of the south corner and dashed up the open space in the centre. The two in front carried the butt of a small log between 'em, swung from their saddle horns, and the second pair had fastened onto the small end. They used quirt and spur and headed straight for the door. When it was now or never, the front ponies dug in their hoofs and squatted. This brought up the butt right across the bar, and the second pair sent it home with a crash. Then they all cast loose, whirled their ponies on a square foot and scurried for cover. Old cow-punchers and old cow-ponies, these, and they couldn't have pulled it neater if they had practised a month.

Now they came ridin' towards the busted door from the south, and the play was for the first bunch to join in the rush, but we had 'em so bothered from our ambush 'at they were millin' around like geese in a blizzard and not knownin' what was up. Then came the voice o' Big Jeff from the direction of the ford, shoutin' out where we were and to close in on us, though no horse could pass our hedge.

He came ridin' towards us, but the Injuns let fly at him. He shot into 'em from right opposite, and then turned back again. The air was so cloudy with smoke and dust that it was hard to tell just what was happenin' and then the old hermit lifted up his voice and started out into the path and towards the door, with me on one side and Tom Smith on the other.

It was the first time I had heard the old hermit open his voice full width, and it sure did fill the landscape. "At 'em, boys, at 'em," he roared, "and shoot to kill!"

Our rifles were empty by this time and we sailed in with our six-shooters. The butt of the log rested inside the room but the door was still hangin' on a twist by one hinge and Douglas Kastle was firin' off guns as fast as Kate could hand 'em to him. Altogether it was a mixed affair.

At sound of old Josiah's roar, Big Jeff had lost heart and had made for the ford with most of those closest to him; but the bunch around the door were tough citizens and they had lost their temper in the excitement.

Just as we got close to 'em one pulled out his arm all torn and bloody where it had met up with one of the wolf dogs that were just inside the busted door wishin' for any little trifles o' good fortune which might come their way.

Panther Emmons sat his hoss close to the south corner and even while we were chargin' for the door, I could see his snaky eyes above the smoke and dust. Just as I looked at him, he turned his head for a second towards the east, and then he shouted, "Let that door go, you fools, and pull out o' this."

The fellers on foot around the door ran to where Panther was holdin' their hosses. For a second they seemed on the point of ridin' east, and then with a rush they swooped straight for us. Nearly every gun on both sides was empty, and just at that time we were too busy to load.

Panther was the last to start and he rode middlin' slow with his gun in his hand. As he passed the old hermit, Josiah grabbed him by the left arm. A grin came to Panther's face and he pushed his gun again' Josiah's neck.

I was flattened out again' the wall tryin' to get my gun loaded, and when I saw this, I locked the gun with two catridges in the cylinder and threw it on Panther, but a wounded feller on the ground grabbed my leg and began to stick a knife through my boot and both shots missed.

Tom Smith was close to old Josiah and when he saw Panther put his gun to the old hermit's neck, he dove through the air and grabbed Panther's elbow, twitchin' his hand so that the bullet instead of hittin' Josiah, finished off the feller who was jabbin' his knife through my foot.

But the jerk had sent Panther's spur into his hoss's flank and the brute gave a lunge, handin' old Josiah a shovin' kick as he passed. Panther wheeled his hoss, and looked in triumph at Tom Smith, who was crouched to one side loadin' his gun but watchin' Panther over his shoulder.

For such a time as this, Panther took careful aim and fired. Tom Smith had ducked at the discharge, but now spun about and fell face down. I had managed to get another catridge in my gun, and now I threw it full in the centre of Panther's back; but I had turned the cylinder one notch too far and the hammer fell on an empty chamber.

Panther's hoss was carryin' the mail by this time, and I ran after him on foot like a half-witted burro, snappin' my hammer on empty chambers until he was across the ford, and then I reckon the one bullet ran wild, for he never so much as turned.

I felt a blame sight worse at the time than even it sounds now in the tellin'; but all these things had happened the way ten-pins scatter before a strike-ball and I was middlin' strange to gang fights at that time; so I took comfort in the fact that we had killed four o' their men and that most of the rest were still totin' lead.

MRS. LYON'S ACHES AND PAINS

Have All Gone Since Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Terre Hill, Pa.—"Kindly permit me to give you my testimonial in favor of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I first began taking it I was suffering from female troubles for some time and had almost all kinds of aches—pains in lower part of back and in sides, and pressing down pains. I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the aches and pains are all gone and I feel like a new woman. I cannot praise your medicine too highly."—Mrs. AUGUSTUS LYON, Terre Hill, Pa.

It is true that nature and a woman's work has produced the grandest remedy for women's ills that the world has ever known. From the roots and herbs of the field, Lydia E. Pinkham, forty years ago, gave to womankind a remedy for their peculiar ills which has proved more efficacious than any other combination of drugs ever compounded, and today Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is recognized from coast to coast as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases that it has saved them from surgical operations.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble and, irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Honsburger, 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed 20 years."

WHY THE KAISER WANTS CALAIS!

Extraordinary Range of New German Guns Would Afford Complete Domination of Dover, Thus Making the Invasion of England's Shores an Easy Task, According to Views of Military and Naval Students.

NEWPORT, R. I.

STUDENTS of naval and land operations consider that the significance of the German determination to reach Calais lies in the fact that possession of that city will afford to the Kaiser's forces complete domination of the water approach to Dover, on the English shores. It will mean, in other words, that invasion of England will become a dread reality and with the English fleet powerless to open the straits.

The range of the new German crucible nickel steel high powered guns is known to a certainty to be twenty-six miles. From Calais to Dover, or, to be more specific, from the solid ground on the right of the jetties when entering Calais to the sea front of the Castle port at Dover, is a distance of 21.35 nautical miles. From Fort Range, midway of the jetties, when entering Calais, to the same objective is 21.2 miles.

From Fort Larpin, distant 1.1 mile below the shore end of the Calais jetties, to the end of the Admiralty pier at Dover is a distance of 20.9 miles, and from Sandgate, 2.2 miles below Fort Larpin, to the sea face of the Castle at Dover is 19.2 miles.

Dover furnishes the first practicable harbor beyond Calais, but as between the nearest points of opposite shore lines the route followed by the telegraphic cable from Sandgate on the French shore to South Foreland on the English coast is 18.24 miles.

From Cape Gris Nez to the shore edge of Dover is a still shorter distance, being only 18.05 miles.

To the popular mind the possession of Calais means the possibility of the Germans shelling Dover, but to military men it means a great deal more. Once the Germans are able to reach Calais they will be in a position to mount guns which will clear the centre stretch of water between the Calais jetties and the Admiralty pier of all nesting mines. This can be accomplished by counter mining through the medium of high explosive shells.

The method employed to counter mine by naval forces is to explode counter mines in the vicinity of anchored mines. The counter mines may be towed over the mine field and detonated by wires leading from the towing boats, or the mines may be exploded by high explosive shells dropped on the mine field and detonated by fuses with sufficient delay action to permit the projectile to plunge for ten or fifteen feet below the water surface before functioning.

The shores of Dover, it is known, are to-day blocked with anchored mines. There are leads through these mine fields which are known only to the government pilots, but a vessel attempting to pass through the straits without the assistance of a duly accredited British pilot would to-day be blown to pieces. Before the Germans could make use of the straits it would be necessary to clear the intervening water of mines through counter mining, and the quickest way would be to have recourse to high explosive shells.

This method of counter mining was arranged for by the American government in 1898, when the dynamite cruiser Vesuvius was held in readiness to blow out a channel through the medium of high explosive shells had it been deemed necessary to force an entrance into Santiago or Havana. The inventor of the dynamite gun, Captain E. S. Zalinski, was known to regard the guns of the Vesuvius as especially well adapted, because of the high explosive used in the dynamite gun shells, for blowing out mine fields.

No modern high powered German guns using high explosive shells are able to do all and more than was ever claimed for the guns of the Vesuvius.

The water between Calais and Dover is at no point of greater depth than thirty fathoms. For a width of about three miles in the centre of the straits the water depth ranges from twenty-six to thirty fathoms. On either side of this strip of water the depths gradually decrease toward either shore, shoaling up to about six fathoms on the French side and to seven fathoms on the English side.

The currents in the Dover Strait, while strong with certain tides and winds, are not too great to permit of effective mine fields being established, and it can be put down as a certainty that once the Germans have blown a free passageway across the channel they will line both sides of this passage with protecting mine lines. With a patrol of submarines doing picket duty inside these protecting barriers of mine defences it would be next to impossible for an opposing fleet to break through the passageway.

This is the danger which confronts England to-day if by any chance the Germans in their new drive succeed in hacking their way through to Calais. The danger is an imminent one when it is known that at this writing not less than ten German army corps are known to be en route to that point of the western lines immediately in front of Calais.

The Germans' advanced position is estimated to be at a point not more than fifteen miles east of Dunkerque. The German long range artillery fire has reached Dunkerque from a point estimated at nineteen and a half miles away. This artillery position is in the rear of the advanced German lines.

From Dunkerque to Calais is 19.42 miles. From the western edge of Dunkerque to the centre of Gravelines is 9.25 miles and from Gravelines to the eastern edge of Calais is 10.8 miles. This means, from a military viewpoint, that the Germans are to-day distant from Dover the sum of the distances measured from a point fifteen miles east of Dunkerque to that city, thence to Gravelines, thence to Calais, thence to Dover, or approximately fifty-six miles. To be exact, the distance is about one mile more, if one will allow for distances across portions of the towns.

While it is known that the British possess long range guns of the navy pattern, it has been demonstrated that the Krupp pieces are outranging in this war any weapon which the Allies have been able to bring into action, and it is conceded that once the Germans are able to blaze a clear passage across the strait they will not be hindered from advancing high powered guns into the strait itself or vessels specially adapted to carrying single guns of high power. The securing of a foothold on the Dover coast, with the ability to rush high powered guns across to hold any ground so taken, would mean the clearing of the land in the rear of Dover and the rendering all the more secure of the strait passageway.

It is a knowledge of the foregoing that is causing the deepest concern in England to-day.

A MODEL FARM ROTATION.

Grain fields are always seeded down with clover, even though it be used only as a fertilizer.

Grass and clover seedings are heavy. Increased crops of hay and rare failures of a catch have justified them.

Hoed crops form a large proportion of every rotation. An attempt to farm a small area without a hoed crop was not successful. Weeds could not readily be kept in check.

No field is left in hay for more than two successive years. The records show that the second crop almost always costs more per ton than the first, and that succeeding crops are liable to be grown at a loss.

Barnyard manure is preferably applied in comparatively small quantities, rather than at long intervals in large quantities.

THE BABY'S WELFARE A MOTHER'S DREAD

A fear clutches at the heart of the mother that her own little one may not live long. She dreads its second summer, or that it may never wake from its sound sleep. All mankind loves a mother—loves to see a mother love her child. A baby and its mother are insured against ill-health if the mother takes Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription, a tonic for women that Dr. R. V. Pierce invented nearly a half century ago for women's ills. This is a vegetable tonic, made only of the herbs roots with glycerine, which puts the female system into perfect, healthy action.

Many mothers of families in the United States have reason to be grateful to the person who recommended Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription. It is put up for the single purpose of curing disease of women. It has sold more largely on this continent than any other medicine for women. Another point in its favour: it is a temperance remedy and does not contain a single drop of alcohol nor of any narcotic.

Young mothers who preserve the charms of face and figure in spite of an increasing family and the care of growing children are always to be envied. Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription gives the strength and health upon which happy motherhood depends. It enables the mother to nourish the infant life depending on her, and enjoy the hourly happiness of watching the development of a perfectly healthy child.

Died by Order.

After the battle of Castozza a soldier supposed to have been killed was entered on the books of his company: "Died on the 24th of June, 1866," etc.

A few days afterward it turned out that he was still alive, and the honest sergeant made the following entry:

"Died by mistake."

At length there came a letter from the ministry of war announcing the death of the man at the hospital, when our sergeant recorded it as follows:

"Bedied by order of the ministry."—London Answers.

Novelists Now and Old.

W. B. Trites said at a dinner in Bermuda:

"It appears that the novelist of the present is paid better than the novelist of the past. The novelist of the past lived in a garret and walked in leaky shoes; the novelist of the present lives in a studio apartment overlooking Central park and rides in an auto.

"The novelist of the past died, and his works live; the novelist of the present lives, and his works die."—Detroit Free Press.

Amateur Actors.

"Let the amateur drive this fact into his head—metropolitan theater managers and promoters do not want him," writes George M. Cohan in the Green Book Magazine. "They haven't the time or the patience or the money. So don't come to New York looking for a job. You may have to walk home. You may have all the ability in the world, good looks and stage presence, but the metropolitan producer has not the time to teach you the technic and mechanics of the stage—exits and entrances, the getting of effects, inflection, carriage, ease, conviction and seriousness. The amateurs all say they will work seriously, but they don't do it. They can't."

Turks and Animals.

In the matter of kindness to animals it is said that the Turk cannot be surpassed. Thus at Stamboul the wandering dogs are treated with great gentleness, and when puppies come into the world they are lodged with their mother at the side of the street in improvised kennels made out of old boxes lined with straw and bits of carpet. And frequently when a young Turk happens to be flush of money he goes to the nearest baker's shop and buys a quantity of bread, which he distributes among the dogs of the quarter, who testify their gratitude by jumping up at him with muddy paws and sniffing muzzles.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S FIVE GORE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

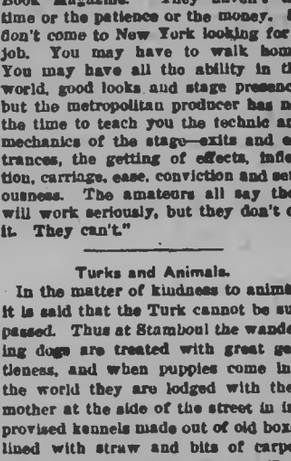
With a number of gores there is never any fear of the skirt sagging at the sides, and by making the circular skirt gored we have the beauty of one style combined with the utility of another. This is what has been done in the model illustrated.

The front gore is plain and almost straight at the lower edge, while the side gores are quite circular, as is also the back gore. In finishing the skirt either the habit back or the reversed box pleat may be used in the back and either raised or regulation waistline.

This is an excellent model for all stretchy materials, and especially recommends itself for the many sleazy voiles and crepe weaves which are so favored this season. It makes an especially good foundation for trimmings of ruchings, double frills and the like.

The general plainness is nice for taffetas and is very suitable for serge. Gingham, too, can be made up by this model with good results, and linen is ideal for it.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,251, is cut in sizes 22 to 36 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 5 yards of 36 inch material.



When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

AN OUTDOOR FIRE.

There Is No Mystery About It. Just Use Common Sense.

This is the time when many take their vacations in the open, and the knowledge of how to build a campfire is appreciated. Volumes have been written about the "art" of building an outdoor or camp fire. In reality there is no mystery in this "art" at all. Just remember a few scientific facts and apply common sense and you can build as good an outdoor fire as anybody else can.

The things to bear in mind are these:

Your fire should be built out in the open, never against a tree or log in any circumstances (because of added danger of setting fire to the woods) and never against a large rock or a bank, simply because a fire must have air, and lots of it, if it is to burn, therefore the open site, where air circulation can get across it from any direction.

Having selected your site, cut green timber or pile two parallel rows of rocks of such size as you may need, depending on the time you are to use your fire, to act as side logs.

If it is a one-meal fire two sticks as big as your arm are enough; if it is a one-day camp or longer let your green sticks be twelve inches through and six feet long.

Place these eighteen inches apart, end on to the direction that the prevailing winds for the locality come from. Bank rocks or earth up against the ends of the sticks to prevent rolling or sliding.

Now, to find dry wood always go to the standing live trees about your camp site, especially so if in thick timber, and get the dead branches that are always more or less numerous on every living tree in the wilds.

This wood is always the driest wood in the forest, bar none. For this reason it is best to start fires with, especially if the weather is or has been wet. In open timber in dry weather one usually can find more or less firewood on the ground unless it is in a heavily timbered pine country, but the dead limbs on standing timber are always the driest wood you can get.

Use small, splintery wood to start with and build your preliminary fire as open as you can, so the air will get into every part of it and thus make it burn freely. Cross the sticks into a loose pile to do this, and do not pile them up in a heap of parallels if you hope to succeed quickly. Your fire wants air, and lots of it—just don't forget that—and build accordingly.

After you have a hot bed of coals you can burn almost any kind of wood any old way.

Your cooking fire should be built up and allowed to burn down to a bed of coals, then kept going with a stick or so at a time, for your outdoor cooking must be done over a small but hot fire.

One great trouble with most campers is that they build about ten times as much fire as they need. You can understand this when told you can make coffee for two, broil bacon and trout for two and do it easily over the fire that a block six inches long sawed from the end of an ordinary 2 by 4 will produce. Don't build your fire too big; keep it small and hot by giving it plenty of draft and feeding it dry wood a little at a time and often.

Kiss Flag, Rush to Die.

The London News prints the following dispatch from Petrograd:

"It was necessary to take Orlau (in Austrian Silesia) at all costs," said a wounded Russian colonel. "I was in the centre vanguard, advancing under a hail of shrapnel; whole lines crumpled like corn before a hailstorm; still we advanced.

"Of my regiment few remained; the officers were nearly all killed or wounded, and the colors passed from hand to hand. Soon they were near me. The next moment I snatched them from a falling soldier.

"Soldiers near me kissed the blood stained and tattered colors and then rushed forward with their faces set to die for their country."

Invisible Troops Next.

Invisibility may become the sixth arm of the French land service if Major Kopenhagen's invention for making troops invisible to the enemy observed before and above them is adopted by the general staff. The invention has been submitted, after trials beginning in April, 1913, at St. Cyr. In L'Informatio states that on trial the new method made twenty-five French soldiers on an open field so invisible that an aviator circling over the field at a height of 1,000ft. had to report, at the end of twenty-four minutes' search, that he could not locate them.

To Trim Underclothes.

A crocheted picot edge to trim underclothes and children's dresses is very pretty. Instead of making the usual foundation chain and heading, buy seam beading, trim the cloth off close and work right into the little holes of the beading. Often one can work into the material over a rolled hem, but many prefer using the beading, as the trimming can thus be ripped off and used again when the garment is outgrown or worn out.

White silk and wool moire are favored for the new waistcoat fronts.

Homemade Filter.

A homemade filter for a small quantity of liquid may be made by putting a piece of sponge over the hole in the bottom of a large flower pot, which should then be filled three-fourths full of a mixture of clean sand and charcoal, pounded into small bits. Over this lay a white woollen cloth, large enough to hang over the sides of the pot. After the fine dust has washed out of the charcoal from a few fillings of liquid a clear stream will flow through the filter.

Conductivity of Copper.

The electrical conductivity of copper depends on the total amount of impurities therein.

Make starch with soapy water, adding a pinch of borax.

A very hot iron should never be used for flannels or woollens.

A Dublin's Stratagem.

"Yes," said the business man, "I have given up trying to collect that little bill from Bilkins. You see, he is a pretty big fellow, and he used to throw my collectors out every time they called."

"Then why didn't you employ a woman collector? He couldn't do that to a woman."

"That's what I thought, so I got one and sent her around, but she never came back."

"Why not?"

"He married her."—London Tit-Bits.

Planned, but Never Written.

Among those books which great writers planned, but apparently never set pen to, are some notable "might have beens" of literature.

A writer who planned an article on the subject a few years ago, says the London Chronicle, finds among his notes a Robert Louis Stevenson one in the shape of a "Life of Hazlitt." Sir Richard Steele contemplated a "History of the War In Flanders;" Isaac Disraeli intended "A History of Our Vernacular Literature;" William Makepeace Thackeray not only planned a "Life of Talleyrand," but it was advertised for publication in long bygone years, and Emile Zola contemplated writing a book on Honore de Balzac.

Coal as a Charm.

In bygone England coal played a prominent part in popular superstition, but it was a very special kind of coal. It was found (or at any rate firmly believed to be found) under the root of the plantain on one day of the year—midsummer eve. And to its finder it brought not only immunity from "plague, carbuncle and burning," but also in the case of a maiden dreams of her future husband. A versatile charm and, with plantains so prolific, not rare. These "coals" were probably really old, discolored roots, but none of the faithful believers in them would have admitted that.—London Globe.

Curiosities of Flat Fish.

Flat fish are very peculiar creatures in many ways. Really they are not flat; they are narrow, and that part usually termed the back of a sole is really its side. When young these fishes are quite symmetrical, but as they grow older one of the eyes performs a most remarkable feat; it begins to travel from one side of the head to the other until it joins its fellow eye. Then it is possible for the fish to lie down on one side at the bottom of the sea for the rest of its life. On a flat fish which is not too old it is easy to trace the channel along which the eye has passed. Among these curious fishes are the flounder, plaice, sole, turbot and dab.

Dickens Not a Fisherman.

How surely one can deduce from Dickens' stories that piscatorial pursuits were utterly outside his world!

Mr. Snodgrass, Mr. Winkle and Tracy Tupman might toy with shotguns—to the trepidation of the keeper and his boy—but they never touched rod or line, and Mr. Pickwick himself, although represented on the first page of the original parts of the immortal history which bears his name as sitting asleep in a punt, while a hooked fish pulls down the end of his rod, was not, I believe, once betrayed in the varied course of his adventures into a trial of Walton's "genial art."—Willis B. Allen in Scribner's Magazine.

Photographing Bullets.

Moving pictures have unlimited possibilities apparently for the study of rapidly moving objects. An apparatus capable of making pictures at the rate of 100,000 a second has been made. With it seventy-two pictures of a revolver bullet were taken while the bullet moved ten inches. Pictures of a bullet passing through a stick of wood showed a curious condition. The bullet passed completely through the thin stick and was well on its way before the wood gave any signs of distress; then some tiny splinters started out, following the bullet, the stick began to split, and after the bullet had proceeded some distance the stick suddenly fell to pieces.—Chicago Herald.

Girls' Banks in Germany.

There is a kind of savings bank for girls in Germany which might well be imitated in this country. On the birth of a girl the parents can insure her in one of these banks for a sum that will give the child on the completion of her eighteenth year a small capital to start in life with, to follow her profession or finish her studies or to serve as a dower in the event of her marriage. The annual premium is a fixed sum and comparatively light and scarcely proves a burden. It certainly must prove a great help to a girl when she arrives at the age of discretion to find herself mistress of a snug little fund of her own.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SMALL DUTIES.

True, we can never be at peace till we have performed the highest duty of all, till we have arisen and gone to our Father, but the performance of smaller duties—yes, even of the smallest—will do more to give us temporary repose, will act more as healthful anodynes, than the greatest joys that can come to us from any other quarter.—G. Macdonald.

The fact that an article is advertised in a respectable newspaper should prove it worth buying by somebody.

An Easy Way to Get Fat and Be Strong

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomachs or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to a remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through its re-generative, reconstructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken down cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear, and you take on from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Leading druggists of Peterboro and vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

CAUTION—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

They Go Together.

"Henry," said the young wife, who had taken up physical culture, "how do you think I am built?"

"My dear," replied her husband fondly, "you are built very much like a watch."

"Thank you, Henry. And, Henry?"

"Well."

"If—if I am built like a watch, don't you think I should have a few jewels?"

And then Henry frowned and said the man who compliments a woman is an idiot.

Corporal Punishment.

Corporal punishment formerly had a wider significance than mere whipping. Henry de Bracton, chief justiciary of England in the reign of Henry III., divided corporal punishment into two kinds, those inflicted with and without torture. The stocks and the pillory would rank as corporal punishment; also mutilations and other grim tortures when imposed not to extort confessions, but as penalties, and the branding in the hand for felony, which was not abolished until George III.'s time.

Artists in Mother-of-pearl.

The incrustations of precious woods with mother-of-pearl is in Hanoi, French Tonquin, an important industry, an entire street, known as the "street of the inlayers," being devoted to it. Landscapes gleaming in the sun, sheaves of many colored flowers, the most delicate arabesques and many other beautiful things are evolved by the deft and pliant fingers of the artificers, and marvelous cabinets and other articles are fashioned and put together without the aid of nails by dovetailing and lacquer paste.

Out of Line.

An enlisted man at the post at Fort Leavenworth was ordered to the range for the first time for target drill. Out of twenty-one chances the newcomer made never a hit.

"Oh, you dub!" exclaimed an officer standing near. "You've missed the target every time! What's the matter?"

"Well, sir," answered the recruit nonchalantly, "the only reason I can think of at present is that the person who set up my target hasn't placed it in a straight line from here."

Strategem Versus Perfidy.

The laws of war have always distinguished sharply between strategem and perfidy. It is a legitimate strategem to send bogus signals and telegraph messages and bogus dispatches or newspapers, to be intercepted by the enemy; to make use of the enemy's signals, bugle calls, watchwords and words of command or to clothe the men of a single unit in the uniform of several units, so that the prisoners and dead may give the idea of a large force.

On the other hand, it is perfidy to take advantage of the enemy by deliberate lying or deception when there is a moral obligation to speak the truth. It would be perfidy, for instance, to pretend an armistice when none had been agreed on, to break a suspension of arms by surprise, to violate a safe conduct or any other truce or agreement, to fire on the enemy's uniform.—London Opinion.

The Red Sea Route.

When Napoleon invaded Egypt by way of Suez he attempted to cross the Red sea at the spot assigned by tradition to the crossing of the Children of Israel. He and his horsemen, however, seem, unintentionally, to have imitated Pharaoh rather than Moses, for they came very near to being drowned. According to French accounts, Napoleon saved his army by his presence of mind, ordering his cavalry to scatter in every direction to multiply the chances of coming on shallow water, and thus finding a line by which he and his people were extricated. The people of Suez, says Kinglake, declare that Napoleon lost his horse, got thoroughly submerged and was only fished ashore by the assistance of the natives.—London Standard.

Ancient Origin of Military Salute.

When did the military salute come into use? It certainly dates from the earlier half of the fifteenth century, says the St. James' Gazette. In the "Speculum Humanae Salvationis," which was issued before the invention of printing by movable types, there is an exceedingly quaint illustration in which Abraham is represented as saluting Melchisedec. The patriarch is in medieval armor and apparently on guard, and it would seem that Melchisedec is bringing him refreshments of water, and the salute is distinctly the military one still in use.

Bunkum.

Politicians are prone to talk "bunkum." And we so call it because when a member speaking in the United States congress was interrupted by the others leaving, he said: "Never mind, I'm talking to Buncombe," meaning Buncombe county, N. C., whence he came.

German Units Annihilated By The Russians

Britain Reaffirms Her Inflexible Determination

THE RUSSIANS ARE VALIANTLY RESISTING THE ENEMY'S ATTEMPT TO CAPTURE POLAND CAPITAL

It is Officially Admitted That the Slav Losses Have Been Very Heavy---Main Russian Armies Are Taking Up New Positions Beyond the Vistula---German Advance Has Been Brought to a Halt---Heavy Sacrifice of Lives

SERVICE OF INTERCESSION IN LONDON

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Aug. 4.—General Von Gallowitz's new drive southward toward the Petrograd-Warsaw railway is being held up by stubborn Russian resistance along the railway leading through Vyskof. It is officially admitted that the Slav losses in the past 48 hours have been very heavy. A brief official bulletin issued to-day furnished only meagre information regarding the German assault from the north, but nevertheless it was considered very encouraging in military circles. Last night's official communique reported Germans making progress along the Narew River, but "only with enormous losses." To-day's bulletin said: "We are valiantly resisting the enemy's attack on the Narew line. The Russian losses are very heavy." Military men here took this to mean that the German advance has been brought to a halt, though with heavy sacrifice of lives. The belief prevails here that if the Russian line on the Narew continues to hold for two more days the main Russian armies will have reached new positions assigned for them beyond the Vistula. Although the enemy infantry has crossed the Narew near Schvka, we prevented the artillery from crossing, continued the official statement. In the meantime our own artillery annihilated several units of the enemy who were without support of their guns. The Germans are now utilizing heavy reinforcements from France in endeavouring to advance eastwardly behind Ostrolenka.

THE GERMANS HAVE LOST TWENTY THOUSAND MEN

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 4. — A despatch to the Geneva Tribune from Innisbruck dealing with the fighting in Poland says: "A large force of Germans from Komorova and Masowirkijie to Brok are making an advance on the Bug, which is twenty miles distant. Severe fighting is ensuing as the Russians are making a firm stand. The Germans already have lost twenty thousand men. The Cossacks are making brilliant charges. The Germans defeated at Orz are retreating, surrounded by the Russians."

AUSTRIAN REGIMENT ENTRAPPED ONLY A FEW SURRENDERED

ROME, Aug. 4.—In the most furious battle of the lower Isonzo campaign an Austrian regiment was entrapped and cut to pieces by the Italians on the Carso Plateau on Monday night. The enemy fought valiantly when they found their retreat cut off, and few surrendered.

EMPIRE WILL PROSECUTE WAR TO THE BITTER END

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Humility and recognition of her weakness, replaced the blind confidence and cocksureness of a year ago when Great Britain to-day in thousands of patriotic meetings throughout the Empire observed the first anniversary of the declaration of war with Germany.

The Empire, without reservation, reaffirmed its determination to carry the war to the bitter end. Throughout to-day's meetings ran a feeling that Britain has made serious errors in the past, but with its bull-dog determination to profit by these mistakes and to see to it that they are not repeated in the future. The London newspapers sounded this keynote in their anniversary comments with practical unanimity. They frankly discussed the Empire's grave danger and declared that only a supreme united sacrificial effort could save the Empire from disaster. But the tone of their editorials on the whole was strongly hopeful for the future.

A universal anniversary programme was carried out at meetings held in England, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, India, Scotland, Ireland and wherever subjects of Great Britain were assembled.

At a mass meeting in Britain the following resolution was presented for adoption: "That on the anniversary of the declaration of a righteous war, this meeting of citizens records its inflexible determination to continue to a victorious end the struggle in the maintenance of those ideals of liberty and justice which are the common and sacred cause of the Allies."

London's part in the universal exercises brought thousands of people to the vicinity of St. Paul's Cathedral this afternoon to watch King George, Premier Asquith and other national leaders enter to inaugurate the second year of war by invoking Divine aid. The whole tone of the service at St. Paul's was one of solemn consecration of the individual and the nation to the serious work of the coming year.

INTERCESSORY SERVICES IN THE CHURCHES TO-DAY

Anniversary of the Declaration of War Commemorated, in Several Local Churches by Special Services This Morning

PRAYERS FOR THE EMPIRE

To-day, the anniversary of the declaration of war, was observed in several of the churches as a time for special intercession on behalf of the nation and allies, and the cause for which they are fighting. At St. John's church there was a celebration of Holy Communion at 8 o'clock this morning, and during the noon hour an intercessory service was held, at which a large number attended. The hymns, "O, God, our help in ages past," "Holy Father, in Thy Keeping," were sung, and the offices of the Litany were said by Rev. H. F. Battersby, who is supplying at St. John's during Rev. Canon Davidson's absence.

At St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, there was a celebration of Holy Communion, at which prayers for the Empire, for the soldiers and sailors of the King, and for the return of a rightful and abiding peace, were offered.

At St. Peter's Cathedral, Church of the Sacred Heart, and Church of the Immaculate Conception, after the regular seven o'clock masses, prayers were said on behalf of Britain and her allies.

Langemarck Hero Visiting In City

Capt. Begy One of the Handful of the 4th Battalion Who Came Through Captain Begy, who is visiting Dr. F. P. McNulty for a few days, is one of the remnant of the 4th Battalion of the First Canadian Contingent that fought at Langemarck. He is home on a furlough of three months, having lost his eye in that engagement, into which the 4th Battalion rushed 1,000 strong. Only one hundred of them returned. He was in the thick of the fighting in that memorable engagement in which his left eye was shot out. Capt. Begy has not yet been able to dispense with the bandages necessitated by his head wound. It is likely that he will be present at to-night's recruiting demonstration at the Armouries.

More Bodies Are Recovered

Special to The Examiner:

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 4.—As the debris of the greatest flood in this section of the south shore of Lake Erie was uncovered this morning more bodies were brought to the surface. While Coroner D. S. Hanley says he fears fifty or more have perished only twenty-five bodies have been brought to the surface. Of these at 11 o'clock it was reported that seventeen have been identified, and from forty to sixty are still believed to be missing. The property damage is etsimated at five millions.

THE TOBACCO FUND

CITIZENS OF PETERBOROUGH HEARTILY ENDORSE THE TOBACCO FUND.

"Though they are far away fighting for the life of the Empire, they still occupy a large share of the thoughts of all left at home."

—Extract from a non-smoking contributor's letter.

Each mail brings dozens of letters to The Examiner heartily endorsing our efforts to provide tobacco and cigarettes for our brave boys at the front. One reader writes, "The elimination of middlemen's profit appeals to me particularly." This, of course, has reference to the fact that not one cent is deducted by The Examiner for the working of the fund or to defray freight or revenue duties, all the money going to purchase tobacco at manufacturers' cost.

PARTICULARS OF TOBACCO FUND.

1. Every cent contributed goes to purchase tobacco and cigarettes.

2. By arrangement with the British and French Governments the tobacco is packed in bond and shipped duty free. This enables the Overseas Club to secure tobacco and cigarettes at the lowest possible price.

3. For one quarter (25c) the Overseas Club are able to supply: 50 cigarettes, 4 oz. smoking mixture, a box of matches and a postcard. For $1.00 the Overseas Club can supply: 50 cigarettes, 4 oz. smoking tobacco, 1 briar pipe, 1 tinder lighter, 1 rubber-lined pouch, some matches and a postcard.

The postcard is a most pleasing feature, bringing as it does the sender into personal touch with the receiver. In every package subscribed for, the postcard carrying the subscriber's name and address is enclosed, thus enabling the soldier to acknowledge his thanks.

4. Packages may be sent to individuals provided the right number and regiment is given. However, in the case of "Personals" like this it is essential that the name of the soldier to benefit and the name of the donor be kept together or earmarked in such a way that the clerk shipping the parcel will insert the right postcard in the parcel. This can be very easily done by putting a number opposite the donor's name on collecting card and putting the same number opposite the name of the soldier to benefit. The names and addresses of soldiers to benefit will of course have to be kept on a separate sheet or card.

5. It is very important to note that the tobacco and cigarette parcels can only be sent to soldiers on active service; and not those in England or Canada.

6. Packages can also be sent to the British Navy or to the Belgian soldiers, but in the latter case the Overseas Club cannot undertake to deliver packages to individuals.

ARMOURIES HAVE SEATS FOR OVER 2,000 AT MEETING TO-NIGHT

New Recruits May Remain Here Over a Month at Preliminary Training---Recruiting Has Been Brisker This Week ---Programme for the Big Meeting.

The accommodation at the Armouries invites an immense crowd for to-night's public demonstration, which inaugurates the recruiting campaign that will be carried on here during the the next ten days. Mr. Stanley, the assistant caretaker, says there is ample and comfortable seating for an assembly of 2,000 and more than that number can be received. A large platform has been erected on the north side of the parade floor, and the benches and chair stretch in amphitheatre arrangement around it. Everyting is in readiness for to-night's meeting. Fair weather was expected, but for a momentous occasion of this kind the downpour should not dampen the loyalty which should be heightened on this occasion.

SOME APPLICANTS GET CERTIFICATES

Certificates testifying that they had presented themselves before the medical examiner have been secured by a number of men at the Armouries this week. Many of those who have been turned down apparently gave no thought to the matter of receiving something testimonial of their applying for enlistment. They were doubtless satisfied that they had done their duty to that extent. But there have been a few who must have realized that their physical deficiencies would prevent them from enlisting. However, they went up for examination and afterwards, when turned down, asked for a certificate, which was given them. "Well, I tried to get by, anyway" was their sentiment, and at the same time they wanted to make sure whether they could qualify or not. It is also certain that considerations of satisfying employers was at least a minor influence.

SPEAKERS WILL ALL BE HERE ON TIME

Sir Geo. Foster will arrive in Peterborough on the 3.20 express from Montreal. The Kingston speakers and recruiting sergeants will come in on the 5.30 G.T.R. train from Port Hope. Representatives of the 77th Regiment

DEVASTATING STORM SWEEPS OVER ONTARIO

Disturbance Was Caused by a Collision Between Air Currents of Varying Temperature — Crops Are Badly "Laid."

THE LOCAL SITUATION

Probabilities for To-morrow—Fair.

Yesterday's storm was said by the weather man to have been caused by very exceptional circumstances— the meeting of two current of war air with one current of cool air— yesterday's great storm was the most severe that has visited the lower lake regions since the storm of November 11, 1913, on the Great Lakes. Toronto received the brunt of the storm in Canada. The city was deluged with over three inches of rain up to ten o'clock last night, and the gale that blew registered about forty miles an hour at the Eastern Gap and thirty-eight miles at the Meteorological offices.

Storm Signals Busy.

Coming from Florida and California, the two warm currents of air met the cool current from Hudson's Bay south of the Great Lakes and proceeded northwards, and will likely travel east, according to the Weather Man, and then northwards, dispersing in the northern woods of Quebec.

Lighting Service Effected.

In Peterborough the gale that accompanied the heavy downpour of rain yesterday occasioned some inconvenience to the Otonabee Power Co., whose wires were blown down in some places. Patrons of this company were without light for a time. The Hydro-Electric lines were also affected by the storm and several places were in darkness. The Public Library, a popular rendezvous for many on a rainy night, was without lights last night. Repairs, it is learned, were made this morning, and the usual service was re-established shortly after dinner.

The trouble department of the Bell Telephone Company reported that some of their lines were down between Millbrook and Port Hope, and also along the lake front, but locally there were comparatively few complaints.

The rain of yesterday and to-day will cause widespread damage, even should the rest of the week be dry. There has also been too much rain for the good of the oat crop, while windstorms in many localities have flattened out fields. Prospects of a big potato crop are diminished by damage through water, a large number of farmers reporting that the potatoes are beginning already to show signs of rotting in the ground.

Crops Badly "Laid."

Goderich, Aug. 4. —The wind and rain storm which has raged all day has done serious damage to the crops in this vicinity. They have been badly laid, and the oats, which promised a heavy yield, will now return only a light crop. Corn, while suffering somewhat is not so seriously affected, as a majority of the crop is expected to straighten up again. A large proportion of wheat and barley has been cut, but the yield of that which is still standing will be materially reduced.

Almost Like Cloudburst.

Windsor, Aug. 4. —For several hours the whole of Essex county was swept by one of the most violent rain and wind storms seen in many years. At times the rain fell so rapidly that it closely resembled a cloudburst. Practically all the damage done, however, is confined to farm crops. In a few isolated instances, lightning and wind damaged buildings, but none seriously.

Cellars Flooded.

Hamilton, Aug. 4.— Following the heavy rain there was quite a heavy downpour last night which added to the damage already done, and many cellars have been flooded about the city. The rain came down in torrents for more than an hour, and all evening the fall was heavy.

Grain Lodged Toward West.

Owen Sound, Aug. 4—Inquiries from the country sections adjacent to Owen Sound would indicate that the storm did considerable damage to the standing grain. Oats in particular, which are a record crop here, are more or less blown over, and in many cases so seriously lodged as to lead to the conclusion that more than 10 per cent. loss will be sustained. The fortunate phase of the situation is that it was an east wind that did the damage, and the grain is lodged toward the west. As west winds are the prevailing winds here, a few good drying days may mean a considerable recovery.

COMMUNICATION TRENCHES NAMED LIKE CITY STREETS

"Trenches Will Be Worth Seeing by Tourists After the War is Over," Writes Pte. Howard Curtis of the Second Battalion

"THINGS ARE QUIET"

Pte. Howard Curtis of the Second Battalion, 1st Canadian contingent, who was reported wounded some weeks ago, has sufficiently recovered to be able to return to the firing line, and, writing to his mother from the trenches, under date of July 15th, says:

Somewhere In France,
Thursday, July 15, 1915.

Dear Mother,—Things are a bit quiet just now, so I will take the opportunity to write a few lines to you. We came into the trenches again last night and, believe me, we sure had a wet time of it. It started to rain yesterday just as we were leaving our billets, and it kept up all night. We got a good soaking, but to-day is a nice sunny day, so we will get dried out again.

The trenches here are well built, and so far it has been pretty quiet, but some fun might start at any time, and we might get a chance to cook some sausages. The trenches are two hundred yards apart at this point and it does not do for a fellow to put his head up too far, but just the same we keep a keen look out for "Fritz."

These trenches will sure be something worth while for tourists to visit after the war is over. One would hardly believe how many underground streets there are over here, and you have to know your way about or else you would soon get lost. They have the different communication trenches, etc., all named, just like the streets of a city, and, in fact, some times it puts you in mind of an underground town.

General French reviewed us yesterday and he spoke very highly of the way we have carried out our part of the campaign, and he said he knew we could do just as good in the future. It's a funny thing, but every time a General has reviewed us, it has been a sure sign that we have some exciting work ahead of us. This might seem a superstitious idea, but it has happened that way every time so far. However, we are ready for anything that comes, and the sooner it is over the better.

The Germans are sending over a few "coal boxes" just now. These shells make a terrific explosion, but they do little damage to us, although sometimes they get pretty close to our reserves. The country around here is very much like Ontario in regard to natural resources, but the big guns have put a black spot on its beauty. It is no wonder the Belgians fought so hard to save their country from the hands of the Kaiser.

I expect the second contingent will soon be coming over to France, and no doubt they will get their share of the war, just the same as we have. The first here got pretty well cut up, but we are still in the ring and just as able as ever we were.

I received the parcel all right. It arrived with last night's mail and, believe me, I sure enjoyed the contents, especially the strawberries and the "diamond wedding cake." My chum and I had a little celebration in our dug-out this morning and the wedding cake sure put the finishing touches to it.

Our battalion had a "grand Orange celebration" on the night of the 12th. Mr. James Beatty of Cobourg led the parade, mounted on one of his fine chargers. They had two bands, one was the Royal Scotch pipers, and the other was the 2nd battalion transport musicians. They had anything from a horseshoe to a biscuit tin for instruments, but just the same it made a bit of fun, both for us and the civilians.

I can't think of much more to write this time. Please excuse this scribbling and with love to all, I remain, as ever,

HOWARD.

FAITH AND WORKS.

To-day is ordained in all the churches as a day of intercession and prayer for the success of the cause of Britain and her allies, for the shortening of the war and the coming of peace. Prayer is a mighty weapon; that is, the prayer of faith; but faith without works is dead. It is true that "there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few," but in this time it seems that He wills "to save by many." Hence there is need for more men in the battle line. David, the son of Jesse, had faith that he could slay the "uncircumsized Philistine," who had "defied the armies of the living God"; but he gave his faith effect by doing what he had to do. We have faith that we can overcome the "uncircumsized Philistine" of Germany, who has defied all the laws of God and man; but like David we must do it; must add works to faith. We need every David in Canada to enlist, to take up arms. While the "men of Israel and Judah" prayed, David acted. While our people pray to-day, let our "striplings" act to-day.

A PIRATICAL BLASPHEMER.

The "hypocrites" that shrank and cowered under the righteous sarcasm of our Lord in his earthly days, must have been married men; for the German Kaiser is a lineal descendant. We have this imperial degenerate at one moment unctuously declaring that God is on his, the devil's, side, and in the next confessing a guilty foreknowledge of the Lusitania murder. In a personal letter to a personal friend in the United States, he implored the latter not to allow his son to take passage on the doomed Lusitania. Though others may have suggested and arranged the Lusitania crime, in this letter we have evidence that the canting Kaiser knew all about it, and gave it his blessing. A man who invokes and employs all the murderous machinery of evil, in the name of the Lord, betrays Christianity and all its works, as effectively as ever the arch-traitor Judas did. It is to down and oust such a murderous rascal and all that he stands for, that the help of every fighting man in Canada is called for.

AN EXAMPLE.

You may not be eligible for a fighting recruit, but there is a place for you in the helping ranks. We can't all go to fight "with spears and staves," but there is work for us all to do. We can hearten the fighters; we can roll bandages; we can help make munitions of war. There is something we can all do. The mouse of the fable freed the lion from the net. If we can't do anything else we can show a bold front; and hold a hopeful encouraging attitude. A splendid example of a Canadian citizen doing his bit, is Rev. F. C. Chilton, Presbyterian minister at Theodore, Saskatchewan. He has resigned to go and work in a munitions factory at Saskatoon, and was one of twenty-nine men accepted for work yesterday. "Go thou and do likewise"—enlist if you are able to fight; if not that do something else. Stand behind the man who enlists; hearten and help him by making him feel that while he may be fighting in the trenches you are doing something definite and tangible at home to make his fight more effective and to help on the cause to which his King and country call him.

TALKING AND DOING.

We have the pessimistic critic and carper always with us. While there is need for the exercise of the highest courage, to inspire ourselves and others with the hope that comes from the highest endeavour, we have many amongst us who take the gloomy view and talk the gloomy talk of the pessimist. They say that everything in connection with the war is going wrong; that things have been mismanaged; that no adequate effort has been made to provide and equip the forces to conquer the enemy; that after a year of war we have made no progress; that things are no better than they were a year ago.

They are themselves to blame for the attitude they are assuming today. Their disappointment is in this case natural; their present pessimism is as idiotic as their optimism at the beginning of the war. They looked, without any warrant, for speedy conquest. They foresaw a short war. They did not know they were unseasoningly hopeful, and the present situation becomes to them more serious and less hopeful by contrast. Those who knew, or could forecast events intelligently did not look for a short war. Kitchener said the war would last at least three years, and events justify his estimate.

It is not true that we are no further advanced than we were a year ago. Then Great Britain had only a handful of soldiers to send overseas. Her first expeditionary force consisted of only 150,000 men. Then Germany was on its victorious way to Paris. Germany was stopped and turned back by this handful of British cooperating with the French. Now Britain has more than half a million men in France, a strong army in the Dardanelles, and is successfully waging a number of smaller wars in the East and elsewhere. Now Britain has two million soldiers under arms. A year ago Britain was unprepared for war; she has now between two and a half and three million men, ready for war, and the machinery for equipping them with arms, adequate for the needs of such a force. Since the beginning, her mighty fleet, silently but obscurely, has been policing the seas. The commerce of Germany has been swept from the seas. Her raiders have been captured or sunk. Save only the pin-pricking submarine activity of Germany, she is as helpless on the seas as China. While Britain and her dominions have been growing in military strength, Germany has been wasting her strength in desperate attempts to bulldoze her programme of conquest through. She has put up a mighty fight, and there is evidence that she has called practically her full strength to arms. In her Russian campaign she would not be withdrawing her troops from the western front at a most critical moment if she had reserves to call upon. The Dardanelles operations are progressing slowly but surely, and before long the back door to Austria and Germany will be open for free passage of the invading allies, with Russia still unbeaten and dangerous in the East, and the allied armies practically victorious in the West. Italy, whose progress since last May when she entered the fight, has been practically unbroken, is a great new factor.

Germany is at bay. She is fighting strongly and grandly with the brute-beast courage of desperation. But she is ringed about with active enemies, and though the struggle may still be long and hard, the beginning of her end is at hand.

But she will win yet, if we do not throw all our resources into the fight. We need every man in Canada and in the Empire to make victory sure, to shorten the fearful carnage and the struggle that is sapping the resources of the Empire, and of the larger half of the world. We need men; we need muntions; we need the help of every citizen. We need men to fight; we need the help of our citizens of every rank to stand behind, and hearten and help the soldiers that duty sends into the ranks. We have no room for idlers. There is one thing, however, we do not need; we do not need the croakers, the carpers, the birds of evil omen, who gloom and growl, who stand idly by and criticise those who are doing their best. We need everybody to hearten everybody in doing the best we can, to lend the most effective help in waging a war for freedom and humanity. It is pertinent to ask the man, or the men, that think, or rather say, that things are not going fast and well enough, what they are doing to make things go faster and better.

"ONE YEAR OF WAR"

The Bishop of Toronto has composed the following hymn and issued it for use in the services of the church to-day, the anniversary of the declaration of war. It is set to the tune, "Rest," to which Whittier's hymn, "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind," is usually sung:

One year of war — Thy chastening blow
Comes to its close to-day,
And Thou, O Lord our God, dost know
The bitterness of warfare's woe,
Whose end seems far away.

One year of war! O God, the loss
Of these appalling hours!
Borne down beneath the heavy cross,
Earth's pleasures seem to turn to dross
For these sad hearts of ours.

One year of war! God soothe the strain
And struggle of these days.
Blot out the strife, and ease the pain,
Accept our sacrifice to gain
The favour of Thy praise.

One year of war; Lord may we learn
Thy chastening rod to see
In this war—judgment to discern
Thy will, that we to Thee should turn,
More loyal be to Thee.

One year of war! Dear Prince of Peace,
Bring to an end this strife.
Make hate and cruelty to cease,
From death and hell grant us release
And bring us all to Life.

—Amen.

Voice of The People

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,— With reference to Ald. Duffus' report re labour question, I think it is unfair to talk of punishing men who refuse pick and shovel work, when they are physically unfit for such wor, and there are many of them in the city. It is up to Ald. Duffus to discriminate.

Yours truly,
A Factory Hand.

The Canada Gazette Sat., 17th July, 1915

B. F. ACKERMAN, SON AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that under the First Part of chapter 79 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, known as "The Companies Act," letters patent have been issued under the seal of the Secretary of State of Canada, bearing date the 7th day of July, 1915, incorporating Benjamin Franklin Ackerman, William Clair Ackerman and Edward Whitla Borbridge, manufacturers, and George Robertson, bookkeeper, of the City of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario; and Jennie Edna Waddell, of the Township of North Monaghan, in the County of Peterborough, in the said Province of Ontario, married woman, for the following purposes, viz.:

(a) To acquire and take over as a going concern the good-will and the undertaking and business in all its departments of the unincorporated firm of B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company, of the City of Peterborough, Ontario, and all and every of the personal assets and liabilities of that firm, wherever situated, together with the real estate standing in the name of the said firm or any member of it, situate in the said City of Peterborough, which is used in the operations of the said firm's undertaking and business, and to give as consideration therefor fully paid shares in the capital stock of this corporate company, and to construct and maintain or alter any buildings or works necessary or convenient for the company's purposes;

(b) To carry on the businesses of makers of and dealers in saddlery, horse harness, horse collars, horse blankets, waterproof horse covers, whips, motor car and carriage strap work, and leather shoes and shoe findings, and in hides, skins and leathers of all kinds, in hardware, plated goods, manufacturers of and dealers in bicycles, tricycles and motor carriages and makers of and dealers in trunks and travelling bags; in gutta-percha goods, and all things of which rubber and gutta percha are the component parts, and the various materials entering into the manufacture of all such goods;

(c) To manufacture, buy, sell, repair, alter and exchange, let or hire, import or export, from and to all countries, domestic and foreign, and deal in all kinds of articles and things which may be requisite for the purposes of any of the said businesses or commonly supplied or dealt in by persons engaged in any of said businesses, or which may seem capable of being profitably dealt with in any of the said businesses;

(d) To sell, let, develop and dispose of, or otherwise deal with, the above undertakings or all or any part of the property of the said company, upon any terms, with power to accept as the consideration any shares, stocks or obligations of, or interest in any other company engaged in a similar business;

(e) To purchase, lease or otherwise acquire, and to hold, own, use, operate, introduce, sell, assign and convey all trade marks, secret processes, trade names and of inventions, improvements and processes, used in connection with, or secured under any letter patent or otherwise, of Canada, or any other country, in relation to any of the said businesses, and to use, exercise, develop, grant licenses in respect of or otherwise turn to account, all such trade marks, patents, letters, concessions, processes and the like, and any such property, rights and information so acquired, and with a view of working and development of the same, which the said corporation may think calculated directly or indirectly to effect these profits in connection with any of the said businesses to be acquired or carried on by the said company;

(f) To do all such things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above object.

The operations of the company to be carried on throughout the Dominion of Canada and elsewhere by the name of "B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company, Limited," with a capital stock of five hundred thousand dollars, divided into 5,000 shares of one hundred dollars each, and the chief place of business of the said company to be at the City of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario.

Dated at the office of the Secretary of State of Canada, this 8th day of July, 1915.

THOMAS MULVEY,
Under Secretary of State.

THE RAILWAYS WILL ASSIST THE GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT

In Spite of Impaired Revenue They Consent to Haul Gravel For Good Roads at a Low Rate

An important decision has just been rendered by the Railway Commission of Canada. This is of great interest to municipalities and to all those concerned in the good roads movement.

Mr. J. D. Armstrong, M.P., made an application to the Board, requesting it in order that low commodity rates should be extended by the railway companies to the movements of gravel so as to enable the municipalities in Western Ontario to proceed with the work of general road improvement at a reasonable expense.

Sir H. L. Drayton, Chief Commissioner, after hearing evidence given by the applicants and the railway companies, says in his decision:

"The Board cannot order the companies to put in unremunerative rates, nor at a rate so low as to be unfairly out of line with rates which are necessary to be maintained in order to permit the continuance of satisfactory operation of railways, due regard being had to proper consideration of the value of the commodities shipped and the service performed. . . . While, therefore, I felt it was impossible for the Board to make any order, the Board has urged upon the companies the advisability of recognizing a public interest and the benefits which would result to the companies themselves from a proper system of good roads."

"The Ontario Government has also intervened, and is very desirous of obtaining extremely low rates, with a view of aiding the present campaign for good roads. The companies are insistent that they require more revenue, and that their rate returns as a whole are inadequate and insufficient; and, in the first instance, took the position that while they admitted the need of good roads, that, in view of their present necessities and of their present application for increase in freight rates, no concessions could possibly be made by them, as this would be construed as evidence that an increase in rates generally was not required. The railways have been assured that no such construction will be made by the Board."

"I am glad to say that the railways now state that, regarding the question in the light of public policy and the possibility of increased railway business as a result of the added prosperity, and with the understanding that the rates offered are not to be regarded as indicating sufficient rates for similar commercial service, they will carry in the territory in question gravel that the municipalities require at a flat blanket rate of 50 cents per ton for any distance up to and including 50 miles; the rate to be a carload rate, and cars to be loaded to their full stencilled carrying capacity, the gravel to be consigned to the Clerk of the Municipality, and to be used for the purpose of road making; and the railway companies to be notified in advance of the number of carloads required, so that special instructions may be issued in each case. It is anticipated that 50 miles will be the maximum haul, but should municipalities at further distances require the gravel the rate will be scaled down in the usual manner for greater distances."

"The hope is expressed that the action of the railways will be considered by municipalities in the same way that it is being considered by the Board, and that the benefit to the public from road construction will more than repay the railways for the concessions they are making."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Amateur Picture Play

Its Production Was Attended With Difficulties.

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

When Daisy Allison, who had made a hit in amateur theatricals, noticed in a newspaper that film companies were inviting persons owning handsome places to furnish scenarios for picture plays, which the occupants were to enact themselves in their own houses and on their own grounds, she clapped her hands in glee. What could be more delightful than to organize a company to enact a play, making a house party of the actors and actresses? The summer season was at hand. The flowers were blooming in the garden; nature was ready to provide the scenery.

Miss Allison was aware that a plot must be provided for the play and a knowledge of construction was requisite. One of her acquaintances was a playwright, and quite likely his services could be secured to get up a scenario. As for the actors and actresses, Miss Allison's friends would be climbing over one another to secure invitations to the histrionic house party.

She entered upon her work at once, her first act being to write a note to Mr. Howard Ashley, a playwright, stating her design and asking him if he would officiate in the construction of the play. He consented, stating that he had a number of scenarios on hand from which a selection, doubtless, could be made and recommended that the play be decided on before the invitations were given out in order that persons best fitted for the different parts might be included. Since Miss Daisy herself had proved her ability as an actress she would, doubtless, be expected to take the leading lady's part and a play should be chosen that would be best suited to her abilities. Then, too, the scenes should be fitted to the Allisons' beautiful country place and its environs.

Mr. Ashley submitted several plays, and one was decided upon, the principal scenes of which were laid in the country home of the Earl of Pemberton, an English nobleman. A synopsis of the play is this: An American girl, only child of a very rich man, goes to England, where she visits the home of another branch of her family among the nobility. An impecunious English lord (Axminster) attempts to marry her for her money. Her father, who is at the head of a large manufacturing concern in America, sends his right hand man, Eben MacArthur, over to investigate the matter. He discovers that Axminster is a fraud and exposes him. The girl marries MacArthur, who takes the place of a son to the manufacturer and inherits, with his wife, the business.

Mr. Ashley, who was experienced not only in the construction of plays, but in choosing the scenes to be photographed, consented to take charge of the whole affair, and nothing remained but to make up a list of names of those who were to compose the company and issue the invitations. The cast of principal characters when completed was as follows:

Lucinda Owens, Miss Allison; Lord Axminster, Mr. Perkins; Eben MacArthur, Mr. Wilson; Gladys Pemberton, Miss Stevens.

So great was the pressure for invitations that it was found necessary to make a long list of dramatis personae, though the four persons mentioned carried the play. It was also found necessary to bring in a number of the neighboring country people for tenants on the Pemberton estate.

When the guests arrived each was furnished with a synopsis of the play, and on the following morning the photographing commenced.

Now, there would have been no trouble whatever in producing an attractive play within a reasonable time had the originals of the characters been indifferent to one another. Unfortunately Lucinda Owens (Miss Allison) selected for the part of Eben MacArthur Dick Wilson, with whom she was on the eve of an engagement. This was all right considering the way the play ended, but in the earlier stages she was expected to treat him with disdain. Gladys Pemberton (Miss Stevens), who was supposed in the play to be angling for Lord Axminster, was really a rival of Miss Allison for the affections of Mr. Wilson, who played the part of Eben MacArthur.

One of the first scenes was an interview between Eben MacArthur and Lucinda Owens, in which the gentleman was to be treated with something more than indifference. Unfortunately the lady found it impossible to conceal her affection for him. Ten efforts were made by the photographic artist before a fair one was secured.

When Eben MacArthur arrived in England he was received at the Pemberton manor house by Gladys Pemberton, who was at the time enjoying a tete-a-tete in the flower garden with Lord Axminster, for whom she was supposed to be angling. Being a rival of Lucinda Owens for the affections of Eben MacArthur and having witnessed that lady's exhibition of a liking for MacArthur, she was in a very bad humor. She turned her back on his lordship and, plucking a rose, presented it to the newcomer from America. A dozen photographs were made of this scene before the lady could be brought to enact it as intended—that is, she was supposed to look upon MacArthur as an uncultured American backwoodsman and act toward him accordingly.

Since the cost of the photographs was borne by the film company, their manager began to fear that the expense of production would be too great to warrant continuing the photographing. He stopped work, but after Mr. Ashley had lectured the actresses on their behavior and they had promised to do better in future the manager consented to proceed.

Eben MacArthur in the play wins Lord Axminster's confidence in order to expose his designs upon Lucinda Owens' fortune. In the earlier scenes he is expected to show his lordship much admiration. But in the real life part these two men were rivals for the hand of the hostess. Now, a photograph exaggerates an expression. The result was that the films of these earlier scenes showed sufficient hatred on the part of MacArthur toward his rival to give away his detective purposes.

Again another halt was called by the manager of the film company, and Mr. Ashley lectured the actors in the same strain he had spoken to the actresses. But by this time seven times the length of film had been used that was ordinarily necessary, and few of the scenes between the principal characters had been pictured satisfactorily. Indeed, matters had come to such a pass that Mr. Ashley, who was aware of the difficulties underlying the ill success, declared that success in picture play making with a company wherein there were so much love and inordinate jealousy incompatible with the play must result as it had begun—in failure—and the attempt had better be discontinued.

However, Miss Daisy Allison, whose heart was set on the enterprise and whose pocketbook was well stocked, agreed to stand the expense of making the photographs above a certain amount, and after that the manager of the film company was pacified. The only danger now was that the patience of the photographer would give out. Nevertheless, the extra cost having been provided for, the production of the films proceeded, and four reels were finished, if not satisfactorily, at least the best that could be done under the circumstances.

Mr. Ashley hoped that at the manufacture of the fifth and last reel the actors and actresses would have come into such harmony in their parts that the scenes would be sufficiently successful to cause audiences to forget the blemish of the earlier scenes. Eben MacArthur shows up the villainy of Lord Axminster and, after an interview in a dramatic scene, points to the door through which his lordship passes, cringing. Ashley dreaded this scene, for by this time the rivalry between the two men in the real life affair had become extremely bitter. But the playwright hoped for the best.

He was disappointed. Axminster, who was left tackle in a football team, becoming exasperated at the charges of his rival, instead of slinking out under the torrent of invective took his rival by the collar and the seat of his trousers and threw him into a flower bed.

The commotion that followed this exploit was only allayed by the hostess demanding an apology from the football man and a promise that he would play his part as was intended for a second picture, on pain of a discontinuance of his acquaintance. This brought him to terms, and films of the scene were obtained which were at least in accordance with the scenario.

There was more trouble among the actresses. In the play Gladys Pemberton wins the confidence of Lucinda Owens in order to detach her from Lord Axminster, and Lucinda does not discover her treachery until the last scene, when she upbraids her and steps into an automobile with MacArthur to go to a steamer to return to America. When this scene came to be enacted Lucinda's taunts had a similar effect on Gladys to MacArthur's on Lord Axminster. The chauffeur brought the car up under the porte-cochere. MacArthur was waiting at the car door for Lucinda to finish her contemptuous remarks to Gladys; but, getting tired of waiting, he stepped into the auto and took possession of a back seat. Suddenly Gladys made a dash for the auto, jumped in and shut the door. The chauffeur, hearing the slam, took it for a signal to depart, put on the clutch and went rolling away with the wrong woman.

Had not this inordinate display of jealousy occurred in the very last scene the play would never have been finished. Lucinda, who had been left on the piazza by her rival, stamped her foot and gave other evidence of vindictiveness. The photographer, whose patience had already been exhausted, stormed; the manager of the film company clapped his hat on his head, thus signifying that he was through with the affair, while Ashley ran down the roadway calling lustily for the chauffeur to stop.

Nothing but the fact that the scene was the last to be enacted saved the play from oblivion. As it was, a second picture was not made till after an hour's wrangle, and then half a dozen attempts were made before one was completed that would do at all. As soon as it was accomplished the party broke up in a cyclone, the guests departing by afternoon trains, thus leaving a score of empty covers on a dinner table at which the completion of the play was to have been celebrated.

There is much in picture plays that is not dependent on the moods of the performers. The scenery in Miss Allison's play was very beautiful, the costumes of the actresses were artistic combinations, and the actresses were high bred women. Perhaps it is these elements that made the play, after all, a success.

Just Suits My Needs Building Up the System

This is the Way Thousands of Women Are Speaking of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"I want to state that I have never taken anything to do me so much good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food," writes Mrs. Edson Brock, Trenholmville, Que., "and I am never without it in the house. I was so nervous I could not sleep, but now I sleep soundly at nights and wake up feeling refreshed and ready for the day's work. I used the Nerve Food for months and found that it just suits my needs and has built up the system wonderfully. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition and am thankful for it.

"My husband was a great sufferer from itching piles and has been entirely cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

We are constantly receiving letters like this in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Everywhere it is being used because of its great restorative and reconstructive influence on the nervous system. Men and women who are run down in health, tired, nervous and discouraged, find in this great Food Cure the means of nourishing the exhausted system back to health and vigour.

Headaches, indigestion, sleeplessness, nervous irritability, lack of energy, and vigour — all tell of nervous exhaustion, and indicate the need of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Instead of affording mere temporary relief by stimulating the nerves, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food builds up the system by supplying the ingredients from which Nature forms new rich blood and revitalizes the wasted nervous system. Put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test when you are feeling tired out and discouraged, all the body with new rich blood and new nerve force and you will realize again the joy of good health. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

RUSSIA SUGGESTS AN OFFENSIVE IN THE WEST

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, via London, Aug. 4.—Semi-official press material issued at the General Staff Headquarters in Petrograd says:

"The sending of important German reinforcements from France to our front goes back to the second week in July, Russian style, when Field Marshal von Mackensen met a cruel rebuff on the Vieprz River and the battle on the Narew River took on a stubborn character.

"For every success we have the enemy compensates by piling up against us new forces from the Western front, thereby creating very favourable conditions for operations by our allies."

IS YOUR TONGUE FURRED? HAVE YOU HEADACHE?

How few feel well this time of the year? The whole system needs house-cleaning; the blood is impure; it needs enriching. Nothing will do the work more effectively than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Take them at night and you feel better next morning; they work wonders in the body while you sleep. Being composed of pure vegetable extracts and juices, Dr. Hamilton's Pills are safe for the young and old alike. Try this wonderful family medicine to-day, it will do you a world of good. Whether for biliousness, headache, lack of appetite or constipation, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will quickly cure, 25c. per box at all dealers.

Quaint Old Harvard Customs.

Quaint rules and customs regulated class days at Harvard university in the seventeenth century, for in 1661 the governors ordered that "the president" "from time to time commend it to the parents and guardians of the students that commence that they provide not above one gallon of wine for a student, judging it to be sufficient for that occasion." In 1691, "the corporation having been informed that the custom taken up in the college for the commencers to have plum cake in disbonorable to the college, not grateful to wise men and chargeable to the parents of the commencers, do therefore put an end to that custom." In 1727 a private commencement was determined upon and was observed for several years, but was not a success. The laws of 1734 provided that "no commencers shall have at his chambers any plum cake, plain cake or pies or hot meats of any kind except what is left of the dinner in the hall or any brandy, rum or distilled liquors or composition, made with any of them."

Modern Necessities.

"One of the reasons for the cost of living," observes a wise clubman, "lies in the fact that people buy wholly unnecessary things. I had a conversation with the proprietor of a novelty shop in Fifth avenue a few days ago. A shiny object had attracted my attention, and I inquired about its use.

"'Tweeze,' said the proprietor, 'are gilded pincers to pick up letters one has placed on the letter scales.'

"'And that ivory stick, carved and forked at the end?'

"'People use that to fish out things they have dropped into carafes.'

"'That square of morocco about the size of a mitt; what is that for?'

"'That's a tampon—used to press down stumps after sticking them on envelopes.'

"'That ornamental box with a whole battery of little brushes?'

"'Those are to clean other brushes; brushes to clean hairbrushes, brushes to clean toothbrushes.'"—New York Post.

The Oceans.

One per cent of the contents of the oceans would cover all the land areas of the globe to a depth of 200 feet.

Curious.

If a man is bettered his condition is improved. If he is "bested" he is really "worsted."

An Apt Simile.

Some men have a career like a golf ball. They are helped out of one hole only to get into another.—Lippincott's.

The Clergyman's Safeguard

The clergyman gives his life to his people. When old age comes to him he has no built-up business to rest upon; he has amassed no fortune upon which he may comfortably retire. His success is marked by the church he has built up—for other people.

When he dies his family must look to such savings as he has been able to make—probably not more than enough to keep them in straightened circumstances.

Life insurance is the sole satisfactory means of dealing with this question, and it should be the duty of every congregation to insure the life of its minister. The clergyman will know he has protection that is absolutely sure, and the congregation will know their money is getting the utmost in value if the policy be issued by the

SIN OF OMISSION DAMNING WORLD

God Had to Go After Adam—We Are Just What God Thinks of Us--See Ourselves as God Sees Us

The strong interest which is being manifested in the Sharpe evangelistic campaign was evidenced last night by the excellent company of earnest people who came ploughing through the drenching torrents of rain to hear the big ex-comic singer evangelist deliver one of his most telling addresses.

Here are a few of the sharp sayings of the big preacher:

"There is only one reason in God's world why you and I should ever carry a long face and that is when we are truly burdened over the souls of men."

"It is the sin of omission that is damning the world to-day."

"Did you ever do anything for God. Well if you did you found there was a devil. Take your coat off and go to work for Jesus and you'll find out there's a real devil with his coat off too, ready to go to work."

"Adam hid from God and the Lord had to go after him. It is the voice of God that cries after man, not the voice of man crying after God."

"I tried to get away from everything that would lead me to God, but God found me."

"You and I are just what God thinks of us and not what our neighbours and friends think we are. We are not rated to-night in God's sight accord, ing to our pocket book or bank account, but according to God's estimate of us. May God help us to locate ourselves and to see ourselves as God sees us."

"God has a book up yonder and your deeds and my deeds are being recorded in that book. You don't need to be a great preacher or singer to get your name in that book. But do your best and some day the pages of God's book will be taken up with the records of your deeds."

"The thing for us Christians to do is not to see how near the world we can live and still be a Christian, but to get clear inside God's kingdom.

"If some of the people of Peterborough who profess to be Christians, would begin to undo a few of their mean, dirty tricks the people would begin to believe in their religion."

Mr. Sharpe announced that there would be a special meeting for boys and young men at the Y.M.C.A. on Sunday afternoon. Service in the tent to-night at 8 o'clock.

THE GOOD WORK OF OTONABEE CHAPTER DAUGHTERS EMPIRE

At the monthly business meeting of the above Chapter (formerly known as the "Kawartha" Chapter) the generous offer of Mr. Barrie to grant free of charge the use of two rooms in his new block to enable the Chapter to carry on its Red Cross work to greater advantage, was most gratefully accepted.

The work hitherto had been carried on with difficulty owing to want of room and the large number of willing workers.

It was also decided to donate the sum of one hundred dollars to the 59th Regt. Fund, now being raised by Captain Park and Lieutenant Rackham.

The members also agreed to do all they could to make the recruiting meeting a success.

The Chapter has in view the endowing of a cot in one of the Red Cross Hospitals to be named the "Otonabee Cot," and also the raising of a "Convalescent Fund" to be used for the benefit of returned and convalescent soldiers.

Arrangements were made for a "Self-Denial Fund," to which the members could make contributions if they so desired, the gifts to be the result of personal economy or denial.

CLAIMED LOSS OF RAILWAY TICKET

Inquiries Will be Made in Peterborough Regarding Alice Buckley

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 4.—Poorly clad and hungry, Alice Buckley, a fifteen-year-old girl, was taken in by kindly residents, and later turned over to Inspector W. J. Shaw, who placed the girl in the shelter until full particulars are received. The girl, when questioned, said that she came originally from the Barnardo Home at Peterborough but had lately been working on a farm near Muirkirk. She claimed that she lost her railroad ticket and having no money was forced to appeal for help here. Inspector Shaw is making inquiries at Peterborough.

Discovery Enables Any One to Have Curly Hair

Quite accidentally some one made the discovery that the application of ordinary liquid silmerine would actually turn straight hair curly and wavy in a few hours. She told her friends about it, who in turn told others, and now thousands of women have profited by the information. The simplicity and harmlessness of this method, and the way the hair dries in such pretty curls and crinkles, will appeal to anyone who has tried it.

The favourite way is to apply the silmerine with a clean tooth brush before retiring. The effect upon rising is quite surprising, the curliness having such a natural appearance, and the hair being so bright and lustrous. Particularly will this be appreciated by the habitual user of the despoiling curling iron—which happily, can now be discarded. The liquid silmerine, which can of course be obtained from any druggist is neither sticky nor greasy. A few ounces will keep the hair curly for many weeks.—Mirror of Fashion.

New brick floors should be washed with soda water, and when dry rubbed with paraffin.

Armouries Have Seats For Over 2,000, etc.

will come from Ottawa on the C. P. R. 3.30. It was stated this afternoon that Capt. Begy, who is visiting Br. McNulty, has been invited to attend to-night's meeting.

RECRUITS ASKED TO ATTEND THE MEETING

Sergeant Hart had a number of recruits at the Armouries this morning getting them together and preparing for the work which begins in earnest to-morrow. All the accepted recruits are asked to be present to-night at 7 o'clock, sharp.

Col. Walker remarked that recruiting during the past few days had brightened considerably, and more enthusiasm had been shown than in quite a few weeks.

RECRUITS MAY TRAIN HERE FOR FIVE WEEKS

Mr. Layfield, after strenuous efforts had been assured that the local recruits may be trained here for four or five weeks if necessary. An additional instructor is coming from Ottawa this afternoon. As the recruits are received they will be given uniforms and their training will begin at once. This, it was felt, would have a stronger effect. The recruiting appeal, beginning to-night is not a final appeal, but it is a special appeal demanded by the stress of the present situation. There should be a stronger military spirit awakened by the presence of the men for a month or more, and the results should be more satisfactory.

WHERE VARIOUS BANDS WILL PARADE TO-NIGHT

Fife and Drum Bands from No. 50 and No. 80 L.O.L. Lodges will man the recruiting car Wednesday night at 7 p.m., also on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at 7 p.m.

On Wednesday night the following six bands will parade from the outskirts of the town to the armouries, (recruiting centre).

1st—Salvation Army Band, Forde's section, Braund's store, corner Park and Chamberlen, via Rubidge, Charlotte and George streets.

2nd—57th Band, Sergt. Hughes' section, from corner Park and McDonnel, via McDonnel to Armouries.

3rd—Bugle Band, start Nicholls Hospital, via George to Armouries.

4th—57th Batt., (Sergt. Chambers' section, start East City, cor Rogers and Hunter, via Hunter and George to Armouries.

5th—Salvation Army, Peryer's section, start corner Lock and Crescent, via Lock and George to Armouries.

6th—Maple Leaf Band, start Exhibition Park, foot of Aylmer, via Aylmer, Hunter and George to Armouries

PROGRAMME FOR TO-NIGHT'S MEETING

The programme for to-night's meeting is as follows:

ALL SAINTS' CHOIR HOLD EXCURSION

Pleasant Time Was Spent at Gore's Landing

Yesterday was the annual excursion of All Saints' Anglican church choir, and a most enjoyable day was spent in a trip down the river by the steamer Geneva to Gore's Landing.

The boat left the government wharf at 9 a.m. and arrived at Gore's Landing in time for a sumptuous repast, some dining at Rice Lake house and the rest at Lilac Lodge. Owing to the dampness of the grass some of the ladies refused to run races and the brains of those in charge was taxed to find means to dispose of the prizes to worthy aspirants. For the boys a verse of the King was sung in chorus. Then they had to devour a sandwich and sing another verse of the King. All this on top of a full course tea. The ladies were given a note, all starting together, the last to finish to win the prize. One young lady stepped to the side of the boat and took a breath of Otonabee ozone and started. It was wonderful where all the breath came from one by one. The other competitors dropped out and sat down, but she kept on and had not the boat bumped into the wharf she would have been going yet. She is the proud possessor of an electric pocket lamp. Three cheers for the choirmaster and the captain of the Geneva were called for and the happy party dispersed to their homes.

THE WEATHER

The rain which began yesterday forenoon still continues to fall, and up to noon to-day had already reached a total of almost three inches and a half on the level, the exact figures being 3.47. All this has come down in less than 24 hours. All previous records for this district have been broken.—W.P.

ELLIOT'S

NEW DRUG DISPENSARY

Miss I. M. Coughlin Will Open Out a New and Up-to-date Drug Business on George Street.

Peterborough is to have another new drug store, to be owned and conducted by a lady. The city has eight or nine drug stores conducted by men, and it seems only fair that the women should have at least one store where they could go in and out as they pleased without hesitation.

The new lady druggist is Miss I. M. Coughlin, daughter of one of our respected citizens, Mr. John Coughlin, of the Coughlin Monumental Co. Miss Coughlin has secured a lease of the Central premises on George street, next the C.P.R. uptown ticket office, and is having the interior fitted up in a suitable manner for her business. The stock is all ready for placing, and has been selected with especial care and discretion. Particular attention has been paid to the purity and quality of drugs and chemicals and the varied lines of druggist sundries in general demand.

As might be expected, Miss Coughling will be a strong caterer for the ladies' patronage. And with this object in view, she will stock all toilet articles and medicine goods as are in special request by lady shoppers.

Miss Coughlin is no stranger to Peterborough shoppers. She has had the benefit of five years' practical experience as dispenser in local drug stores, and may be said to be familiar with the character of the local trade. She holds a certificate from the Toronto College of Pharmacy and is experienced in compounding physicians' prescriptions, family recipes, etc.

Miss Coughlin's opening announcement to the public will be found in another column of this issue.

The Fund For The Soldiers Receives Consideration

The 59th Battalion and 8th C. M. Rifles Have Each Been Granted $250 Towards Regimental Funds---The City Council Has Not Decided Where the $500 is to Come From---A Special Meeting Was Held Last Evening.

The 59th Battalion and the Eighth Canadian Mounted Rifles will each receive the sum of $250.00 from the City Council. Although there has been no provision made for this grant or others similar, which will undoubtedly be asked from the city from time to time during the war, the Aldermen decided last evening that these two units should be looked after at once even if an overdraft should be the result. A deputation waited upon the local Council on Monday evening with the request for grants for the 59th Battalion and 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, and it was decided to hold a special meeting last evening to deal with ways and means for the raising of the amount, which would be decided upon.

The Aldermen were informed by a letter from City Solicitor Gordon that these grants would not come under the new law by which it was thought that a direct application could be made to the Ontario Legislature for permission to issue debentures covering a period of five or ten years. He, however, believed that cases of this kind would be taken care of by the Legislature as the war continued, and the neecssity for any special legislation was felt.

Amount Too Large.

Ald. Stratton, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the City Council, was asked by Ald. Duffus for a statement in connection with the City's finances, and if any provision had been made for grants of this nature. The Finance Minister said that very little provision had been made in the estimates for the setting aside of amounts for grants of this kind. However the amount the Council decided to grant would be raised by the Finance Committee in some manner. He did not think the request of the 59th Battalion for $1,500 would be within what the Council could do. The taxpayer must be considered. If the Councillors granted whatever amount the taxpayers could meet without distress, they would be doing their duty. It did not mean merely looking after the 59th Battalion or the 8th Mounted Rifles, but there would be future Battalions to look after and all the men who left from Peterborough must be looked after.

Mayor Buller called for someone to suggest an amount, and Ald. Dobbin came to the rescue with the suggestion that the 8th Mounted Rifles receive $1,000, and the 59th Battalion, $500.

Ald. Stratton: "I would suggest that each receive $250. It is nothing like the amount which they should receive, but an amount which I think te ratepayers will feel they are able to give."

Ald. Dobbin: "This city has not felt in one iota the effect of the war yet, and we do not expect to feel it. Let us therefore look after those men who have gone from here to fight for us."

Ald. Green expressed the opinion that the City could get into the position to issue debentures to cover grants of this kind.

Mayor Buller said that the Council could go to the Legislature next year, of necessary, for a special bill to cover these grants and similar grants which the Council will be called upon to make. Whatever amount the Council decided to grant now it could be paid out of the current money and would only make a small overdraft until such times as special legislation could be secured.

Our Children Should Pay.

Ald. Green: "These men who are leaving here, and have left, are fighting for us now and for our future. Our children who follow us will benefit also and they should be called upon to pay a certain share of the cost. Debentures spread over a period of, say, ten years, would cover this."

Ald. Edgar and Ald. Dobbin got behind a motion to grant the sum of $500 to each of the 59th Battalion and 8th Mounted Rifles. An amendment by Ald. Saunders and Ald. Stratton cut the amount down to $250 each.

But the question of where the amount decided upon would come from had not yet been settled.

A canvas of the chairmen of the different committees showed that there was a possibility of there being a surplus in the hands of the Legal and Reception Committee. Out of an appropriation of about $1,200 for this committee only about $200 had been spent to date. The Board of Works or the Wire, Water and Light Committee did not seem to have any surplus cash, but it is a little early in the season to speculate as to whether these two bodies will be able to keep under the amount of their appropriations.

Ald. Green wanted to go to the Legislature and get a promise of legislation so that some money could be borrowed on this promise. The city's credit was in first-class condition, but it should not be jeopardized.

The question was dropped for the evening when the amendment carried.

Canadians Are Great Soldiers

Tribute Paid to the Warrior From the Dominion

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Aug. 4—The following extract from a letter received by Miss Madeley, 66 Charles Street, West, from her brother at Maida Vale, London, should be an inspiration to many a young native son:

"You must feel proud of the achievements of the Canadian forces at the front. In my capacity as an army tutor I frequently get a call from some officer or other who is an ex-pupil of my concern, and they are all agreed in saying that man for man the Canadian is absolutely the finest soldier fighting on either side to-day. He has not, of course, the familiarity with all the technicalities of modern military science, which it takes our gunner and sapper officers years of study and experience to gain. But for grit and endurance, dash and adaptability, he has no equal, so they say."

SAYS KAISER WILLED WAR

"Prepared For It as an Enterprise of Domination," Says France's Former Foreign Affairs Minister

"Germany Fighting for Enslavement of World"—"Will Be Cast Into Abyss in a Year."

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Under the caption, "After One Year," Gabriel Hanotaux, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, reviews the causes of the war and the "historical stages leading Germany logically to this step and to cast the die for the gigantic conflict in an attempt to impose domination on the world." Mr. Hanotaux says:

"Germany prepared for this war with a long hand, as an enterprise of universal domination. Once ready, she chose her hour and dragged along her acomplice ,Austria-Hungary, and her other accomplice, Turkey.

"Determined to stop at nothing, the day when it became necessary to sacrifice the world's peace and joy to her material prosperity and her pride, Germany willed war."

This is proved by historic documents, M. Hanotaux says, and he reviews the growth of the German "weltpolitik" idea, born at a meeting aboard the yacht Hohenzollern in 1897, recounted in Chancellor von Buelow's book, and from which came the motto, "Our Future Is On the Seas," through fifteen years of military and naval preparation to 1912 when "the work of preparation was accomplished and Germany was ready to profit from the first favourable circumstance."

"Armed to the Death."

M. Hanotaux continues:

"From the material viewpoint, the farsighted and formidable preparations of the Twin Empires with a view to war cannot be denied. With the most savage resolution, in absolute secrecy, with fists clenched and lips closed, two empires armed to the death, constructed monstrous cannon, filled arsenals with arms and ammunition and conceived the prodigious mechanism for adapting the arts of peace to the art of war.

"The whole country was regulated like a barracks. Every slightest resource was catalogued that nothing might be lost, and all with the purpose of offensive action. There were invertoried in advance the means of defence exploitable and the riches of the countries coveted. Universal espionage prepared the way for world conquest.

For "World's Enslavement."

"The Germans are fighting for the enslavement, not the liberation of the world. Were things not in their conclusion as in their origin these prodigious events would be unmeaning, but never since the birth of the world have there been events more significant. We have gone about our task and know what the task is.

"France, especially, is in her traditional role, nor will she let herself be turned aside. She struggles for ideals which are hers; justice is greater than force; right protects the weak; every man and every people has a right to dispose of his own. These mottoes are opposed to those of Germany.

"France Did Not Bargain."

"I have lately reread the Yellow Book and have been struck by the fact that not once during the course of the negotiations preceding the war did France put forward the slightest claim or offer any bargain whatsoever. Other Powers talked; France kept silence. She only bore their burdens . . . The light has shone on two opposing systems. History has chosen—that is the first result of the year's war.

"German theories, German doctrines, and German morality are irreparably lost. They appear now for what they are, and themselves have demonstrated what they are—frightful materialistic heresies.

"Now it is the turn of justice and of right. Already Germany, by the failure of her campaign of conquest, overwhelmed by the immense losses which are draining her, conscious of the utter ruin which grips her, seeks to escape the consequences of her own theories and would be content with the white peace of a stalemate—counting herself well off to be able to preserve herself for the future.

"But not even this negative result will she obtain. The two theories of life are radically opposed. One or the other must succumb. Following the wake of the German doctrine, German force, now likewise is on the decline. One more effort, though it require another year, and both will be cast into the abyss."

THE GERMAN ATROCITIES AS OFFICIALLY REPORTED BY BRYCE COMMISSION

Just a year ago the German armies were crossing the Belgian border. Then began the German system of terrorizing the inhabitants of the invaded country. The facts are generally known, but Lord Bryce's Commission reports specifically what occurred in various cities. You should read this serial arrangement of the report.

The Aerschot, Malines, Vilvorde and Lovain Quadrangle.

About August 9th a powerful screen of cavalary masking the general advance of the first and second German armies was thrown forward into the provinces of Brabant and Limburg. The progress of the invaders was contested at several points, probably near Tirlemont on the Louvain road, and at Dilest, Haelen, and Schaffen, on the Aerschot road, by detachments of the main Belgian army which was drawn up upon the line of the Dyle. In their preliminary skirmishes the Belgians more than once gained advantages, but after the fall on August 15th of the last of the Liege forts, the great line of railways which runs through Liege towards Brussels and Antwerp in one direction and toward Namur and the French frontier in another fell into the hands of the Germans. From this moment the advance of the main army was swift and irresistable. On August 19th, Louvain and Aerschot were occupied by the Germans the former without resistance, that latter after a struggle which resulted early in the day in the retirement of the Belgian army upon Antwerp. On August 20th the invaders made their entry into Brussels.

The quadrangle of territory bounded by the towns of Aerschot, Malines, Vilvorde and Louvain, is a rich agricultural tract, studded with small villages and comprising two considerable cities, Louvain and Malines. This district on August 19 passed into the hands of the Germans, and, owing perhaps to its proximity to Antwerp then the seat of the Belgian government, and headquarters of the Belgian army, it became from that date a scene of chronic outrage, with respect to which the committee has received a great mass of evidence. The witnesses to these occurrences are for the most part imperfectly educated persons who cannot give accurate dates, so it is impossible in some cases to fix the dates of particular crimes; and the total number of outrages is so great that we cannot refer to all of them in the body of the report or give all the depositions relating to them in the appendix. The main events, however, are abunadntly clear and groups themselves naturally round three dates, August 19th, August 25th, and September 11th.

The arrival of the Germans in the district on August 19th was marked by systematic massacres and other outrages at Aerschot itself, Gelrode and some other villages.

On August 25th the Belgians, sallying out of the defences of Antwerp, attacked the German positions at Malines, drove the enemy from the town and re-occupied many of the villages such as Sempst, Hofstade, and Espeghem, in the neighbourhood. And just as numerous outrages against the civil population had been the immediate consequence of the temporary repulse of the German vanguard from Fort Fleron, so a large body of depositions testify to the fact that a sudden outburst of cruelty was the response of the German army to the Belgian victory at Malines. The advance of the German army to the Dyle had been accompanied by reprehensible and indeed (in certain cases) terrible outrages, but these had been, it would appear, isolated acts, some of which are attributed by witnesses to indignation at the check of Haelen while others may have been the consequence of drunkenness. But the battle of Malines had results of a different order. In the first place, it was the occasion of numerous murders committed by the German army in retreating through the villages of Sempst, Hofstade, Eppeghem, Elewyt and elsewhere. In the second place, it led, as it will be shown later, to the massacres, plunderings, and burnings of Louvain, the signal for which was provided by shots exchanged between the German army retreating after its repulse at Malines and some members of the German garrison of Louvain, who mistook their fellow countrymen for Belgians. Lastly, the encounter of Malines seems to have stung the Germans into establishing a reign of terror in so much of the district comprised in the quadrangle as remained in their power. Many houses were destroyed and their contents stolen. Hundreds of prisoners were locked up in various churches, and were in some instances marched about from one village to another. Some of these were finally conducted to Louvain and linked up with the bands of prisoner taken in Louvain itself, and sent to Germany and elsewhere.

On September 11, when the Germans were driven out of Aerschot across the river Demer by a successful sortie from Antwrep, murders of civilians were taking place in the villages which the Belgian army then recaptured from the Germans. These crimes bear a strong resemblance to those committed in Hofstade and other villages after the battle of Malines.

U. S. FARMERS MADE MONEY.

Year of War Caused Loss of $235,000,000 to Cotton Growers, However.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Four hundred million dollars in profits were made by the American farmers, grain exporters and millers during the first year of the European war, the Department of Commerce announced to-day. During this period, however, the Southern cotton growers and shippers lost nearly $235,000,000.

These are prominent features of the department's yearly report on exports of foodstuffs and cotton. The favourable trade balance of the United States for the week ending July 31 exceeded $25,000,000.

Isonzo Fights Rival Chapelle

River Literally Afloat With Bodies and Banks a Shambles

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Aug. 4.— Attacks that in bitterness and determination beggar description, losses that run into the thousands, desperate, heroic, useless infantry assaults following hour-long artillery fire, have characterized the terrible struggle between the Italian and the Austrian forces along the lower Isonzo River.

When the war shall have ended it is doubtful whether Neuve Chapelle and Ypres will stand out more grimly terrible than some of the bloody battles of early July along the Austro-Italian frontier.

A picture of the green Isonzo literally afloat with bodies, of the meadows and fields along its course a veritable shambles of whole companies and battalions wiped out of existence on both sides, of prowling night attacks checked by ghost-like searchlights, and almost unbearable artillery fire withering and destroying everything in its path is drawn by Leonard Adelt, correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt, in a despatch from the Isonzo frontier.

Annual Regatta At Stoney Lake

A Grand Drawing Attraction for Peterboro's Civic Holiday Excursionists

August is the popular month at Stoney Lake, and the annual regattas are the chief drawing cards. This year the active committees in charge of the Stoney Lake regatta, to be held on Monday next, August 9th, are putting forth their best efforts for a most successful event, Juniper Island will present its bumper list of attractions. A fine programme of aquatic attractions is under preparation to be run off on the splendid course opposite the Juniper Island store.

Every effort is being made to facilitate the carrying of the large numbers who will attend this regatta. The three steamers of the Stoney Lake Navigation Co. will be scheduled to run in connection with this regatta, the particulars of which will be published in due time. The Grand Trunk Railway will also arrange special service and reduced prices for the day. The arrangements in hand give promise that every moment will be occupied in entertaining the crowds of visitors that will attend.

CATHOLIC ORDER OF FORESTERS HAS 146,000

Toronto Delegates Ask That it Come to That City Next Year.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 3.—Triennial inplace of biennial international conventions of the Catholic Order of Foresters will be considered at the convention board held here today. A number of the states have recommended the change. Toronto will ask that the next convention be held in that city, as the convention here is the result of the European strife. Toronto was voted the convention two years ago at St. Louis.

The treasurer's report showed a total paid in death claims to July 1, 1915, $20,508,830; paid through subordinate courts in sick and funeral benefits, approximately $3,000,000; reserve fund and cash balance July 1, 1915, $5,025,807.49.

The membership on July 1, 1915, was 146,000, and there were 1,775 subordinate courts operating in twenty-eight states in this country and eight provinces in Canada.

PORTABLE SHIELD FOR SOLDIERS' USE

A Recently Invented Device That Might Be Termed a Moving Fort

The European conflict and particularly the dead lock on the western frontier, has set inventors to devising means for overcoming the great defensive strength and trench warfare. One device which presents many good points and seems practicable is a British invention termed a "moving fort". In fact it is a shelf or shield shaped like a bullet except that the horizontal diameter is slightly greater than the vertical diameter. It is made of chilled steel and weighs just about 300 pounds. It is just large enough to receive a man on all fours. It has a small wheel or roller near its forward end on its lower face for supporting most of its weight. It is propelled by the user by simply pushing against the ground with one foot, his hands resting on a suitable rod or support inside the shell. A sight slot and rifle opening through the centre of the top front wall makes it possible for the user to see where he is going and enables him to shoot at the enemy. The very gradual taper of the shield and the hard metal safely deflects all rifle and machine gun bullets and fragments of shells, so that it is really a small moveable fort proof against all but high power explosives, shell, and even they do little damage unless they strike squarely.

By this means, a large number of men may crawl very close to the enemy's lines and then spring from their "forts" and make one short, sharp dash into the trench, and all is over.

Borax for washing plates and dishes is to be preferred to soda, as it does not crack the skin of the hands.

Don't black a stove while it is hot. It takes more blacklead and a much longer time to polish.

4½ HOURS RUSH SELLING

CHEESE PATRONS TO CONSIDER GIVING ANOTHER DAY'S MAKE

Question Was Considered at Meeting This Morning—Mr. Morton Secured Entire Offering of Cheese—How Last Money Was Spent.

To-day's cheese price 13 5-16.
Two weeks ago, 13 3-8.
One year ago, no sale on account of the outbreak of war.

The cheese market was uneventful this morning. Mr. Morton varied matters slightly by cleaning up the board, after some lively bidding from 12 1-2 cents up to 13 5-16 cents.

The factories boarded as follows:

Keene 80, Warminster 80, Shearer 160, Selwyn 115, Villiers 80, Warsaw 105, Westwood 150, Oakdale 100, Daisy D. 68, Pine Grove 60, Myrtle 135, Ormonde 110, Young's Point 58, Lang 135, Indian River 90, East Emily 105, Trewern 110, Norwood 170, Fleetwood 100, Killarney 60. Total, 2,071.

Every factory sold to Mr. Morton.

Another Day's Make of Cheese.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie introduced the question of donating another day's make of cheese for patriotic purposes. One of the buyers pointed out that Campbellford, Sterling, Madoc, and other boards smaller than Peterborough have already given a second day's make:

Mr. Hawthorne reported that the cheese given last fall amounted to $1,063.37, which had been divided as follows: Mrs. Stenner $40, W. C. Switzer $100 for patriotic societies in Peterborough, Mrs. W. M. Graham of the Lakefield Soldiers' Comforts Club $50, Elizabeth Webber of a Red Cross society in North Monaghan, $25; Mrs. J. J. English of Hastings $50, Mrs. J. J. Moore of Keene, $75; Miss Scott of the East City Red Cross, $50; Mrs. D. Miller of Warsaw, $100; Mrs. E. P. Cuffe of Norwood, $50; E. J. Breckenbridge of Indian River and Villiers societies, $100; Mrs. W. B. Kelly, $50; Mrs. Bailey of the Lakefield Club, $50; Mr. Switzer, for Peterborough distribution, $150; Mrs. T. J. Buck of Norwood, $25.

It was moved by Mr. Buck, seconded by Mr. Young, that the salesmen take the matter up with their patrons and report at the next meeting of the Board.

Mr. Gillespie said: We are face to face with the facts as never before. The farmers will be getting off lightly if it costs them only a little money.

Mr. Switzer said that he felt if the factory patrons realized the need at present they would contribute more liberally than they have done. He said he had divided the money he had received equally among the six patriotic societies in Peterborough which he stated, were doing excellent work.

The Board adjourned for two weeks.

TAXES WILL NOT BE REMITTED

On Properties That Are Vacant Owing to Absence of Owners Who Are at the Front

The "no action" sign has been tacked on to a request emanating from the legal firm of Hall and Hall, which, ineffect, asked the Council for a remission of taxes in connection with the properties of Major Joseph Mills of the Peterborough detachment, First Canadian Contingent, and Capt. A. W. McPherson, M.D., both of whom are now at the front. The request was based on the grounds that the properties are lying idle. The Council felt that such a move would establish a precedent.

Were Married In London

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Miss Katherine Alice Page, daughter of United States Ambassador to Great Britain, was married this afternoon at the Chapel Royal, St. James' Palace, to Chas. Greely Lorng, son of General Chas. Loring, of Boston. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Boyd Carpenter, sub-Dean of Westminster Abbey. Members of the Government, representatives of the Royal Court and diplomatic circles, were present. An amber fan from King George was among the presents.

OVERSEAS DRAFT FROM THE 59TH

Company of 250 From the Battalion Has Been Called For.

KINGSTON, Aug. 4.—The 59th battalion has been ordered to provide one complete company of 250 men for overseas service. The 8th Mounted Rifles and R.C.H.A. have also been ordered to equip reinforcements. The officers chosen to go from the 59th battalion are: Lieut. E. W. Fisher, 40th Regiment, Cobourg, in charge; Lieut. E. E. Malloch, 42nd Segiment, Arnprior, Ont.; Lieut. G. Kennedy, 45th Regiment, Lindsay; Lieut. W. L. Smith, 49th Regiment, Belleville, and Lieut. J. W. Stagg, 14th Regiment, Kingston.

Provided 8,600 Men for Overseas.

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 4.—Lieut. the Rev. S. J. M. Compton, who has been appointed overseas chaplain of the 59th Battalion, has resigned his pastorate of St. Andrew's church, asking to be relieved on September 30. It was announced at Barriefield Camp that the third military district has so far provided 8,600 men for overseas service.

Recruiting Car On George Street To-day

Many changes evolve slowly. The recruiting method is one of them. Months ago recruiting cars appeared throughout England. Recently they were used in Toronto. To-day at noon Peterborough's car, splendidly decorated and bearing signs along the sides and front and rear, and banners of military devices, passed over the street railway system. Posters, too, are exhibited in many of the store windows on the main street. The recruiting car is the work of Mr. Reg. Turner. It deserved a fairer reception than the weather man accorded it. Flags, shields and bunting covered it and within a detachment of the 57th Regimental Band played patriotic selections.

A SUBSTANTIAL MARGIN OF PROFIT

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Aug. 4.—Architect J. G. Russel made a report to-day to Hon. Thos. Johnson, Minister of Public Works, after investigating for some weeks the caissons and other portions of the Parliament Buildings as constructed by Thos. Kelly. Russel finds that the caissons are only worth $330,000, and that Kelly has been paid a million dollars more than the value of the work done.

CAPITAL OF ALSACE SHELLED BY FRENCH AIR SQUADRON

PARIS, Aug. 4. — There has been considerable fighting in the Argonne and Alsace the past 24 hours, confined principally to the use of hand-grenades, but there has been no change in the respective positions of the combatants.

A flotilla of Anglo-French aeroplanes yesterday flew over the German city of Strassburg and dropped 25 bombs, according to a despatch from Geneva to the Havas News Agency. The extent of the damage caused by the explosion of the missiles has not yet been ascertained. Strassburg is the capital of Alsace-Lorraine, and lies 80 miles south-east of the German fortress of Metz.

Verdun Is Impregnable.

The German hammering at Verdun, the fortress on which the drive of a year ago went to pieces like a wave on a rock, may continue for years and years without making the slightest impression, says a correspondent telegraphing from that city.

The underground life with which the trench combats of this war have familiarized the world, and to which the modern soldiers already are accustomed, here has reached its climax in an immense underground city prepared for the defenders of the key to Northern France. Miles upon miles of streets, alleys and public squares, chambers stocked with wine, flour and tinned meats, and lodgings, recreation rooms, a bakery equipped to make bread for 50,000 men, and heat, light and telephones, like a modern apartment house, have been constructed beneath the smiling, unrevealing surface of the meadows of the valley of the Meuse surrounding France's barrier, which has been placed in the path of whoever attacks from Metz.

On the level of the old moats of the ancient fortress, 75 feet below the summit, the galleries begin. There are no evidences in the most perfect military preparations that already have been completed of any lack of ammunition necessary to stand an old-fashioned siege. Here also the staff is quartered, and an entire army corps can easily be accommodated underground with everything necessary for its livelihood for months.

Wasted Efforts.

The last violent bombardment by the German long-range guns was a wasted effort. The stronghold was not even scarred. Nor are the Germans so near as one had an idea. The correspondent yesterday morning visited the trenches facing the most advanced German lines, ten miles out beyond Cumiere, near Champneuville, situated at the bend of the Meuse. The French position, on a hill, is exceedingly strong and can be held by a comparatively inconsiderable force. It is being intermittently shelled by the Germans, and one shell, bursting in a trench just ahead of the visiting party, killed three soldiers.

HOLDING THE ENEMY NEAR WARSAW

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Aug. 4.—The position at Warsaw is still unchanged. Actions north and south of the city are proceeding successfully for the Russians, who are stubbornly holding back the enemy while their own main body continues to fall back in proper order.

The civil life of Warsaw continues. The people are still to be seen in the cafes and parks, but the hotels are empty, visitors having left for their homes. So far everything has gone well in regard to the disposition of the Russian forces. The position in the Polish theatre is slowly becoming narrower, but in the various battles the Germans are suffering great losses. So serious have these losses been that corps were hastily brought from France to support General von Hindenburg's troops on the Narew, who are straining every nerve to break through to the branch line which connects the Warsaw-Petrograd Railway with Ostrolenka. The enemy is, however, met by the obstacle of the River Oje. Further east is the station of Ostrov, beyond which the nature of the country would make open fighting too terrible. Consequently, should the enemy reach Ostrov, he would be obliged to dig himself in and endeavour to make further progress by means of sapping.

Throughout Friday and Saturday a most bloodthirsty battle took place about 20 miles from Ivangorod. The Germans lost heavily in a futile attempt to throw a footbridge across the Vieprz River. These efforts were made by Germans disguised in Russian uniforms taken from the dead. However, Cossacks who were riding near heard the Germans talking, and soon the entire party was shot down.

Kingston's Bars Are To Close at Seven O'clock

As a result of the inquiry conducted into the selling of liquor to soldiers at Kingston the Ontario License Commission, with the approval of the Government, has, it is understood, decided to close all the bars in Kingston and vicinity at seven o'clock in the evening. While the order has not come formally before the Cabinet for approval, there is, it is said, no question of it going into effect. Hon. T. W. McGarry intimated last night that the matter would come up within a day or two, but would not discuss it further.

The stand taken by the commissioners follows a visit to the Kingston district made recently by Vice-Chairman Dingman, a visit that convinced him that there was room for improvement. The board some time ago refused to extend several licenses in the suburbs of the Limestone City, but the soldiers at the Barriefield camp, just across the bay, were able to get into Kingston at night and secure liquor. By closing the bars at 7 o'clock the commission will meet the views of the military authorities without interfering unduly with the ordinary business of the hotels.

A report that the commission was contemplating wider action looking to the closing of all bars at 7 o'clock was discredited yesterday by Commissioner Ayearst.

"The matter has not come before the board in any way nor has it been suggested by the board," he stated.

NO MONEY TO WEICHEL FOR MUNITION ORDERS

In regard to a recent statement about munition contracts, Mr. Burnham received to-day the following reply to his enquiry concerning it:

Dear Mr. Burnham,— Referring to your telegram regarding Mr. Weichel, I have been urged to get some definite information in this matter.

I am advised that there is no truth whatever in the statement that a number of manufacturers donated a sum of money to Mr. Weichel for securing orders for them from the Commission, and if you are unable to send me a copy of the press clipping to which you refer, please be good enough to state in what newspaper the article appeared.

Kindly give this matter your immediate attention, because it is most unfair that a statement of this nature should remain uncontradicted.

Awaiting your reply, I remain,

Yours faithfully,

(Signed.) A. E. Kemp, Chairman.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPECIAL ATTRACTION FOR CIVIC HOLIDAY

St. Paul's Baseball Team, of Toronto, Leaders in the Don Valley League, Will Play Here

Baseball fans will get a treat on Monday afternoon, (Peterborough's Civic Holiday), when a local all-star team from the City League will play the fast St. Paul's team of Toronto at Riverside Park.

These St. Pauls boys are conceded to be the best amateur team in the city of Toronto, and that is saying quite a lot for them. They lead at present in the Don Valley League, and are considered to be the best bet for the Amateur Championship of Ontario. They have a crack battery in Dumas, pitching, and Canfield, catching, and they will make any local picked aggregation step lively to pull out a win.

If the local boys can make a good showing against the St. Paul's team it is possible that a Peterborough team will be entered for the Ontario championship. The City League has served to bring out a number of likely ball tossers and the games here this season have been worth watching

There will be a practice at Riverside Park to-morrow night.

EMPIRES AND CLASSICS TO-MORROW AFTERNOON

There will be a special attraction for the stay-at-homes to-morrow afternoon, the weekly half-holiday, when the Classics and Empires play a City League game at Riverside Park. This game is to decide the tie which exists between these two teams of Saturday, July 10th, when each scored 11 runs in eight innings.

This game will have considerable bearing on the standing of the Classics should they land a win, as this will put them in the running for first place in the event of the East City team taking a tumble again.

With the Thursday afternoon half-holiday in the city there should be a good turnout of the fans, many of whom have not been able to attend any of the City League games this season, as they have been played on Saturday afternoon.

The game is called for 2 p.m.

SECOND ROUND O.A.L.A. GAMES

The District Committee of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association met at the Iroquois Hotel last night and arranged the following second round games:

Intermediate—Orillia vs. Campbellford.

Junior—Fergus vs. Walkerton.

Juvenile — Hanover vs Owen Sound, Madoc v. Havelock, St. Marys vs. Woodstock.

The teams have 48 hours in which to come to an agreement whether the games are to be home-and-home or sudden-death. If a sudden-death they will arrange the day and place, if home-and-home they arrange the date themselves.

BULLETIN ON SWINE RAISING

The second edition of Bulletin No. 17 of the Federal live stock branch, entitled Swine Husbandry in Canada, has been issued, and may be had on application to the Publication branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa. The interest in Swine Raising stimulated, no doubt by the high values of pork products, made such a demand for information on this subject that the first edition printed last year was quickly exhausted. This edition brings up to date statistics with respect to pedigree registration, and the trade in hog products. It is shown that the total exports for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1915, amounted to 166,048,519 lbs. as against 27,561,140 lbs. the previous year. This bulletin covers the whole field of swine raising, giving the results of official experiments as well as the practices of successful farmer swine raisers. An interesting section describes the system to feeding hogs in Denmark, where combinations of food are prepared according to their food units in which one pound of grain, wheat, barley, peas, corn, etc., constitutes one food unit which is equal to 8 lbs. mangels, 4 lbs. boiled potatoes, 5 lbs. alfalfa, 6 lbs. skim milk, or 12 lbs. whey. It is shown that the diet is varied in a definite way for pigs of different ages.

OVERSEAS AIR FLOTILLA IS GROWING RAPIDLY

Four More Aeroplanes are Presented to the War Office This Week

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Gratifying progress has been made by the Overseas Club's scheme of forming an overseas aircraft flotilla, consisting of aeroplanes presented by each section of the Empire to the Royal Flying Corps. Four more aeroplanes were given to the War Office this week. This brings the total number of the flotilla to 13.

Newfoundland is celebrating the first anniversary of the commencement of the war by presenting two aeroplanes of the latest type. A remittance of £3,750 has been received from the Patriotic Association in Newfoundland on behalf of the citizens of St. John's.

A plane to be called "Canada" also has been provided by subscriptions, chiefly in Ontario. Another aeroplane was paid for by residents of Rhodesia. Further machines are promised by Nova Scotia, Nyassaland and Nigeria.

At last night's meeting of the Peterborough City Council it was decided not to make a grant towards the overseas flotilla fund.

Not Discouraging Gifts of Guns

Recent reports have led people to believe that the Government has already more machine guns than are required, and in order to ascertain if such was the case. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., wired the department, receiving the following reply in answer to his telegram:

"The department has in no way officially taken steps to discourage gifts of machine guns."

JAS. A. LONGHEED,
Acting Minister of Militia.

NEW HOSPITAL FOR PORT HOPE

PORT HOPE, Aug. 4.—The Port Hope Hospital Trust has just awarded the contract for the new hospital to W. J. Trick & Co., of Oshawa. The new building, which will be of fire-proof construction, will cost about $30,000 equipped, and work will be commenced at once. The present hospital will be converted into a residence for the nurses.

AN AUGUST DAY'S DELUGE OF RAIN

Since the rain began, about ten o'clock yesterday, and up to noon today, there have fallen 3.47, virtually 3½, inches of rain; that is in twenty-four hours more than a third as much rain fell as in the whole four months of April-July. In these four months the total rainfall was 8.84 inches—in April 92-100ths of an inch; May, 1.84 inches; June, 2 inches; July, 4.08 inches. The tremendous down-pour, borne on high, gusty, south-east gales, did a great deal of damage to little city gardens and market gardens, and flower plots. The table corn was beaten to the earth and general havoc played with other plants. But the damage in the city was as nothing compared with that wrought in the country. Fields of standing grain were flattened as if a steam roller had passed over them, and thousands of acres of fall wheat standing in stook, were soaked, and unless dry, hot weather comes soon the grain will sprout and be ruined.

DRY WEATHER IN WEST IS HELPING CROPS

Reports from Alberta Point to a Large Harvest.

The following telegraphic advice regarding the condition of crops and live stock in Alberta has been received at the head office of the Canadian Northern Railway from the Department of Agriculture for that province.

"Edmonton, Alberta, August 2nd, 1915. Southern district: Weather much improved, warm and dry with occasional showers; wheat and oats slightly late, but all headed out and turning rapidly; hay good; roots best for years; live stock doing well, slight trouble with flies. Central district: Weather very favorable, dry and hot; wheat in good condition, other crops doing well though somewhat late. Northern district: Weather warm and dry; crops coloring fast, all headed; hay good, stock in good condition."

King Sends Note of Appreciaton

To Mother Who Contributes Six Sons and a Son-in-law

What may constitute a record is credited to Mrs. G. Hunt, George street, this city, who has a sister in England who has contributed six sons and a son-in-law to the war, and is in receipt of a letter from His Majesty the King, expressing his appreciation.

SERGEANT'S APPROACH WILL BE FRIENDLY ONE

The method of approaching young men is left for the most part to the tact and good judgment of the Sergeants appointed to assist in the work, according to Sergt. Hart, who was at the Armouries to-day.

In the first place the sergeant becomes impersonal. He might bear any name, but in his recruiting capacity he represents the country, the Crown, the men at the front, the mothers, wives and children of the nation and so on. The method to be employed will be the reverse to "bulldosing," or anything of that nature. However, if a young man when asked what he thinks about the affairs returns a saucy or insulting reply he is likely to get a rejoinder in the same strain. Any approach will be made in a friendly manner, and with the intention of presenting the present situation squarely before the men, and of telling them what would happen in the event of defeat. It is hardly likely, however, that there is a single individual in the city who will not at least show their respect for the uniform that is now protecting them.

BOUGHT CIGARETTES AND CHOCOLATE FOR BATTERY BOYS

Mrs. J. M. Gemmell, treasurer of the 57th chapter of the I.O.D.E. has received the following acknowledgment of twenty dollars from Lieut. Mary Plummer, C.T.C.C.:

"Thank you for the cheque for $30, for cigarettes and chocolate to be sent to Gunner Bruce Sloan, 4th Battery, C.F.A. I shall be very pleased to make the purchases and forward them for you. Might I suggest that it would be advisable always to give two or three names, in case the one addressed has been wounded or imprisoned. It is very difficult to make sure that the parcels reach the right people. It is awfully nice to have money to spend for these men."

WARSAW MAY FALL IN A FEW HOURS, SAYS BERLIN

EVERY THING IS QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT

Warsaw's Fall is Now Only a Matter of a Few Hours, Says Berlin

Official Circles in Berlin Believe Germany's Enemies Are Tired of the War, and Are Ready to Talk Peace--Important Conference to Be Held.

Special Morning Cable:

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—With Warsaw's fall now only a matter of hours, official circles here to-day did not conceal the belief that the world-war may come to an end before winter by a compromise agreement with the Allies.

The Kaiser is expected to return to Berlin on Sunday and an important conference is to be held next week by government officials. It was reported to-day that the Ministry will discuss with the Emperor, the moves Germany is to make immediately after the successful ending of the Warsaw campaign. The decision will be reached before the Reichstag reassembles on August 17th, and it promises to have a far-reaching effect on the outcome of the war. The idea here is that Germany's enemies despite their public announcement of preparedness to fight to the end, are in reality tiring of the war and about ready to talk peace.

12,000 ITALIANS NOW PRISONERS.

ROME, Aug. 5.—Twelve thousand Italians now prisoners in Siberia will be released by the Russian Government. The Italians were residents of the Austrian frontier provinces, and were forced to fight with Austrian armies on the Russian front, and were captured by the Russians.

WILL NOT HELP GERMANS.

BERLIN, Aug. 5, via London.—A warning that nothing can be expected from Rumania is conveyed to the readers of the Tages Zeitung in an editorial yesterday morning by Count Ernst Feventlow. His article, which is headed, "Rumania's falling quotation," summarizes the situation in the following paragraph:

"Those friendly relations with Rumania made sacred by tradition and —on the German side by firm confidence—can hardly longer be considered as existing."

SECOND FIJI CONTINGENT TO FRONT--FIRST IS DECIMATED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Aug. 5.— There passed through the Capital this week an interesting contingent for the front. They were sixty men from the outpost of the Empire, the second Fiji contingent, adventurers from the South Sea Island, on the way to do their "bit" for the Empire. Last January the first Fiji contingent went to France and were attached to the King's Royal Rifles of the regular line regiments of the British army.

Of the initial contingent of fifty-four men, but four men are left. The remaining fifty are all killed, wounded from all parts of the South Sea made of reinforcements at Suva, the capital of Fiji, men eagerly responded fromall parts of the South Sea Islands, scores over the number required offering their services.

The men came across from Fiji on the Canadian-Australian liner Niagara, arriving at Victoria and thence crossing the continent.

One of the first offers of service when war broke out received at Ottwa came from a Canadian at Suva, a South African veteran, who, after the end of the war, drifted to the Fiji Islands. It is believed he went to the front with the Fiji contingent.

WARSAW FREE FROM PANIC

Accustomed to Proximity of Military Lines—200,000 Have Left the City

Destruction Order Modified

Special to The Examiner:

WARSAW, Sunday, Aug. 1, by mail to Petrograd.—The Governor-General of Warsaw is still with his post and Russian authority here is intact. There is talk in military circles to the effect that if the Russian lines hold a week longer the city will never be abandoned.

The Warsaw civic committee and central committees, are working together harmoniously with the Russian authorities. Prince Lubomirsky is temporary president of both the Warsaw and Central committees. The organization of the civic guards is managed by separate committees, subordinate to the civic committees.

Hunger Not Yet Felt.

Twenty thousand guards have been enrolled at Warsaw. Approximately 200,000 persons have left the capital for the interior of Russia. Hunger has not yet been felt and trade is brisker than usual, there being ample work in connection with the war.

Warsaw has grown so accustomed to the nearness of military lines that there is no disposition to a panic. The streets of the capital are livelier than those of the average Russian city, and the town has not suffered materially from the campaign.

The situation is very different from this in the provinces from which the Russian army has withdrawn. Lublin Lomza, Plotsk, Suwalki and the rural parts of Warsaw province have been sorely visited. When the retirement began, the Russian commanders were impressed with the desirability of leaving nothing that might sustain the German army.

Orders were issued for the withdrawal of entire populations the destruction of villages, forests and crops and the removal of cattle, horses, implements and various other kinds of property. In some cases the villagers were directed to execute these orders themselves on promise of speedier compensation. Few complied, as the villagers feared that they would not be able to make a record of their losses

Order Modified.

About July 1 the Warsaw civic and general committee appealed to Grand Duke Nicholas for a modification of the order. The committee had the support of the Archbishop of Warsaw. The Grand Duke accordingly issued instructions that property should not be destroyed except in case of military necessity, and permitting the population to remain

A clear majority of the people are loyal to Russia, and seemingly the loyalty of the Poles has been strengthened by Premier Goremykin's promise of autonomy.

Refugees arriving here from the provinces declare that order everywhere is being maintained, that there has been no pillaging, robbery, or violence. Advices from Lodz are to the effect that all grain and garden produce in the Polish provinces now in German hands have been confiscated. Lodz and certain industrial areas excepted, leaving barely enough to sustain the life of the population. In addition a tax has been levied equalling the existing land tax.

DO YOU BATHE PROPERLY?

By this is not meant "Are you kept clean?" There is nothing so good for the care of the skin and for the circulation as a daily cold bath immediately on rising. A hot cleansing bath at bedtime should be taken twice or three times weekly—not just once on Saturday nights.

RAIN AFFECTED $150,000,000 CROP

Minister of Agriculture Says Grain Will Be Harder to Cut But Damage Not Great

Alfalfa	$ 2,000,000
Fall wheat	18,000,000
Oats	40,000,000
Barley	10,000,000
Rye	1,500,000
Potatoes	12,000,000
Mixed grains	10,000,000
Hay and clover	65,000,000

TORONTO, Aug. 4. — Anxiety felt throughout the province on account of the possibility that the prolonged rain may have a disastrous effect upon the crops. Government estimates of the grain yields in Ontario, together with reports which have been received so far this year, show that the value of this year's output would normally be nearly $200,000,000. Leaving the spring wheat and some other crops out of consideration, the value of the harvest being or about to be cut is in excess of $150,000,000, as the foregoing table indicates. A heavy loss in the agricultural production of Ontario in a year like the present would be a calamity. The likelihood of a heavy loss, however, is not general throughout the province.

No Great Damage.

Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture, said to-day:

"I don't think the storm has done any great damage. It looks as if Toronto and district had been the storm centre, and I don't look for any reports of great damage from the outlying districts now.

"Of course, the grain will be flattened to the ground. We could not expect anything else, but the late oats were just about rady to fall, anyhow. The late grain was extremely heavy and the storm would soon flatten it out.

"If this storm had come late in the fall, it would have ruined everything, but at this time of the year with two or three good dry days, and we can still look for that, the ground will be dried out and the crop saved.

Harder to Cut.

"The farmers will have extra work in the cutting —that will be about the only result the storm will have, but better to have the work than no crops.

"Ontario has the best crop for years, and all that we can look for now is good drying weather, so that the farmers can get busy."

Massacre of Crack Austrian Regiment

Special Cable to The Examiner:

UNDINE via Paris, Aug. 5.—Italian officers arriving here from the front say that the Austrian attempts to retake the positions occupied by the Italians on the Carso Plateau reached their climax when the Austro-Hungarian commander launched against Mount Sei Busi one of four Kaiserjaeger regiments which had just arrived from Vienna.

The Kaiserjaegers met a regiment of Bersaglieri and shouted to them to surrender. The next moment, the officers say, 4,000 fixed bayonets flashed in a desperate hand to hand struggle, and when finally the Bersaglieri occupied the Austrian positions the field where the Kaiserjaegers had stood resembled a scene of immense carnage. Few of the Austrians had escaped.

Forty-Six British Vessels Sunk By German Subs. During Month of July

Russians Still Envelop Warsaw Though It is Admitted the Germans Are Drawing Closer---Germans Notify United States That Sinking of Steamer Was Perfectly Legal.

Special Morning Cable:

PETROGRAD, Aug. 5.—Russians still envelop Warsaw, though it is admitted the Germans are drawing closer.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—The entry of the Germans into Warsaw is expected at any hour.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The Second Canadian Contingent was reviewed at Shorncliffe preparatory to their departure for the front.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Germans have notified the United States they consider the sinking of the steamer Frye as perfectly legal.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—Another fairly calm day was passed on the western front.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Forty-six British vessels were sunk by German submarines during July.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—Russians have been pushed eastward and are now fighting behind the outer defenses of the Polish capital. Casualties have been very heavy on both sides.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The seizure of the U. S. cotton ship Dacia was to-day upheld by the French Prize Court as valid.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Cotton producers call upon the Government to open a way to Germany with United States ships if Britain persists in her blockade.

NIAGARA, Aug. 5.—As a result of the Queenston disaster Vice-President E. R. Dixon, vice-president of the International Railway, was arrested, charged with criminal negligence. He was released on bail of ten thousand dollars.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Speaking at a meeting here last night Premier Asquith said Britain's position was surer to-day than at any date since the opening of the war.

PARIS, Aug. 5.— After repeated charges the French to-day gained two more hill tops in Alsace.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 5. — The Czar Nicholas and Premier have again cabled Britain and France the assurance that Russia will not conclude a separate peace.

RUSSIAN GARRISON MAKING ITS LAST STAND IN FURIOUS BATTLE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Aug. 5.—Less than six miles from the town hall, the Russian garrison was making its last stand in a furious battle at the city limits of Warsaw, when the last despatches were filed to the War Office to-day, falling back from Blonie in accordance with previously arranged plans. Slav forces retired behind the outer forts at the Western borders of the city. The Germans pressed slowly forward, taking up positions on the Golabki-Mooxydlo line, about nine miles from the heart of the Polish Capital. From these new positions they opened a bombardment of forts defending Warsaw from the West and South. Military men said that from the outer forts the Slav Garrison could sweep the Western approaches with a fire that would hold off the Germans indefinitely unless they chose to sacrifice thousands of lives by a massed assault. Though it is admitted here that Riga, too, may be evacuated by the Russians there was a general feeling of optimism to-day over the scape of the Russian armies from the trap set by the German general staff.

10,000 AUSTRIANS WERE KILLED WITH ROCKS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ROME, via Paris, Aug. 5.—Letters received in Rome from officers at the front agree that the fighting on the Isonzo River and on the Carso Plateau may well be taken as an excellent example of the perfect realization of the plans of the Italian commanders.

Nothing in these engagements was left to a chance; everything was worked out with mathematical precision. A lieutenant of artillery, writing from the front, says the formidable Austrian defences on Mount Podgora and on Mount San Michele are no longer recognizable, the Italian artillery having done its work so well. A few days saw the destruction of what cost Austria a vast sum of money to build.

Other letters relate that a large proportion of the Austrian losses were caused, not by the Italian fire, but by the hurling of rocks. More than 10,000 men were thus crushed to death in their trenches. At San Martini no fewer than 2,000 Austrian dead were found in a group of trenches, crushed by falling rock.

The Italians, these letters set forth, lost comparatively few men in this fighting. This is the reason explained by their excellent use of and their frequent charges with the bayonet, a weapon which they seem to handle to better advantage than their opponents.

When new shoes pinch immediate and lasting relief can be obtained from the application of a cloth wet with hot water, and laid across the place that is giving trouble.

GERMANS BAR FRENCH LANGUAGE IN ALSACE

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—The following notice, signed by the general in command of the Fifteenth Army Corps, and posted in Sepoe and Strassburg, is an interesting sign of public feeling in Alsace:

"The provocative use of the French language in the street and public places will be regarded as a demonstration of anti-German feeling and punished by imprisonment for not more than twelve months. It is also regarded provocative when the French language is used by persons acquainted with the German language unless they are speaking to persons who do not understand German."

Britain Will Hold Mortgage On Europe

Special Cable to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—International Finance will have undergone some remarkable changes before the war is over. Relations after the war are a fit subject for prophetic study by G. B. Shaw or G. K. Chesterton. But New York financial men are discussing certain facts which point to Great Britain as still the dominant financial power of the world after Germany is beaten, and relatively, much stronger than she is to-day.

It is pretty generally known that Great Britain is financing the Allies. She has loaned enormous sums to France, Russia, Italy, Belgium, Servia and Rumania and that money will come back. Britain has taken the notes and other securities of the borrowers. When the war is over she will hold a mortgage on most of Europe.

These loans will be investments and Britain will regularly receive interest payments. Were Germany to win, the paper would be useless. But if the Allies triumph, these securities will be worth par value. Moreover, Great Britain will make still larger loans in financing the reconstruction of Europe. The power which these mortgages on the other nations will give Britain will be enormous. It may also be an effective guarantee of European peace for many years.

NOT THE BIGGEST
—BUT THERE'S NONE BETTER

The size of an institution doesn't necessarily determine the quality of its product or service.

The biggest doesn't always produce the best.

It all depends upon the quality of the materials used; the skill and interest of the workmen, and the intentions of "the men behind."

We frankly admit that ours is not the largest Optical Establishment in Ontario.

But we do maintain that, with our three roughly modern equipped shops, and with well paid workmen personally interested in its welfare, and working under the supervision of Mr. Fowler, we get better results at less cost to the customer from our parlors than do the larger shops.

Guaranteed quality, better prices, and all-round better service—that is what you are assured at Fowler's Optical Parlors.

CHAPTER FORTY.

Kate Is Ready.

When I got back Josiah was bendin' over Tom Smith, and a new half-breed and another Injun were just comin' around the corner. It was these two 'at Panther had seen racin' in from the east, which had really been the cause of the gang pullin' out.

Kate managed to get the door open just as I got back, and she rushed out and threw herself on her knees beside Tom Smith, while her brother came after lookin' half-ashamed of her, which I've since found out is a mighty easy trick for a brother to perform. Kate bent low over Tom Smith with her hands clasped across her breast and kept murmurin', "Oh, oh, oh!" in a sort of sob.

The' wasn't a mark to be seen on Tom Smith; and presently old Josiah turned him over gentle while Kate shuddered to see how loose and lifeless his body rolled.

"Come, Kate," sez Douglas Kastle, puttin' his arm about her and speakin' kind but matter o' fact, "he's nothin' but a common outlaw. You heard the brute that came first say there was a reward on his head for murder."

"Go away," sez Kate, pushin' him from her; "he saved me from that very brute, after I'd gone to him on your account."

Then old Josiah spoke out in a tone of relief. "Well, I declare!" sez he. "Panther creased him."

It was the truth as sure as ever. Tom Smith had ducked away as Panther fired and the bullet had just grazed one of the joints in his neck, the same as the boys used to work it to get mustangs. He was stunned, all right, and it took some little time to rout him out of it, and when he came to, Kate was holdin' a box of salve while Josiah tied up the neck.

Kate's eyes were full of pain and sympathy and Tom Smith held out a hand to her. She started to take it, and right then she remembered that she hated him on Belle Stern's account, and she handed me the box o' salve and started for the house, while her brother, not havin' had much practice in bein' a brother, looked powerful surprised.

In about a minute, Tom Smith was able to sit up and move his head a little, and then Josiah looked around and noticed the two Injuns and the breed who had last arrived. He spoke something to 'em and when they answered, he followed 'em down to the thicket where the pair who had been through it all had made their stand; and I followed after.

There in the thicket lyin' flat on his back with a bullet-hole in his forehead was the breed who had thrown the laugh into me on the day I had caught him watchin' Kate and Belle Stern. Josiah dropped on one knee and put his hand on the man's chest. For a full minute he looked down into his face, and then said in a low tone: "He was a good boy, he was a good boy."

He got up and spoke rapid to the three who had stood watchin' him, and they hurried away. All through the fight there had been a look of keen enjoyment in the old hermit's eyes; but now his face was like stone, and as he walked back to the cabin his hands were clinched. He went in to old man Kastle who seemed to thrive on excitement for he looked better 'n ever I'd seen him and the two men shook hands. Josiah examined the cabin, spoke a few words to Kate, told her brother to take good care of her, and then we went outside again.

His hoss was there and so was Tom Smith's and mine, while the two Injuns and the breed were sittin' their ponies and lookin' eager to be off in spite o' their set faces.

The old hermit got on his hoss and his own dog ranged beside him, and I'll say for the dog that he didn't attempt to keep his face like a piece of wood, but let all the joy he had flow into it. Placido stood in the door-way and his eyes were full of tears, they were, they were full of tears, and he couldn't help givin' a little whine through his nose. Old Josiah looked down at him, and his face softened a little. "They won't need you here, Placido," sez he, "and I may. Come along."

The dog gave a rush and a light bound, touched the old hermit's thigh with his front paws, licked his hand, and when he struck the ground he shook himself as though throwin' off chains that had been wearin' mighty heavy on him.

Me and Tom Smith rode beside old Josiah until we reached the ford, where he turned to us and said: "I don't want you to go along, boys. You've got the Lion Head to look after, and you, Tom Smith, have got to get back under cover; but I've got my work cut out for me. That gang'll break up purty soon and as fast as they straggle, we'll get 'em. Keep an eye on Kate, Happy Hawkins, and Tom Smith—I wish I could give you some advice, but all I can do is to wish you luck. Good-by."

He allus had his own way did the old hermit, and so we turned back. We rode on to the corner of the cabin, and here Tom Smith asked me if I'd ask Kate to speak to him a minute.

"Does your neck hurt?" sez I.

"Nothin' to speak of," sez he, tryin' it out. "It burns a little and it feels somehow as if it didn't quite belong to me; but—"

"If I was you," sez I, "I wouldn't study so much on how I did feel as how I ort to feel. If I was you, I'd get faint and wobbly, right now."

He was too proud, though, to be altogether sensible, so he stood beside his hoss with his head high, while I came steadyin' Kate by the arm, accordin' to the way I'd seen old Josiah do. She had gone through the fight like a veteran; but now she'd have given a sight to have a good long cry on the Begum's shoulder, and her face was white and trembly.

Tom Smith took a step toward her, holdin' out his hand palm up, and sez in a husky voice: "Kate, I am free, now, of all but the law. Will you marry me and go to Mexico?"

"No," sez she, lookin' at him as haughty as she had the strength for, "I will not."

She turned and started back and wouldn't even let me put my hand under her elbow.

"Can you run old Josiah's slave?" sez I.

"Yes," sez she, "but he isn't a slave."

"Would he fight?" sez I.

"He is willin' to die ten times over for anything that Uncle Josiah cares for," sez she.

"He must have a rugged constitution," sez I. "Well, don't you take any more off your brother than suits ya.. I stand ready to be a brother to ya, or anything else you need, at a moment's notice."

"I kno wit," sez she, lettin' her face soften, "and if ever I need you I shan't hesitate to call."

I started back, but she sez to me, just incidental like, "Do you reckon Tom Smith will go to Mexico?"

"I reckon he'll start," sez I; "but don't you worry, the's too many lookin' for him, for him to stand much chance o' gettin' there—especially now that he's cut loose from the Sterns for all time."

"What do you mean?" sez she.

"Oh, nothin'," sez I, "except that I went down with him to their camp in the Palo Duro Canon, and heard him give Belle Stern the final go-by. She's up in this neigrbourhood watchin' for one more chance at him, but it's a mighty poor bet. I feel sorry for her, too, for she's got a world o' grit."

"Well, I don't feel sorry for her," sez she, and then we parted.

As soon as me and Tom Smith got under way, I looked at him scornful and sez: "Tom Smith, you bloomin' chump, if ever you get a chance to ask another gel to marry you, just ask her to carry you and let her own imagination call up the drawbacks. Marryin' you would be test enough for any gel's love; but when you ask her to marry you and go to Mexico, it's addin' insult to injury."

"I wish I was in Mexico already," sez Tom Smith.

"I wish you'd gone there and settled down ten years ago," sez I. "Did you ever see this slave of old Josiah's?"

"Yes," sez he, "he's got a bum foot."

"Do you reckon he can tend to the buryin over there?"

"He's strong as an ox," sez Tom Smith. "The Injuns pulled the bodies where they'll be buried. I saw to that on her account."

"I'm glad you did," sez I, "for I'm so blame sleepy it makes me pant to hold my thoughts together."

"How'd you get here?" sez he, happenin' to recall that he had left me on a rock in Palo Duro Canon.

"I burried here with my pocket-knife," sez I. "How'd you get here?"

"I had just got my saddle on my hoss when a couple o' deputies jumped me," sez he. "I dodged among the rocks and finally gave 'em the slip; but had to go a long way down a different trail to get back to the camp. Then Buck Stern gave me this hoss and it's a wonder. Buck said the rest of 'em had come up this way to see what they could do for me. I wish they'd mind their own business."

HAD DYSENTERY.

WAS VERY BAD WITH IT.

Mrs. G. A. McKnight, Mulvihill, Man., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for nine years, and I would not be without it in the house. I was very bad with dysentery; a friend gave me a dose of 'Dr. Fowler's,' and told me to get a bottle right away, which I did, and it did me lots of good. My brother was bad too, and I told him to take it, and he was cured. I hope there are others who will get 'Dr. Fowler's' and keep it in the house, for it will surely save doctor's bills."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 70 years, and has been used in thousands of Canadian homes during that time.

You do not experiment when you buy it. See that you get what you ask for, and if your dealer tries to palm off a substitute on you, insist on getting "Dr. Fowler's," or go where you can get it.

The genuine is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED SWORN STATEMENT

Of Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Who Gratefully Gives All Credit to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

It is one thing to make big claims for a medicine and quite another thing to produce irrefutable evidence that it actually cures in serious cases.

We prefer to let the cured ones speak for themselves, and that is why you find in almost every newspaper the report of someone who has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. To-day we present the sworn statement of Mr. Wesley Maxwell. When a man goes to this trouble in expressing his gratitude there can be no question of the benefit he has received. Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must tell you that before I started using them I could only make water with the greatest difficulty, and had many severe pains in the back. I am completely cured now by the use of these pills. Before that I used a lot of doctors' medicine without any benefit that I could see. I am thankful for being cured, and can recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills very highly."

SWORN STATEMENT.

"This is to certify that I, Wesley Maxwell, of the Township of Caledon, was cured of kidney trouble by taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"Wesley Maxwell."

(Sworn before me as correct this 6th day of January, 1915. — Wm. Hawkins, Sen. Justice of the Peace).

This statement is also endorsed by the Rev. Geo. W. Robinson, who is Mr. Maxwell's pastor.

This cure will interest a great many people who are suffering as Mr. Maxwell was with kidney and urinary troubles. It will only cost you a quarter to buy a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and put this medicine to the test. We are sure that you will be thankful to the writer for describing his cure to you. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Dragon Seal

Its Mystery and Its Solution.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mason tilted back in his chair and stared across the China sea, where a passing steamer slid through the oily waters. The little whitewashed hut with its tiny veranda facing the sea and its bit of garden looked like a dozen others of its kind which formed the muddy little Chinese village.

Albert Mason had lived there ever since the late uprising. He had become separated from his tourist party and, to his own great amazement, discovered himself a prisoner on a piratical looking craft which fled before the wind at night and lay hidden in obscure harbors during the day.

One day the junk had nosed into the soft mud of the Chekiang shore, and Mason had been conducted to the little hut.

"Here," said his captor, a bland looking, cold eyed Celestial, "here you stay, thief of the world, until you give up the dragon."

"Dragon?" echoed Mason, hearing for the first time the charge against him. "Do you believe that I've kidnaped part of your menagerie?"

The official shrugged his shoulders, and his companion pulled his sleeve, speaking in Chinese, which of course Mason did not understand:

"Let the foreign devil stay here awhile enjoying his own company. Soon he will disgorge."

"He may escape," said the other cautiously.

"He will not," said the villainous looking captain. "He cannot go beyond the confines of his own garden. The place is guarded night and day."

So Mason stood on the veranda of the hut and watched the junk go teetering away to the dim north whence they had come.

He never forgot that first evening when, after he had eaten fish and rice and drunk tea, he had stepped on the veranda.

He walked down the path to the end of the garden and looked at the moon. Why not escape tonight—or must he wait until his guards relaxed their vilgance and then make the effort?

"Now or never," he muttered and pressed against the gate that opened upon the muddy bank above the restless waves.

The gate resisted his efforts—it was as if some great weight held it closed.

Then came a bloodcurdling growl, and there stepped into the moonlit space before the stockade a huge striped form with eyeballs like flame and a breath like pestilence.

Mason fled to the other gate, and again he met the flaming eyes and the jungle smell.

Men guarded him by day; a man eating tiger and his mate kept watch by night.

Like a madman he flew into the house and locked the doors.

A year and a day passed, and the captain of the junk came and asked him if he would give up the dragon. And Mason, raving with anger, bitterly refused, although he knew not what the man meant. And the captain smiled and went away.

And now two years and two days had passed and the junk had not made her second visit to the prisoner.

His position was a singular one. He was innocent of having broken any law of the country—of having committed any crime. In his bag there was not a single thing that he had not brought from home, except a few toys, grotesque straw animals, gayly colored, which he had purchased from an insistent street vender. The very next day he had been trapped with some hand luggage and spirited away from Shanghai.

"It's a case of mistaken identity," he told himself over and over again as he restlessly tramped the garden paths, envying the freedom of the birds swinging in space and the fishermen off shore.

Back home there, in New Hampshire, his wife and children were mourning him as dead. It was an agonizing thought.

He went to his worn traveling bags and listlessly turned over the contents. There was little clothing left. That which he wore was in tatters. There were pictures of his family, his case of medicines for an emergency, the straw toys—that was all. His trunks, if unclaimed, were still in Shanghai.

The medicines were getting low. He had been obliged to take most of the quinine pills during his frequent attacks of chills and fever. There was a little brandy left—he was saving that for some great emergency—and two unopened bottles of chloroform. These were tightly sealed with wax, and the contents appeared to be inviolate. He had brought it to use when adding to his collection of lepidoptera, but his cases and his butterfly nets and his pins and other paraphernalia were in the trunks.

Chloroform, a willing servant, he mused, his dark thoughts running on, eliminating himself from his horrid existence.

And then, like a lightning flash revealing unsuspected avenues of escape, came the idea.

The remainder of the day he was nervously excited. He took the pictures of his family, the brandy bottle and the quinine, the straw toys and his one clean shirt and made a package, which he belted around his chest under his clothing. He cooked and ate an enormous quantity of rice and fish; then he threw himself into his hammock and slept heavily until 10 o'clock.

He shook himself into wakefulness, slung a jug of cold tea from his shoulder and went into the garden.

In one hand he carried a large bath sponge tied to a strong stick. In the other hand he carried a bottle of chloroform. At the nearest gate he paused and looked through at the outstretched form of the jungle cat. She was accustomed to Mason's presence there and did not even stir. With steady hands he soaked the big sponge with chloroform—the bottle was large, and the sponge was dripping.

Carefully he poked the stick between the bamboo uprights and pressed it close to the nose and mouth of the sleeping tigress. She stirred and, as if enjoying the unaccustomed sensation, grasped the sponge in her huge paws and muzzled it sleepily. She did not even stir when Mason squeezed a heavy duck bag through the palings and tossed it over her head.

He hastened to the gate at the end of the garden and performed the same operation with the fiercer male beast.

His hands were trembling now, for he must make haste. He could not hope that the anaesthetic would do more than stupefy the beasts for awhile. There was not enough of it, and the conditions were not favorable.

"Just ten minutes—give me ten minutes' start and I'll take my chances with sharks rather than stay here another minute!" he muttered savagely.

The guardian gate opened, and he stepped over the inert form of the striped guardian.

He slipped and slid down the muddy bank until he reached the water's edge. The full moon guided him to the group of fishing boats drawn up on the beach. In a moment he had pushed off from shore and was poling his frail craft into the track of moonlight that led to freedom.

Off to the southeast there showed a faint light—some northbound steamer. So fearful was he that he might miss the precious opportunity and so absorbed was he in the management of the strange boat that Mason failed to notice the ominous silence that brooded over the waters; the shuddering, licking sound of the oily waves.

Suddenly the moon was blotted out by a swift outrush of inky clouds and the hot breath of the wind.

Surely death stared him in the face. It was riding now on the wings of the approaching typhoon.

And all the while that red light bobbed and disappeared, and now the steamer showed a blessed green light. He could see them, alternately—port and starboard. She had changed her course and was coming before the wind, straight toward the tiny sampan tipping up and down on the swell.

One minute after Mason had been rescued by the great ocean liner the typhoon struck with shrieking force.

Perhaps the tidal wave that followed tossed the sampan back on its native shore; perhaps the hungry wave leaped the embankment and tore away Mason's hut and the snarling guardians. He never knew. He never cared.

They put him in a cabin and gave him what he asked for—hot water and soap and clean garments—and he cared not for fifty typhoons. He was back among civilized people. He was free from that mysterious imprisonment.

* * * * * * *

A year later he had almost forgotten it. He was back in New Hampshire, going daily to his business in Concord. His family welcomed him home as one from the grave, and his children played with the straw toys he had bought from the street vender.

Albert Mason had other troubles now. Business was bad, and bankruptcy stared him in the face. Unfortunate investments had depleted his assets. The years he had wasted in the hut on the China sea had undermined his prosperity.

He went home and talked it over with his wife, a helpmate indeed.

They smiled at the children playing on the floor. The youngest brought a broken toy to his father. It was one of the straw animals Mason had brought home from China.

"The frog and the cat and the bird are quite well," said the baby earnestly, "but my dwagon feels very sick!"

"The dragon, eh?" repeated Mason, examining the hollow interior of the curly tailed, red fanged toy. "I don't wonder, Molly, look at that!"

He withdrew his fingers and dangled before his wife's amazed eyes a golden chain, from which hung a magnificent girdle clasp of jade set with diamonds and rubies, the insignia of some Chinese military official. And carved on the face of the jade was the deep cut figure of a dragon inclosed in a seal.

"The dragon!" he muttered dazedly.

"You were carrying it all the time," his wife added. "It must have been within the toy when you purchased it. What a mystery it all is!"

"Some one has palmed off incriminating evidence upon me," laughed Mason. "I'll write to Wayne in Shanghai and see if there is any chance of finding the owner. If there isn't—well, Mason & Co. will continue to do business. Hurrah!"

Two months afterward came Wayne's letter, from which I quote:

"Impossible to trace. China has turned over, you know. Mandarins have suicided, been assassinated and others cashiered. You better keep it as a reward for your time of imprisonment."

"But I wouldn't go through the experience again for double the price," said Mason grimly.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B. C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

BRITISH DISCARD PUTTEE

Russian Army Boot will be Substituted—Better for Trenches.

LONDON, Aug. 4—The British Army has decided to discontinue the use of the puttee, which has been the distinguishing leg wear of the British soldier for many years, and to substitute te Russian army boot. This decision was arrived at as a result of last winter's campaign in Flanders, when it was found that the cloth puttee was little or no protection against the mud and water, and led to the men suffering, not from frost bitten, but from benumbed feet and legs. Large orders have already been given for boots, which will be supplied to the troops before winter sets in, as the War Office anticipates another winter in mud and water-soaked trenches.

The puttee, which is to be discarded, was adopted because of its protection against snake bites in India, and became general throughout the British army, and in fact, has since the commencement of the present war been taken [illegible] of the continental armies.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

TORONTO, Monday, August 2.—All eyes are on the harvest, and all who are directly interested in harvest returns are getting anxious. There is altogether too much rain. In the western provinces particularly ten days or two weeks of hot weather is urgently needed to mature the crops. If wet weather continues much longer maturity may be delayed to such an extent that early frost will do great damage. In the east, conditions are somewhat similar and excessive rainfall has not only delayed harvest but offers favorable conditions for the development of rust. The rains, too, have delayed the hay harvest and in both Ontario and Quebec the total of the hay spoiled is considerable. The prevalence of smut is due in no small measure to the same cause.

A review of the farm markets of the week shows wheat making sharp declines, coarse grain also tending downward, and dairy products and live stock at good prices, but the market uneasy.

WHEAT.

The wheat market has been characterised by a series of sharp declines as the new crop harvest approaches. For instance No. 1 Northern is now quoted $1.33½, as compared with $1.45½ a week ago. A statement issued by the Ontario millers is of interest:

"On account of the heavy losses sustained by millers during the past year on flour made from wheat tagged with smut or containing smut balls, wheat of this description will only be saleable for feed, which means that it will be worth 10c to 15c per bushel less than No. 2 fall. Grain dealers should note this carefully to avoid heavy losses. Any farmer who sows his seed without first treating it is not only injuring himself, but giving the Province a bad name."

Quotations follow: No. 1 Northern $1.33½; No. 2, $1.30½; No. 3, $1.27; Ontario wheat, $1.10 to $1.12; new crop, $1 to $1.02.

COARSE GRAINS.

The coarse grain market has been dull and quiet with declines generally. Western oats have been cut several cents, Ontario oats one cent; but corn is the exception, it having advanced a cent. Quotations: Oats, C.W., No. 2, 44½c; Ontario oats No. 2, 37c to 38c; No. 3, 46c to 47c. Barley No. 3 fed, 66c; other grains nominal. At Montreal, oats, C.W., No. 2, are quoted 56½c; extra No. 1 feed, 54½c; local white, 53c to 53c; corn, 93c to 96c; other grains nominal.

MILL FEEDS.

Prices have been well maintained; bran, $27; shorts, $29; middlings, $30; feed flour, bag, $1.90; cornmeal, sack, $3.30 to $3.50; cotton seed meal, $35 to $36. Montreal quotes bran $26 to $26.50; shorts, $28; middlings, $33 to $34; moullie, $45 to $40.

HAY AND STRAW.

The new hay crop is not yet arriving on the market in any quantity. Old hay is coming along in small quantities and on this market quotations are lower. Baled hay, No. 1 $17 to $19; No. 2, $15 to $16; baled straw, $7. At Montreal quotations are firmly maintained, the demand from the United States as well as the renewed demand of the Canadian government being the factors influencing the market. No. 1 hay is quoted $22.50 and No. 2, $20.50 to $22.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES.

Wholesale prices are as follows: Cherries, sour, 11 qt. bkt., 50c to 75c; gooseberries, 11 qt. bkt., 40c to 50c; red currants, 11 qt. bkt., 40c to 50c; black currants, $1 to $1.40; raspberries, red, 10½c. to 12c; black, 8c to 10c; apples, hamper, $1.25 to $1.50; peaches, 12 qt. bkt., 75c to $1; plums, 11 qt. bkt., 50c; potatoes, new, bush., 60c; tomatoes, 11 qt. bkt., $1.45 to $1.75 cukes, bkt., 40c to 50c.

EGGS AND POULTRY.

Receipts of eggs continue large as compared with former years. If the campaign of produce dealers for better quality has had much effect in inducing better care of the eggs from farm to wholesalers, it has not been evident in the receipts of the last few days, and the loss must be borne by the producer. On this market eggs in cartons are quoted 24c to 25c; selects, 23c to 24c; No. 1, 21c to 23c; No. 2, 18c to 19c. At Montreal, egg quotations are: No. 1, 20c to 21c, up to 27c for new laids.

HIDES AND WOOL

The situation is satisfactory all along the line. Quotations: Hides, flat, cured, 18c to 19c; part cured, 17c to 18c; calf skins, cured, 18c to 19c; part cured, 17c to 18c; deacons or bob calf, 75c to $1.10 each; horses, take-off, No. 1 $3.75 to $4.25; No. 2, $3.25 to $3 each; sheepskins, 75c to $2; shearlings and spring lambs, 40c to 75c; horsehair, farmers' stock, 23c to 27c per pound.

Wool is marketed freely at steadily advancing prices. Quotations: Washed combing fleece (coarse), 30c to 31c a lb.; washed, medium, 42c to 41c; tub-washed (coarse) 39c to 41c; fine, 42c to 43c; washed fleece, fine, 46c to 47c; washed rejects, 33c to 35c; unwashed combing fleece (coarse) 29c to 30c; unwashed medium, 32c to 33c; unwashed fine fleece, 35c to 37c.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

There is a steadier feeling in the butter market. It almost begins to look as if we would yet do some trade with the coast. Inquiries have been received from Winnipeg and Vancouver. It will be some time before New Zealand will be a serious competitor on that market, due to the drought in the antipodes. The western provinces, however, are making a big inroad on the trade. Western dairy butter is quoted about 28c, laid down at Montreal, and on that market finest creamery has been selling at 29½c to 27½c. On this market fresh creamery prints are quoted at 29c to 30c, creamery solids, 28c to 27c; dairy prints, 25c to 26c; bakers, 24c to 23c. The English market is now supplied with cheese; hence the explanation of recent low prices. The Trade Bulletin reports that stocks of cheese in the Surrey Commercial Docks, London, on July 9th, were 145,214 boxes as compared with 42,460 on the same date last year. Much of this cheese is an inferior article from the United States, and there is a tendency to rush it on the market as quickly as possible. At the lower prices prevailing more business has been done on this side at 13½c to 14c for the finest western colored, and 13½c to 13½c for finest white. Townships range from 12½c to 13½c. The old country situation is summed up by a London Tooley Street firm as follows:

"The fact of the matter is we all anticipated too greedily upon the requirements of the government for the fighters at the front, and kept on buying at abnormally high prices, when we should have rested on our oars. We are now reaping the consequences of our folly, which should teach us a salutary lesson in the cheesedom of the future, and prevent us being again carried away by the war fever."

DAIRY BOARDS.

Kingston, July 29.—136 white and 482 colored; 50 white sold at 13 5-16c and 300 colored sold at 13 9-16c.

Vankleek Hill, July 29.—1907 boxes white and 394 colored cheese boarded. All sold except one or two lots at 13½c.

Brockville, July 29—1366 white and 2393 colored boarded. Sales were 415 white at 13 11-16c; 628 colored at 13 5-8c, and 200 cool cured colored at 14½c. Balance sold on street at board price.

Mont Joli, Que, July 30.—360 boxes colored sold at 12½c and 100 packages butter at 26c.

Victoriaville, Que., July 30—1700 boxes of cheese sold at 12 13-16c.

Alexandria, July 30—674 white cheese sold at 13½c.

Picton, July 30—1603 boxes cheese, all colored; 510 sold at 13 15-16c, and balance at 13¾c.

Kemptville, July 30.—43 white and 627 colored cheese boarded, 12½c being the ruling price. All white and 547 colored sold.

Napanee, July 30.—Cheese boarded, 790 white and 1015 colored. Nearly all sold: 13½c to 13½c for white and 13 1-16c for colored.

Iroquois, July 30.—665 colored and 90 white cheese were sold at 13½c.

Perth, July 30.—600 white and 600 colored cheese. One small lot sold at 13 13-16c, and the balance at 13½c.

Cornwall, July 30.—2087 colored. All sold at 13½c.

Listowel, July 30.—1404 colored and 1307 white cheese. Bidding on board reached 13¾c but none sold. Several sales were reported on the street at 13½c.

LIVE STOCK.

Last week we reported a decreased movement of live stock in the Toronto market. This week, too, the movement has been light as compared with a month ago, and about the same number of cattle were handled as the same date a year ago. Receipts of hogs and cattle, however, were much lighter. The majority of the cattle received were of poor quality. Few really choice animals were handled. The general tone was easier, $7.50 to $8.35 being the prices paid for good butchers'. Fat cows and bulls of good quality were wanted at $6.75 to $7. For the inferior stuff there was no demand. Canners and cutters were weaker towards the week-end. Good heavy feeders were wanted at $6.50 to $7.50 all week. These animals were either sold as feeders or light butchers'. Common stockers and feeders were in poor demand.

Choice milkers were wanted. Prices ran around $100 per animal. For the inferior grades there was no demand.

Hogs have been particularly firm, receipts being 3,000 less than a week ago, and 1,000 less than a year ago; $9 to $9.10 was paid off cars.

Supplies on the Montreal market were not in excess by any means and quotations held firm at the decline of a week ago. There was no demand for export but local boosters were on the market. Best steers realized $8 and lower grades down to $6; butchers' cows and bulls $4.50 to $6.50.

In small meats there was a steady demand. Best lambs realized $9; common, $8, and sheep $4 to $5.50. Calves from $3 to $15 each. Hogs were in small offering, and the prices steady. Sales of cwt. off cars.

Tired out men and run-down women certainly do "pick up" on

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

There was a time when yoke waists point for the full sections of waists, which had only two variations, one of them are now made of materials so sheer that a pointed yoke and the other a square they hardly seem possible to sew.

In this illustration we have the most simple form of the square yoke. It is made to come rather far down in both front and back, and the two portions are joined at the shoulder. The neck of the blouse opens to the lower edge of the yoke and is finished with a simple collar with rounded edges. The lower portion of the yoke is gathered in front and back and the closing is in the centre of the front, with a box pleat or band and a frill on each side of it. Of course this frill may be omitted. The armhole is somewhat wider than normal and the upper end of the sleeve is shaped to fit it without any fulness. The sleeves may be either long or short.

This style is ideal for such sheer fabrics as organdie, marquisette, crêpe de Chine and crêpe georgette, and also for more serviceable weaves, such as fine gingham, batiste and cotton voile.

The waist pattern, No. 7,242, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 1⅝ yards of 36 inch figured goods and 1⅛ yards of 36 inch plain. The square yoke has come back into favor as it makes an excellent starting

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

BRITISH SUBMARINES HAVE CREATED A REIGN OF TERROR

BERLIN CLAIMS CAPTURE OF POLAND CAPITAL

BERLIN REPORTS THE FALL OF WARSAW AND CAPTURE OF A FEW STRAGGLERS

Bavarian Troops Under Prince Leopold Stormed the Last Line of the Russian Defences and Entered the City on the Kolish and Radom Roads---Germans Apparently Have Failed in Their Attempt to Isolate the Czar's Army as Only a Few Prisoners Were Taken.

RUSSIAN CENTRE IS FALLING BACK

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—The Russian garrison fell back over the three Vistula bridges to Praga, Warsaw's eastern suburb, after a brief resistance. Bavarian troops, under Prince Leopold, stormed the last line of the Russian defences and entered the city on the Kolish and Radom roads.

Continuing their retreat from Praga, the Russian centre is falling back along the railway leading to Novo Minsk and over the plain north of the railway, and is keeping in contact with its right wing near Novo Georgevisk. German troops are pursuing the retreating Slavs and have cut off and captured bodies of stragglers.

It is notable that the Germans so far do not claim to have captured large bodies of Russians in taking Warsaw. They simply say that a few stragglers have fallen into their hands. This seems to indicate that the Germans have failed in their great objective in the Warsaw campaign, namely, the isolation of the major part of the Czar's army. Apparently the Grand Duke Nicholas has again proven himself an excellent general of retreats.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—The capture of Warsaw by the Germans was officially announced to-day. It ended more than a century of Russian domination of the Polish capital, a city of about 800,000 people, and sometimes referred to as the "Paris" of Russia.

Warsaw was lost by the Poles in a great three-days' battle in July, 1656, when the forces of Charles X. of Sweden conquered the city, troops of Frederick William, "the Great Elector," having participated in the attack. In 1702 Swedish troops under Charles XII. again entered the city. Warsaw was again forced to capitulate this time to the Russians in 1794. For many decades the Poles in Warsaw were restless under the rule of the Czar. Plots of revolution were constantly in process of formation.

GERMANS CAPTURE FRENCH TRENCHES.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—(French Official). — German troops in the Vosges literally swarmed over the French trenches on Lingekopf in overwhelming numbers and forced the French to retire at certain points, it was officially admitted this afternoon. The struggle continued throughout last night under cover of heavy bombardment. The Germans charged up the slope; they disregarded a hot fire from French machine guns and swept on the crest of the ridge.

This afternoon's official communique reported artillery duels all along the Aisne and throughout the Argonne region during the night. Grenade fighting and cannonading continues in the Artois region.

ITALIAN TROOPS ADVANCE.

ROME, Aug. 5.—Severe fighting on the Carso Plateau, in which the Bersaglieri registered slight gains in face of a hot fire from the enemy, was reported in despatches from General Cadorna to-day, dealing with yesterday's operations on the Isonzo front.

To-day's official statement said that the Austrian

Thirty-two Recruits Heard the Call

The climax of last night's recruiting demonstration followed the splendid address by the speaker of the evening, Sir George Foster. While the applause was still resounding throughout the closely packed hall, Sergt. Hart followed by Piper R. Yeaman and Drummer Robt. Beach and twenty-eight recruits enrolled during the past few days, appeared from the west end of the halls and paraded down one aisle in front of the platform. To the pipe and drum music they advanced in single file up one aisle and down another, proceeding all the way around the hall. It was the signal for a tremendous outburst of applause which rolled up into the most remarkable enthusiasm witnessed in Peterborough in a great many years. Some of the older citizens said to-day that they had never witnessed the equal to this occurrence. Adjutant McElhiney shouted above the throng exhortations to the men to enlist. First one man arose and left his seat as the piper passed him. In another section another man heard the call. The number in civilian uniform swelled to sixteen. The 57th Band played Tipperary and the recruits sprang forward in greater numbers. When the parade was concluded thirty-two men had responded. It was the first introduction of up-to-the-minute recruiting methods, and the thousands who witnessed it will not soon forget those moments of intense patriotic enthusiasm.

VOCAL PROGRAMME.

During the evening Miss Dorothy Allan sang "Your King and Country Needs You," and Mr. Ed. Hanrahan sang "The Veteran's Song." Miss Sanderson and Miss Marion Gorman played the accompaniments. Both numbers were enthusiastically received.

Peterboro' May Undertake To Raise a Battalion Two Bands Volunteer

Ambitious Scheme is Given Initial Impulse at a Special Meeting That Was Held Prior to the Big Event of Last Evening---Sir George Foster Expresses His Approval --Battalion Will Bear the Name of "The Peterborough Rangers."

COL. CLEGG MAY TAKE COMMAND

That Peterborough be allotted to raise a battalion to bear the name of "The Peterborough Rangers," was the suggestion made to the acting-Premier Sir George Foster, at a special meeting held in the Empress Hotel yesterday evening at six o'clock. A battalion consists of 1,133 officers and men, hence an idea of the extent to which those behind the recruiting movement are prepared to advance their efforts, will be readily understood. At this meeting all the officers and ex-officers of the local regiment volunteered their services not only to organize the battalion but also to command and lead it. The members of the 57th Regimental and Salvation Army bands also volunteered, and it was suggested that Colonel Clegg be brought back to take charge of the proposed battalion, following the precedent in which Colonel Dennistoun was returned to organize a Western Regiment.

CONFIDENCEE EXPRESSED

A number of the citizens present spoke on this proposal which was broached in Mr. R. B. Rogers' address to Sir George Foster. They expressed a confidence that Peterborough could, and would, raise the regiment. Peterborough forms one point in a triangle of which Ottawa and Kingston are the others. While this city is willing to furnish drafts of men, and has done so in the past, it was stated that the time had come when this locality should be recognised as a military centre. The city has the best of accommodation for a battalion and those who support the idea are quite willing that as soon as it is raised it be transferred to Barriefield, Valcartier, or any other camp that the best interests of the service demand.

MR. ROGERS' ADDRESS.

The address then read on behalf of the assembly by Mr. Rogers, was as follows:

To The Honourable,
George E. Foster,
Acting Premier.

SIR,—On behalf of the Peterborough Patriotic Speakers' League, an organization of the citizens of Peterborough, which is formed for the purpose of aiding the Government in the urgent call for men, beg leave to put the following facts before you as acting Premier of the Dominion:

The only means at present of obtaining recruits is by persuasion.

That being the case, conditions must be such that persuasion will have effect on the men on whom it is used.

The present conditions are such that we as citizens think this can be greatly improved and in connection therewith we would mention the following facts:

When most men hear the call of their country, and are inclined to heed it, a feeling of comradeship is the next feeling that comes over him. He thinks of going off to a far and unknown country with comparative strangers only as his comrades, and he shrinks from enlisting as the pangs of loneliness creep over him. If he had his friends and comrades from the place of his boyhood it would give him comfort when he is on the most serious business of his life.

At present the system of recruiting outside the larger cities, is to enlist, say, a half dozen of men, and ship them off on an early train to a strange city among men they have never known before, and none outside their immediate friends know of their leaving. This method might do if we had conscription, and men had to go, but where we have to educate and inspire men to go it is proving a failure. An opportunity should be given to create the moral and inspiring effect which can only be had by having those noble fellows who are offering their lives for the defence of their country, train for a time in our midst, and when a sufficient number is obtained, to give them a fitting send off to the front. In this way an educative and martial sprit will be created that is so necessary for voluntary recruiting.

Another deterrent incidental to the present system of recruiting is the extremely strict medical examinations that men are required to pass. While we are aware of the inadvisability of enlisting men who can not do a fair day's work, still it is the opinion of the great majority of citizens who interest themselves in the matter, that many men are rejected for minor defects that with proper treatment could be remedied or removed and the men restored to normal condition. We are of the opinion that medical examiners should be allowed to exercise (and should exercise) some diplomacy before rejecting many men that might afterwards prove capable of doing good service.

To remedy the conditions referred to above, which we are of the opinion are such a deterrent to recruiting of men, we would suggest, the following:

That the city and county of Peterborough be allowed to raise a whole battalion complete, and that it be known by the same name as battalions from this district have always borne, namely, "The Peterborough Rangers."

That the city and each village or district in the county be allowed (if possible), and recruited by local men. In this way every man who enlists will feel a pride in his local corps, and be such a recruiting agent as only such can be. We suggest that such a battalion be trained here till it reaches such a state of efficiency that it will be necessary for them to be brigaded in larger encampments.

If this is granted we feel that an interest and a pride of the whole community will be so great that no difficulty will be experienced in obtaining all the men required to form such a battalion, but also men to fill the gaps as they occur. We are of opinion that if the above is carried out that a feeling of patriotism and zeal for the defence of our country will be created in the locality.

We can promise as an organization that if the above changes are made that we will be glad to assist by every means in our power "to do our bit" at home to crush the monster that raps at our door.

To show that in England the last suggestion above named as to the formation of a local battalion, is the key note of their plan of campaign, herewith is attached an advertisement clipped from the London Times.

Signed on behalf of the Peterborough Patriotic Speakers' League.

RICH. B. ROGERS,
President.

Sir George Foster Addresses An Enthusiastic Gathering

Several Thousand People Listen to a Striking Appeal by the Acting Premier of Canada---A Review of the Past Twelve Months---Battle Line Over Which Men Have Wrestled, Fought and Died.

OPENING OF RECRUITING CAMPAIGN

Last night's "monster recruiting meeting" as announced, was in point of attendance and enthusiasm, and patriotic spirit, and in practical results, worthy of the name—it was a magnificent success. The armouries were crowded from wall to wall. The building had been seated, it is said, for four thousand. Every seat was filled, and there was easily another thousand standing in the spaces beyond the fringe of seats. The patriotic spirit was fired in the beginning by the 57th band playing a stirring string of national and patriotic airs, and the enthusiasm was fanned to a brighter blaze when Trooper Molloy with his sightless eyes blinded by a Boer bullet in South Africa fighting for the empire, ascended the platform to do another bit for the same empire; and when Capt. Begy of St .Catharines, invalided home, still bearing the bandages of his Langemarck wounds, followed and when other khaki-clad heroes of the war took their places on the platform. Another impetus to enthusiasm was the splendid singing by Mr. Ed. Hanrahan, of the "Veteran's Sang," and Miss Dorothy Allen's splendid appeal of "Your King and Country Need You." The speeches were to the point, spirited and eloquent. Judge Huycke, who presided, set the key note in a strong speech, whose local colour flashed and inspired. Hon. George E. Foster, the speaker of the evening was, as he always is, at his best. He disclaimed the merit of a set speech, but it was a set speech, and that it set before his hearers in characters of eloquent fire the need of the hour, the peril of the hour, the duty of the hour, and the speeches of Mr. Daniel O'Connell, Trooper Mulloy, Col. Hemming and others brought additional blaze to the heather. The meeting was not all patriotic fireworks and fervour, but it had practical results. During a lull in the speaking a proud piper played through the aisles, and amongst the throng, leading the recruits that had joined before the meeting, and at the invitation of Adjutant McElhiney, others who wished to join were invited to fall in. This was done by twos and threes till within a few minutes 38 new recruits had joined the bag-pipe brigade, offering for active service. The meeting in all respects was a great success and showed how the city is stirred to meet the crisis. There were many ladies amongst the audience as interested and enthusiastic as the men. The presence of a score or more ladies on the platform, representing various local patriotic organizations who have splendidly done their bit and are willing to continue doing it, was not the least impressive and encouraging feature of the "monster recruiting meeting" held last night to singnalize the close of the first year of war, and to give tangible expression to our teeth-set determination to do our share in bringing the victory, for freedom, home and humanity, which with loyal and active cooperation of the empire will surely come—but be it understood and remembered — not without it. Your King and country need you!

JUDGE HUYCKE.

"This is a great night for Peterborough, a great night for Canada, for the British Empire," said His Honour Judge Huycke in opening a brief address as chairman. "This is one of the most inspiring spectacles it has been my good fortune to see. Peterborough has been honoured by many distinguished citizens." His Worship emphasized the splendid attendance of ladies and gentlemen, the ladies in particular. It was an evidence that the hearts of the mothers, the wives, the sweethearts, the sisters are in the right place. This meeting was for the purpose of asking for their assistance to send sons and husbands at the call of the Empire, whither we care not to the Dardanelles, to France or to Flanders. Some of our gallant officers and men have already fallen. Others of our own boys now holding the lines are calling to you saying come and help us. Others, like Heber Rogers, Vivian Fessenden and others are held in Germany. These also call for our help." Judge Huycke made a final appeal to make this the greatest night Peterborough has ever seen. His Honour expressed the pleasure obtained from such an assembly of all thoughts among the citizenship. It was inspiring that Roman Catholic and Protestant clergymen were together on the platform, and that in the crowd were citizens of all shades of political and religious thought.

Trooper (Prof.)) L. W. Molloy.

Trooper Molloy said he was not present to appeal for recruits. He represented the Speakers' Patriotic League which had been organized because it had been found that in some areas recruiting was going sluggishly and that other districts were giving more recruits than their share. It was felt necessary to establish some kind of an organiaztion which would, through its branches, deal with the local needs in each case and enable the central body to direct campaigns were they needed.

Trooper Molloy was appointed organizing secretary for this district. He said that four or five demonstrations such as Peterborough have been arranged; Belleville, Cobourg, Ottawa, Smith's Falls and other towns are to participate in the plans of the Speakers' Patriotic League. The speaker hoped that Peterborough would hear this appeal. "I like the way you do things here; I like the punch you put in it when you go at this work."

SIR GEO. E. FOSTER.

The crowd gave Sir George E. Foster a warm reception. When Canada's Minister of Trade and Commerce rose to speak, the hall was partly filled with fumes that followed in the wake of a local photographer, anxious to secure a couple of flashlight pictures of the notable gathering. Sir George struck a humorous note by remarking that the fumes created by the photographer was probably the nearest thing to asphyxiating gasses that many people in the hall would ever experience. He expressed both pleasure and surprise at the large number who attended the meeting and a few moments later launched into the subject of his address, using terms that left no doubt as to their meaning. The speaker characterized the meeting as being representative of similar meetings that are being held each night throughout the length and breadth of the British Empire as well as in Russia, France, Belgium and Italy.

What We Might Expect.

"What Belgium has suffered in this war, Canada might expect to suffer if the enemy won," said the speaker. "Some tell us that Canada is not aroused, and that only a fringe of the people are concerned over the situation. But let me assure you that the fringe is widening. Hearts are becoming mellow to the call from over the seas. Take up Britain's trail and consider the efforts she is making to finance the war. Do you know what it means? No you don't know, neither does a judge, or a banker, or any other individual. So of the war. It is so vast as to be incomprehensible. It is one year since the great conflict began. Let us picture in our minds what has been accomplished during that time. Twelve months of war has passed, and I give you my word as a man who has followed the struggle consistenly, it has not reached its zenith, much less is it likely to come to an early close. On the west we have several hundred miles of battle front, where men have wrestled, fought, and died, and the gains that have been made, may only be counted in yards and even, inches. The war has not reached the stage where the final effort is in sight which will decide whether tyranny or liberty shall dominate. Then take the Russian line which for the past year has swayed back and forth until to-day the enemy—our enemy—is farther towards Russia than they were twelve months ago. The Russians are brave men. There are none braver. It is a pity that men have had to lay down their lives in thousands mainly because they are poorly equipped to fight against the best equipped military force the world has ever known. But, behind it all, there are one hundred and seventy-five millions of Russians, whose hearts are in the war

TELLS OF CARING FOR RAVAGED BELGIAN WOMEN

Mr. Peter Henshaw, Late of Peterboro' Writes of Use of Big Estate For This Purpose

YET SOME DISBELIEVE

Some citizens refuse to believe the reports of the depredations and worse of the German soldiery. Their mental attitude embraces something of the brotherly trust which Britain placed in the host of Germans who visited and resided in all parts of the Empire. Stories of atrocities are repeated without number, and in spite of their magnitude many persons withhold belief in the worst phases of these accounts.

In this connection a friend of Mr. Peter Henshaw, late tenor soloist in the choir of the Church of the Sacred Heart, wrote recently to a local friend. He is now engaged in making munitions in one of the coast cities in England. He wrote that near the town is a large country estate which has been handed over by the owner to the authorities for hospital purposes. Mr. Henshaw said that it was full to capacity practically all the time, not with wounded soldiers, but with Belgian women and girls who had been the victims of the lust of the German soldierly. In their motherhood they had to be cared for, and at this place they were being received to the number of thirty and forty a week. Many of them had to be closely watched as their condition had driven some of them to the border of insanity.

Fifty More Men Wanted

For the Peterboro' Squadron 8th Mounted Rifles—Will Be Used as a Cavalry Unit

The Peterborough squadron, 8th Mounted Rifles, now stationed at Barriefield, is in need of fifty more men at once to replace men who have gone forward as cavalry. The men that have been selected from the Mounted Rifles to go forward as reinforcements have been equipped each with a revolver and a sword, which indicates the intention of the authorities to use the Mounted Rifles as regular cavalry.

CONTRIBUTE MACHINE GUN.

BERLIN, Ont., Aug. 4.—The City Council of Berlin has contributed a machine gun to the Canadian forces and passed a resolution that the struggle for liberty made by the Allies should be continued to victory.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1915

WE MUST DO OUR SHARE.

We in Canada don't know; don't realize, the wastage and wreckage of war as other countries feel it. Though there is in this country a slowed movement of the general machinery of national activity, things go on very much as usual, in spite of the fact that three thousand miles away there is in progress a desperate struggle in which two or three countries are ravaged by indescribable and unthinkable devastation, and clouded with unimaginable desolation and physical suffering, and despairing agony of mind and spirit. Here in Canada, for whose benefit, and to preserve whose liberties this awful war is waging, things go on as usual, the even current of life in all its relations flows on serenely, only disturbed by a ripple in comparison with the disturbance of life in other countries.

We did not pause to think, how lightly we are touched, by war conditions. In fact we have no war conditions in Canada, only a faint taste of them. How little our life, our progress is impeded, is shown by the fact that during the past year of war, the City of Montreal has had a great increase of population, amounting to 24,583, bringing up the total population of the metropolis of the Dominion to 714,000. We shall be able to appreciate this remarkable growth when we reflect that it is greater than the total population of the City of Peterborough.

This fact shows that as far as disturbance of the routine of national life, Canada has been practically untouched by the war; that is in comparison with what has been suffered and sacrificed by other countries, which are fighting for the preservation of the liberties and privileges of civilization Canada enjoys virtually without impairment. This shows that there is a call to Canada to do more than she is doing. That in the fight for the preservation of our freedom, which is being waged, we should not take the position of accepting the benefit of the sacrifices and struggles of other countries without doing our adequate share.

And now is the time to do our share. The time when help is needed. If there is one sentence of Hon. Geo. E. Foster's ringing speech that should be burned into the hearts of Canadians it is this—"The Empire is in peril"—that means that we, in Canada, as part of the Empire, are in peril, peril of the loss of our liberties—peril of coming under German domination—a calamity whose measure can be estimated only by sacked and ravaged, and outraged Belgium and Poland.

Make no mistake about it. The peril is here, and it can only be averted by every eligible Canadian taking his place in the ranks, and every other Canadian, man and woman, backing him up and doing their bit in their own way.

This recruiting problem is one worth thinking about. It is a challenge to our manhood; a challenge to our spirit of patriotism; it is a challenge to our sense of duty; it is a challenge to our independence of spirit; is a challenge to all that is good and true in our natures; it is finally a challenge to the dearest interest of life, to self-preservation, and the preservation of the life, liberties and happiness of those dearest to us, who without our active help in the firing line and in the reserves, will lose, what, lost, will make life valueless.

RUSSIA ONLY BEGINNING.

Russia is only at her beginning. Her strength is inexhaustible. Behind the army is a complete national unanimity and a ninspiring faith that the empire is fighting for its soul and for a new and fuller life. The Czar warns his people that the war will be long, and that many vicissitudes must inevitably occur, but Russia, equally with Great Britain, France and Italy, will carry on the fight, unperturbed and undaunted, until the enemy is crushed, "for without that peace is impossible." Russia is a country of pity and resignation. Its people accept without a murmer the troubles of the darkness and the night, for their trust that light and comfort will come at last is unshaken. Of all European peoples their faith in the divine direction of the world is the strongest.—London Daily Express.

"WHY ARE YE FEARFUL?"

Germany planned for a short war. The Kaiser was to dine in Paris on August 15. Comparatively she was strongest on the day of the first battle. The things she failed to do in September she cannot possibly hope to do in July. Her enemies now outnumber the legions of "Kultur." In equipment, too, they will, if the British people do their duty, soon have the advantage. Moreover, the qualities that made the retreat from Mons memorable while the world exists, and finally stopped the German advance on the Marne, are still our priceless possessions. The spirit, endurance, and resolution of the Allies will perfect the machine that will break the machine. "Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith?" After all, the Kaiser has not yet dined in Paris! —London Daily Express.

Press on Year of Greatest of Wars

"Fury Increasing"

Baltimore Sun: "The titanic carnival of blood and horror that convulses Europe is now a year old, its fury and madness increasing as the time goes by. Any indication of the outcome is as lacking as at the beginning."

"War's Second Year."

Cleveland Leader: "The war begins its second year with the most powerful nations engaged in the struggle preparing for hard fighting into the future."

"No Rift in Clouds."

Baltimore News: "As for prospects of peace, there is not a rift in the clouds. There has not been even a suggestion from responsible sources indicating that any of the combatants would listen to overtures."

"Germany".

Montgomery Advertiser: "Germany has carried the war into the countries of her enemies. Except for a strip of territory in Alsace held by the French, the fighting is beyond the frontiers of Germany."

"Military Exigencies."

Philadelphia Evening Leader: "For a year Russia has kept the German military brain and sinew occupied. She is long suffering, but the time has come for her allies to help. Military exigencies join with national gratitude to make a diversion in the western theatre imperative."

"France."

South Bend Tribune: "France has shown to the world it is not a decadent nation. Torn, distracted, faction ridden France was the first of the allied Powers to pull itself together. It was the first to form a coalition Cabinet."

"Fall of Warsaw."

Albany Journal: "The fall of Warsaw will greatly stimulate courage and determination throughout Germany, and revive the conviction—if it ever began to fail—that Germany will be ultimately victorious."

THE SITUATION AND THE CALL AFTER A YEAR OF STRENUOUS WAR

To-day, the fourth of August, the British Empire has been a year at war with the violators of Belgium. It has been a year of strain and stress and of effort of a character of which beforehand we could have hardly considered ourselves capable. In a military sense we were not prepared for the sudden swoop of the Teutonic culture, but let us be thankful, in the essentials of character we were prepared. Long centuries had bred in the British peoples a strong sense of fair play, a sturdy hatred of injustice, a courage, a patience, a patriotism which form a grand soil for a fruit of noble deeds. So, when need came, the old lion and his cubs arose and shook themselves and faced the great crisis with hearts firm and undismayed.

Wonderful have been the changes wrought by this war. The evils which have lain in its train are patent to everyone. Death, cruelty, suffering, and loss not to be estimated, are the concomitants of the worship of the War God, and a worthy outcome of Germanys' policy of deceit and violence. But there is another side of which we do well not to lose sight. Maeterlinck says of the Belgian people that they have gained incalculably in depth of character through their sufferings. "An unwonted inspiration, drawn from the secret stores of the race and from the heights of the human heart, has of a sudden come over their life and given them a single soul, made of the same heroic stuff as that of their great king." We all—France, Russia, Serbia, Italy, Britain,—who are struggling and suffering for the liberties of Europe and the world to-day, are conscious of something of this same inspiration. The barriers between class and class, between creed and creed, between party and party have become attenuated. United in suffering we have come to recognize more clearly than ever before the common denominator of our humanty and this realization has not been allowed to evaporate in mere sentiment. Reforms which a year ago hung in the air as impracticable dreams have since become matters of course in legislation. Philanthropic effort has received an impetus and has learned new possibilities. Lives which were formerly given up to pleasure or to money-making have become keyed to a deeper note. It is impossible to think that when peace is restored we shall allow ourselves to drift as carelessly as we did aforetime. Just now, it is true, as we look abroad we see even more clearly than we did a year ago the magnitude of the task we have undertaken.

We, in Canada, have done much for the cause, but as yet have not sounded the depth of sacrifice reached by some of the participants in the struggle. The "Thorny Path of Honour" is ours for the treading. If we are worthy of the traditions of our mingled races and of our common country there is not one of us who should fear the call of duty, though it should mean also a call to greater sacrifice, to danger or to suffering.

B. F. ACKERMAN, SON AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that under the First Part of chapter 79 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, known as "The Companies Act," letters patent have been issued under the seal of the Secretary of State of Canada, bearing date the 7th day of July, 1915, incorporating Benjamin Franklin Ackerman, William Clair Ackerman and Edward Whitla Borbridge, manufacturers, and George Robertson, bookkeeper, of the City of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario; and Jennie Edna Waddell, of the Township of North Monaghan, in the County of Peterborough, in the said Province of Ontario, married woman, for the following purposes, viz.;

(a) To acquire and take over as a going concern the good-will and the undertaking and business in all its departments of the unincorporated firm of B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company, of the City of Peterborough, Ontario, and all and every of the personal assets and liabilities of that firm, wherever situated, together with the real estate standing in the name of the said firm or any member of it, situate in the said City of Peterborough, which is used in the operations of the said firm's undertaking and business, and to give as consideration therefor fully paid shares in the capital stock of this corporate company, and to construct and maintain or alter any buildings or works necessary or convenient for the company's purposes;

(b) To carry on the businesses of makers of and dealers in saddlery, horse harness, horse collars, horse blankets, waterproof horse covers, whips, motor car and carriage strap work, and leather shoes and shoe findings, and in hides, skins and leathers of all kinds, in hardware, plated goods, manufacturers of and dealers in bicycles, tricycles and motor carriages, and makers of and dealers in trunks and travelling bags; in gutta-percha goods, and all things of which rubber and gutta percha are the component parts, and the various materials entering into the manufacture of all such goods;

(c) To manufacture, buy, sell, repair, alter and exchange, let or hire, import or export, from and to all countries, domestic and foreign, and deal in all kinds of articles and things which may be requisite for the purposes of any of the said businesses or commonly supplied or dealt in by persons engaged in any of said businesses, or which may seem capable of being profitably dealt with in any of the said businesses;

(d) To sell, let, develop and dispose of, or otherwise deal with, the above undertakings or all or any part of the property of the said company, upon any terms, with power to accept as the consideration any shares, stocks or obligations of, or interest in any other company engaged in a similar business;

(e) To purchase, lease or otherwise acquire, and to hold, own, use, operate, introduce, sell, assign and convey all trade marks, secret processes, trade names and of inventions, improvements and processes, used in connection with, or secured under any letter patent or otherwise, of Canada or any other country, in relation to any of the said businesses, and to use, exercise, develop, grant licenses in respect of or otherwise turn to account, all such trade marks, patents, letters, concessions, processes and the like, and any such property, rights and information so acquired, and with a view of working and development of the same, which the said corporation may think calculated directly or indirectly to effect these profits in connection with any of the said businesses to be acquired or carried on by the said company;

(f) To do all such things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above object.

The operations of the company to be carried on throughout the Dominion of Canada and elsewhere by the name of "B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company, Limited," with a capital stock of five hundred thousand dollars, divided into 5,000 shares of one hundred dollars each, and the chief place of business of the said company to be at the City of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario.

Dated at the office of the Secretary of State of Canada, this 8th day of July, 1915.

THOMAS MULVEY,
Under Secretary of State.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BRAVES PRIMED ONCE MORE FOR ANOTHER MIRACLE DASH

Reviews of the Doings in the Big Leagues Last Week ---Giants Not Making Progress

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Notwithstanding the fact that twenty-seven games separate Boston and Philadelphia in the American League, compared to eleven and one-half between Philadelphia and Cincinnati in the National, both races are open, uncertain and interesting enough to call for wide and diversified comment. In this year of troubles for the owners such races in the two parent organizations mean a lot to the sport, for through this the "gate" is not alone helped, but the "fans" are kept at fever pitch trying to guess in what city to reserve their world's series seats.

Just at present the National League is commanding the greatest amount of attention, as it seems a foregone conclusion that only Chicago, Boston and Detroit have a chance to finish ahead in the American. And two teams in the National are being watched more closely than the others, these being the Boston Braves and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

On July 1st the Braves were in last place and slumping badly, after only an indifferent start. Here they braced and during the month struck the stride which made of them pennant winners last year and also gasps of astonishment from the critics. They struggled to a record of sixteen games won out of seventeen played up to last Friday, where they were stopped by Cincinnati, who added insult to injury by again winning from the Braves Saturday.

Braves Still in Chase.

The indomitable spirit of the Braves coupled with their winning baseball, makes them stand out as the best team in the league, regardless of the fact that they only are fourth, five games behind the leading Phillies. But during the month of July the Braves crept up four games on the Phillies, and they have more than two months to overcome this five-game lead. If "Bill" James could rid himself of a sore arm, which has made him practically useless for the season, the Braves would find little trouble repeating.

The biggest disappointment to Brooklyn "fans" personally, and to the rest of the league generally, is the failure of the Dodgers to win games away from home. Since leaving Ebbets Field, a week ago, where they enjoyed remarkable speed, they have lost five out of six games, three out of four to Pittsburg and two to Cincinnati.

This inability of the Dodgers to win on the road probably robs them of what chances they had of winning the pennant. It is a remarkable fact that Brooklyn never could do much when away from the quiet of Flatbush, and it seems they are only living up to precedent. If Brooklyn could have made a fair showing on this trip West, many would have figured them a possibility, but their failure so far practically counts them out.

Giants Not Progressive.

The other teams in the league, including Philadelphia out in front at present, are only playing indifferent baseball. The Giants still are unable to progress. Shouldered out of the first division during the last week by Boston and Pittsburg John McGraw's team now in having its hands full from dropping into last place again. The best the team seems able to do is break even in double headers. There is no consistency in either the attack or the pitching, and without this consistency the team cannot be considered a factor.

Recently McGraw became so discouraged with the playing of his outfield that he shifted Fred Merkle from first base to centrefield, benched Fred Snodgrass and placed the young ster Fred Brainard on the initial sack This added some hitting power to the club, but did not make it win any more frequently.

Every one has figured that ultimately the Giants would get into winning stride and begin knocking down obstacles, as they have done in years past, but it will soon be too late for this. When Christopher Mathewson proved he had lost his cunning, and was unable to beat the clubs which once were easy for him, it seems the whole Giant squad felt the effects of it. The failure of "Matty" to show winning form undoubtedly has had its effect on the other men, and it is doubtful if they can shake off this feeling before the season is over.

The Cubs have braced somewhat since reaching home after a disastrous trip through the East, but they are not considered dangerous, as they lack power. And a general disposition of the men on the Cubs to obeject to rulings of Roger Bresnahan, their manager, is robbing the team of efficiency. The Cubs are not championship class.

The Phillies are not travelling at a clip fast enough to win the pennant. They, too, are not consistent. Even Grover Cleveland Alexander is beatable, he having lost his last two starts, losing to St. Louis 3 to 1, and to the Cubs yesterday, 2 to 1. If Alexander fails to win for the Phillies then "Pat" Moran's bubble is bursted.

Trio Out in Front.

The race between the Red and White Sox and Detroit is fast narrowing into a dash which is carrying the three teams so far ahead of the others that they are almost lost. It is going to be a hard fought contest between the three from now on, with any one of them a likely winner. Last week Boston had a two and one-half game lead on Detroit in third place, but since then Detroit has crept up one-half a game, with the White Sox in between these two. Boston is in front, but not far enough away to feel confident of any glory in October.

During the last week Boston has had to face both Chicago and Detroit, and that the club was able to break even with its only contenders proves its ability to cope with danger. Boston has a wonderfully well balanced club but it lacks the spirit of Detroit and the White Sox. Detroit is short on good pitching, but it has the best hitting in their league. Chicago has good pitchers, good hitters and fair fielders, besides loads of confidence, but the club is weak in several places and these weak spots already have cost many games.

During the stay of the Detroit team in New York recently several remarks were heard questioning the honesty of baseball. It was charged by some that the Yankees deliberately threw two games of the three to Detroit, the explanation being that "Bill" Donovan still has a soft place in his heart for his old teammates. These kind of statements usually come from the gambling element, and because the Yankees have co-operated with the police lately in trying to force gambling from the Polo Ground some disgruntled persons originated the above remarks. Nothing could be further from the truth, as every fan knows.

These charges, unfounded as they are, have not done the game nor the Yankees any good. However, this is not the reason for the in and out playing of the Donovanites lately. The team started the season at a fast clip, but few expected it to keep it up to the end. There are too many weak spots. Donovan, wisely, is bolstering the club for next year, his backers spending money freely in the purchase of new players.

Another pertinent point brought out in the recent series with Detroit was that Tyrus Raymond Cobb has a weakness. Known as an average fielder, only, he fell below that standard here. Every hit that went in his general direction he either fumbled or kicked around until it was too late to catch his man. Also his throwing was the poorest of any outfielder to appear here in some time. However, Cobb could have a few more weaknesses and still be worth the salary he gets.

BASEBALL

Frank Baker, Eddie Collins, Grover Alexander and Stuffy McInnis—those are the men the Feds are after and they are going to be obtained if money can do it, according to President James A. Gilmore. He said there were several others whom he refused to name but who, it is understood, are now playing with Pittsburg and Detroit.

Baker is the logical man to lead the new Federal team into New York, it was reported.

Connie Mack's $100,000 infield, for years the talk of the baseball world, has been scattered, never to be brought together again. But while its memory will ever remain green, another mighty quartette of inner gardeners is making considerable noise in baldom and the players who constitute it need show but a slight increase in proficiency and team work to gain a rank equal to that of their famous Philadelphia predecessors. The new "$100,000 infield" is that of the Chicago White Sox, and consists of Jacques Fournier at first base; Eddie Collins at second; Buck Weaver at short, and Russel Blackburne at third.

MAHARAJH'S SON AT FRONT.

Father in Toronto On World-Wide Trip From India.

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—"The spirit of India is very much with Great Britain in this great war," so said Mr. M. Roy, private secretary of his Highness the Maharajh of Kapurthala, when interviewed this afternoon at the King Edward Hotel. Mr. Roy was speaking for his Highness, who was very busy. "The son of the Maharajh is at the front in France, and many troops from Kapurthala are doing their part for Britain in East Africa," he continued. When asked as to what special consideration India would expect at the conclusion of the war, Mr. Roy naively remarked, "other palces will expect and receive consideration, and no doubt India will be the same." Referring to his Highness' impressions of the West, he said: "He liked San Francisco and the part of the States he saw, but he likes Canada better. It is more like our own country, an agricultural country. He was greatly impressed with the signs of prosperity everywhere."

MOTHER'S BOY.

Speaking at St. Mary's, Ont., Sunday, Judge Barron uttered the following pregnant words: "The mother who lesson in fear, and his failure in life lesson in fear, an dhis failure in life will be her everlasting reproach; and the father who cannot, despite all resistance, command and control his boy when his country calls him, is unworthy of citizenship in that country." This applies to too many parents who would counsel a course for their sons that will cause the latter to regret bitterly for the rest of their lives.—Hamilton Citizen.

(3) Col. Roosevelt off sight seeing at Lake.

COL. "TEDDY" ROOSEVELT, ex-President of the United States, recently passed through Canada over the Canadian Pacific, visiting the famous resorts in the Canadian Rockies and singing his praises of such delightful places as Banff, Lake Louise, Glacier, and the celebrated Yoho Valley. At the former place Col. Roosevelt stayed at the Banff Springs Hotel, depicted in the picture, one of the finest hostelries of the Canadian Pacific, and it was here that these photographs were taken. "Teddy" renewed his acquaintance with his old friend, Mr. James Brewster, the millionaire ranchman and guide, and completed the arrangements for the big game hunt through the Canadian Rockies, which has been planned for the fall for his son.

as they never were in the Japanese war.

The Hand-writing on the Wall.

"The time will come when the enemy will be thrust back," said the speaker. It may be a week, a month, or it may run into years. If you want to know what one year of war has meant ask devastated Belgium. Some of you have lost a son or a loved one and you weep and sorrow, but oh, mother, wife, and others, when you weep think of the millions of sisters in Belgium who have suffered even greater tribulations and never flinched. We have felt some of the effects of this war, but what an infinitely small amount when you take into consideration what other countries have suffered. Take Servia, for instance, which has not only been stricken by war, but by disease as well. Ponder over the plight of [illegible] and, which has been ravaged three times by the German hordes, and thank God our sorrows have been so few. If we had been so situated that the enemy should have spent their effort, first on Canada, what would have been our plight. This fair Canada would, if war had been so ordered, been elongated. Belgium and Poland, so far as devastation and destruction, is concerned.

Reviewing the work of the Colonial troops, Sir Geo. Foster said: "The Australian knows as well as he knows his mother and father, that unless Germany is stayed, their country would be recorded in the book of the Germans, and it would be God curse Australia as well as Canada and Great Britain.

Government Owned Manhood.

Continuing, Sir George Foster said: "The British Empire is in peril, and in dire peril. Make no mistake, he added. I will leave that with you. I don't know that any words of mine could add any force to it. Canada is a part of the British Empire, as well as Scotland, Ireland, and the colonies across the sea. Once let the Germans gain control of the seaport towns adjacent to England and the task of the British Empire will be well nigh impossible. You talk a great deal about your freedom and liberty. That liberty and freedom is about as well founded in Canada as it is any other community in the wide world. What does it mean? In Germany and Austria, the Governments own every able-bodied citizen. Canada does not own you, you own Canada. Here, not over twenty-five thousand people have ever had any training in the art of warfare. In the country of our enemy every man has been fitted and trained for war. No mother in Germany can put her arm around her boy and say he is mine, I won't let him go to war. Such excuses have no effect. The Government owns the manhood of the country. The call is made and every man must go forth and fight. In Canada and throughout the British Empire every man owns himself as far as this war is concerned. The young man may ignore the call and your calculating business man may say I have three sons whom I intend shall devote their energies to the business and there is no law that can force them to go to war. We depend on the absolute will of each individual. It is possible for a man to sit and watch the enemy come almost to our doors and absolutely refuse to go.

The Price of Freedom.

Are we worthy of the liberty which we claim as ours? said the speaker, with considerable emphasis. "If you want to be a free citizen of a free country you have got to make up your minds to fight for it. No verdict is being more watched for to-day than the verdict of the British Empire. Shall we live up to the true traditions of British freedom or ignore our duty to that freedom and the flag that symbolises it. I am not saying what might happen in the future. The nation is greater and infinitely more precious than the individual who makes up a unit of that nation. If we fail to measure up to the standard required of us, force may have to be used. I will leave that with you added the speaker.

Mr. Foster related a number of inspiring incidents connected with the land and sea operations at the Dardanelles, in which the Australians and New Zealanders played such a conspicuous part. He also told the story of the women in Quebec who, when a mortgage amounting to two thousand dollars fell due, contributed it to the Government with the request that it be used to represent her on the firing line.

A Great Privilege.

The speaker referred to Mr. R. M. Dennistoun and his two sons, former residents of Peterborough, who are now serving their country at the front. The speaker claimed acquaintance with Peterborough's former citizens. "So long as we have men of that type," said Sir George, "Canada may feel assured that her freedom and liberty will ever remain inviolate. The country doesn't force you to go and fight. It just appeals to you. That's a question you must settle before your own God. One man was heard to remark that he would fight when the Germans got as far as Canada. Yet one of the greatest privileges of this war is that we can fight those battles away from home, without having a single shot fired in the British Empire. If you wait for the war to get as far as Canada you might as well sit down, for the battle is over.

Your Duty at Home.

The speaker also stopped to remark that there was work to be done at home as well as at the front. The British Empire represents millions of people, and yet only a mere fringe is actually engaged in warfare. We must first be sure we are needed at home before we assume that position. "I am afraid," said Sir George, there are many people throughout the length and breadth of the land who have not yet touched the first drop of sacrifice. We can do much at home. I, myself, cannot go. The medical officer would not let me. But I want to do all I can here for the cause for which we are fighting. If everybody would do their share the soldiers at the front would be living like kings. If you decide that you are needed at home there are two things you must assure yourself of, and one is that you are needed at home worse than at the front, and the other, when you stay at home, see that you do not shirk your duty.

In conclusion, Sir George Foster paid a glowing tribute to the work undertaken by the women of this country, and also the generous contributions of machine guns and other equipment that has been donated from time to time. "This conflict is for the suppression of tyranny," he said. Let us hope that our forces will soon be crowned with victory, and that this colossal struggle may preserve to us for centuries to come, the doctrine of right, truth and justice.

Capt. Begy of the 4th Battalion.

Captain Begy of the 4th Battalion, First Canadian Contingent, was enthusiastically received. The greeting of the crowd was an ovation expressing the people's pride in the heroes of Langemarck, represented by Capt. Begy.

"I really don't know how to begin to thank you for the cordial way you have treated me," he said. "When I return to the front I shall tell the men that the people of Canada appreciate what they have done."

Captain Begy's head wore the bandage necessitated by the injury he received at Langemarck, where he lost his left eye. "I am not an entire stranger to Peterborough. I was here with the 19th Battalion at the opening of these Armouries."

Capt. Begy said that the Canadian people should be proud that the men of their first contingent had been able to hold and check the Germans rushing with the full weight of thirty years of military preparations. "One event I shall always look back upon with pride is the day I placed my name on the list for Overseas Service, and if I am permitted to return to the front I shall do so."

Capt. Begy made a stirring appeal to the young men of physical fitness to enlist at once and thereby give their assistance to the men who have been doing their bit.

Must Do More.

In a few further remarks Judge Huycke said that Peterborough had done well, recruiting, in the past, but it must do better. To the City and County Councils he urged them to do better in the support they have given. The stirring words, demanding sacrifices, uttered by Sir George Foster, he commended to those who had not yet appreciated the present call. Citizens of means and money must wake up and do their bit, especially those who have felt none of the demands that have been uttered.

Col. Hemming.

"Men and more men," was Col. Hemming's appeal. The public's donation of machine guns had been most generous. They had been given by those who were unable to go to the front; but guns were absolutely useless unless there were the men to work them. Col. Hemming hoped that Peterborough would raise a regiment during the next ten days. He made a special appeal to the women. One of the greatest influences the militia had to contend against was that of mothers and wives preventing the young men from coming forward and offering themselves to their country. He could not say whether Peterborough's offer to enlist a battalion would be accepted or not, but he would not hesitate to recommend the application when it was forwarded.

Thanks to Speakers.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell moved a vote of thanks to Sir George Foster, Col. Hemming and the other speakers for their attendance and assistance to the local branch of the Speakers' Patriotic League.

CURSE OF CENTURIES FOR KAISER'S COUNCILS

Special to The Examiner:

MILAN, via Paris, Aug. 4.—Signor Guglielmo Ferrero, the Italian historian, examining in the Secolo the first year of the war, says that it is "the greatest tragedy ever experienced by one generation." He attributes it to insensate pride, helped by the weakness of governments, by the powerlessness of parties, by the lightness of public opinion, and by the fatuity of the intellectual classes.

"On the council of generals, which, presided over by Emperor William, decreed at Potsdam a universal war on the evening of July 29," he says, "will rest implacable execration throughout the centuries and condemnation in history. Those who within an hour took the most inhuman decision recorded in history were able to do so because in the mind of the public the sense of proportion had been extinguished."

Signor Ferrero thinks that after the catastrophe it will be impossible to reconstruct new order unless "our generation adopts virtues so far neglected, namely, those of humility, firmness, simplicity, and a reasonable judgment of life and things.

"This is our duty," he says in closing, "to the memory of the millions of men who have fallen in this terrible year while defending Europe and her liberty against German aggression."

Commenting on Emperor William's address to the German people issued last Saturday, the Secolo says:

"To the Emperor's oaths of innocence Europe and the whole civilised world already have replied that he is not telling the truth. His troops have so far been conquering because of their superior preparations. He accuses Europe of preparing ten years for war while Germany for thirty years sharpened her arms for aggression."

HE WHO DID NOT GO; A TALE WITH A MORAL

The following tale appeared in the Youth's Companion of Boston, Mass:

He had the bearing of a veteran and was of the proper age. Instinctively the younger man had thought of him as one who had fought on one side or the other in the Civil War. The younger man was a keen student of American history, and never neglected an opportunity to get first-hand information from a veteran.

Under his guidance, the conversation came round to the Peninsular campaign. The tactics of the generals and their personalities were discussed. At first the older man merely answered questions, but later he took the lead in the conversation himself. The knowledge of the history of the war that he showed was remarkable. He quoted from the memoirs of the commanders. He criticised the conclusions of historians. He could speak with knowledge of every campaign and almost every battle.

Finally he took out his watch. "I can spare you only a few moments longer," he said. "I have an engagement, and I make it a rule not to be late."

The younger man expressed his gratitude for the brilliant talk he had listened to. Then he said:

"You have not told me of your own part in the war. What was your regiment? What rank did you hold? What battles did you see?"

He regretted the questions the instant they were out of his mouth, for the older man's face grew suddenly sad. He answered almost in a whisper.

"I took no part in it at all. It has been my grief for fifty years. I ought to have gone. I was of an age to go. Men about me went, but I—I stayed away. I was not a coward; it was because they said I was too rich to go. I had money and have it still. I was an heir, and I was told that it was my duty to stay and look after the property. Curse the property! It was an awful thing to waste my chance to be a man, for the sake of property. I have had other chances that I hope I have not wasted, but that was the great chance of my youth, and I wasted that. You are young, and most of your chances are before you. I hope you will never see your country in a real war, but there are wars of peace. Get into one of them. A man is not a man when he is fighting for what he believes. Find a war and fight in it."

RECEIPTS ARE $823,211.40.

Special War Tax on Insurance Companies and Railways.

OTTAWA, Aug. 4.—Receipts to date on account of the Dominion special war tax on insurance companies and railways amount to a total of $823,211.40. Of this amount chartered banks had contributed $248,500.78 for the quarter ending March 31st; and $248,284.29 for the quarter ended June 30. Railways have contributed about $145,000 for the quarter ended June 30th, that being the first date on which the Act requires returns to be made by railways.

LACK OF AIRSHIPS HANDICAPS THE RUSSIAN ARMY

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—That Russia has committed the same mistake that Germany committed in the early part of the Belgian campaign, and that the Russian defeats are the result of lack of aeroplanes on the Russian side for reconnoitring, controlling artillery fire and preventing the German air scouts from mapping the Russian possessions, is shown by reports which have reached the governors of the Aero Club of America.

These reports, which have been received from reliable sources since the beginning of the war, show how the German forces, possessing a large number of aeroplanes and experienced aviators, have had a tremendous advantage over their foe. In a summary prepared from reliable reports by Mr. Henry Woodhouse, governor of the club and managing editor of Flying, the following facts are given:

"The success of the Germans has been due entirely to:

"1. Failure on the part of the Russian army chiefs to recognize the possibilities of employing aeroplanes to good advantage for reconnoitring, directing artillery fire; co-operating in the work of cavalry and infantry, and in protecting the Russian lines from the prying eyes of the efficient air scouts, who, unchallenged, not only mapped, but obtain detailed photographic plans of the Russian positions and distribution of forces:

"2. Failure on the part of the Russian army chiefs to recognize the necessity of shifting of front and of making strategical moves to offset the advantage gained by the enemy through having more and superior aeroplanes and aviators.

"3. The small number of Russian aviators and their lack of experience, due to not having manoeuvred with the troops before the war.

"4. Lack of aeroplanes to co-operate with Russian artillery in directing gun fire.

"5. Lack of sufficient numbers of aeroplanes and equipment at the disposal of the Russian aviators, which would have enabled them to operate with maximum efficiency."

MOVING FROM RIGA.

Banks and Educational Institutions Being Transferred Inland.

Riga, Aug. 4.—In obedience to orders for the removal of Government institutions, the State Bank already has been transferred from Riga to Tula, to the south of Moscow. The other banks are being removed, and the educational institutions are being mainly transferred to Dorpat, 157 miles north-east of Riga.

Owing to the exodus of families, the shipping agencies are overworked and are refusing further orders for the shipment of household goods.

The departure of working men from the city has created an emergency which the Russian Government is meeting by establishing temporary employment agencies here and in interior places.

OTONABEE TOWNSHIP AND BELL TELEPHONE SYSTEMS CONNECTED

A telephone connection has recently been made which will be of benefit and advantage to merchants, business men and citizens of Peterborough and the residents of a large part of Otonabee, the largest and, perhaps, richest township in the county.

Otonabee has, with the characteristic enterprise of the township, established a telephone system, known as the Otonabee Mutual Telephone System, which serves the greater portion of the eastern part of the township—with about 200 subscribers and with the head office and central exchange at Keene.

The important telephone connection referred to is represented by the fact that on August 1st the Otonabee Telephone system was officially connected with the Bell Telephone system at Peterborough, the point at which the Otonabee system will secure local connection with any subscriber of the Bell system in Peterborough and long distance with any point covered by the Bell system. This will, as already pointed out, be a mutual advantage to the patrons of the township system, and the merchants, business men and citizens of Peterborough; and for the small toll of ten cents city people can have conversational connection with the two hundred (and more for the line is still being extended)) subscribers of the Otonabee system, reaching to almost every point in the township; and vice versa the latter are, with the same toll, brought into conversational relation with all of the patrons of the Bell system in Peterborough and vicinity.

Berlin Streets Are Toned With the Colours of War

LONDON, Aug. 4.—(Berlin despatch to the Chronicle).— The Vorwaerts prints an article on "Berlin Streets in War Time," which must have had difficulty passing the censor, so much at variance is it with the accepted theory that life in Berlin moves without alteration.

The Socialist organ pictures the military life of the streets. Berlin's garrison was large before the war, but soldiers were not seen in great numbers. Now the majority of males in the streets are in uniform. The Vorwaerts says civilians are in a considerable minority, pedestrians being mostly wounded men on furlough. Among them one sees many boyish faces and many gray heads.

A father walks with his son, both in uniform and both wounded. The wounded generally move in groups with a Red Cross sister. A frequent sight is the father of a family, home on a furlough, with his wife and children.

Business, like the life of the streets is toned with the colours of war. From the cinemas to the chocolate shops it is all war, war, war. Many shops have been closed because their tenants have failed to make both ends meet. In such cases the stocks remain inside, untouched, as creditors can do nothing with them.

Some trades have suffered more severely than others. The Vorwaerts mentions that Wirtschaft, which combines a public house and restaurant, and which in ordinary times is one of the most profitable of businesses. These establishments in great numbers have closed their doors. The bars are cobwebbed and dusty glasses stand in the corners with dead vies. The landlords have all gone to the war, and their patrons no longer drink great tankards of beer. Loud "Prosits' have given place to a strange silence. Dumb and deserted are the places of mirth, and great placards on the dirty windows announce that the restaurant is to let.

The Vorwaerts points out as a sign of the times the appearance of women in callings for which they were regarded as wholly unsuitable —tram or omnibus conductors, ticket collectors, letter carriers, doorkeepers, attendants in factories. Not only are the Berliners getting used to female waiters, but also to female head waiters.

The Socialist newspaper declares that the war is bringing up problems of so difficult a character that no one ventures to offer any solution.

BRIDGEPORT BUSY WITH THE PRODUCTION OF ARMS AND MUNITIONS

Mr. John McGrath, formerly of Harvey street, has returned to the city after spending a year in Bridgeport, Conn. Mr. McGrath states that the city is practically given over to the manufacture of arms and ammunition for the allies. The Bridgeport Arms Company has now under contract buildings for arms manufacture to the amount of twelve million dollars, and the Lake Submarine Works, whose patent for the submarine was stolen and is now used by Germany, are active on work for the United States government. Practically the whole population of the city, 130,000 is devoted directly or indirectly to the production of arms and munitions or works incidental and auxiliary to the production of death dealing machinery. Mr. McGrath states that popular sympathy for the allies has been very greatly intensified by the sinking of the Lusitania, and the majority of the people are in favour of the United States taking decisive action in preventing the murder of its citizens by submarine pirates. Mr. McGrath will not be long expatriated. He will come back to Peterborough to end his days.

SUCCESS FOR TROOPS FROM ANTIPODES—Official reports say the Australasian troops landed on Gallipoli northeast of the Achi Baba ridge have gained the crest of the ridge which they were attacking. It is thought the ridge referred to is Sari Bahr which is of great value.

PETERBOROUGH BOY WRITES A GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF THE FIGHTING AROUND YPRES

Was Assigned to the Duties of a Bomb Thrower---Trench Was Filled With Dead and Wounded---Canadians Take Care of a Wounded German Officer While Under Fire

BELGIUM, July 12,—I promised to write you some time of my experiences at Ypres. At that time I was a bomb thrower and was not with my own battalion. We were billeted in an old barn behind the French lines and to the left or west of our brigade headquarters. We were about 700 yards from the famous woods that the 16th and 10th charged.

Things had been very quiet. On a Thursday afternoon, April 22nd, I believe about five o'clock, we noticed a great yellow haze hanging over the French lines at least a mile and a half ahead of us. We supposed that one side or the other was using a great deal of lyddite. In a short time German shells began to drop around us, so as a precaution our officer ordered us back one-third of a mile to a reserve trench with dug outs. At the time the move was only temporary, so we took only rifles and ammunition. Luckily I took my water bottle. We had not been there more than half an hour when the Turcos began coming back—a few at first, and then in droves. They got into the trench with us and filled it chucked full. Some of them did not stop there but kept right back to Ypres and beyond.

Gas First Used

An amusing incident is told of an engineer who when he met any of them gave them a clout with his shovel and started them back to the firing line. At the time we thought them great cowards, but I know better now. It was the first time that gas had been used and they must have been terrorised. Where we were, we could smell the gas a little. We realised by now that something was seriously wrong. We were ordered over to headquarters for orders, about one-quarter of a mile. We lay in an open field for a little while, and were then ordered to dig ourselves in several hundred yards in front of headquarters behind a hedge. Some engineers were with us. We got busy; a lot of stray bullets were flying around, and soon had the mud flying.

In about a half an hour some artillery men came tearing down the road. They were from the territorial battery, 475, that the Germans captured in the wood. They said the Germans were only 700 yards away, and still coming. Things looked blue. Here we were, a handful of bomb throwers and engineers. We got orders and opened fire at 700 yards, but the Huns didn't advance any farther. It was now dark and we were keeping a careful look-out. About 11 p.m., I judge, the word was passed up the line that a bunch of bomb throwers had been detailed from the other end of the line to take part in a charge, and that the 10th and 16th were to pull off in front of us. In a little while the German fire opened. Such a hail of bullets that whistled over our heads! We were dug in and of course were safe. But those boys certainly had something to face. Soon the wounded began crawling back and my chum and I helped to take back about fifteen to the dressing station.

A Baptism of Blood

I thought such a sight might be too much for me and was surprised how well I got along. The first fellow I tied up had a fearful hole in his leg. We learned that the Germans had been driven back through the wood, and that our boys had then retired through the woods to straighten the line, and had dug in at the near edge of the wood, leaving scouts in the wood. Before the Germans were driven back I believe some of them got into our old billet, because some of the things were strewn about. I never saw my stuff again.

About three a.m., a bunch of us were ordered out with a fresh supply of bombs to help the 16th. We had a good half mile to go. The Germans opened fire on us but we got there safely. We dug ourselves in with the 16th. When daylight came the shrapnel came with it. Our trench wasn't very good, but we got down into it, and lay on top of the bombs. A chap beside me was hit fair in the back. We tied him up and my chum carried him out. I took over their bombs. In a few minutes I was ordered 200 yards farther up the trench. I took all the bombs I could stagger under. I found the place where I was wanted to be right out in the open at the end of the wood where no trench had been dug, a gap of some yards. Seven or eight dead and wounded were lying in the gap. One fellow called to me, "Don't come out here—the place is marked. I daren't move an inch." However I slowly crawled out, dragging the bombs as best I could. I got out along side of him and it took me over two hours to dig myself down one foot. I lay flat on my face, tearing the mud out with my hands till they were cut and bleeding. After I got a little hollow that my body could settle into, I did the rest with my entrenching tool. I stayed there till nightfall.

Consideration For a German

Some yards farther down the boys had a wounded German officer. They did everything they could to make him comfortable, but he was peevish all the time. One fellow risked his life to get him some water. As it got a bit dark, we completed the bit of trench. A fellow was lying in it badly wounded. He was afraid the boys would walk over him going up and down at night. I dug a little side trench for him, about seven feet long and one and one-half feet deep, and dragged him into it. I could not help thinking it might be the poor fellow's grave. (Several weeks afterwards I learned the fellow got out safely.)

Another chap and I, a French-Canadian, doubled round to the left flank, fully one-third of a mile. That brought us out on the other side of the wood. At the edge of the wood the trench took a sharp turn. We had been running along the open back of trench and as we took the turn, the Germans opened up on us. It wasn't so dark that they couldn't see us. They were less than 100 yards away, too. We kept agoing a bit till the firing got so hot we considered discretion the better part of valor, and jumped into the trench. There wasn't a man in it holding a rifle. It was literally floored with dead and wounded. We had to go back 15 yards before we found an able-bodied man. He told us we had been heading straight for the Germans. They were in the same trench with about 75 yards of unoccupied trench between them and us. On our way through the trench I stepped on a fellow, thinking he was dead, but was only wounded. He gave an awful groan.

"A Superb Piece of Bluff"

We stayed on that flank all night, expecting a German attack any time. Had they made a determined effort we would have been annihilated. But they didn't come. It was a superb piece of bluff. Behind us was the open field, covered with dead and wounded of the previous night's charge. Under cover of darkness our stretcher bearers came up, but the Germans sent up flares, and fired on them. There was no room in the trench to throw bombs properly, so I got out in the open and dug a place for myself. It took me a couple of hours as there was no chance to stand up and dig with a shovel.

By that time I was desperately hungry—had nothing all day but a few bites of bread. I saw a dead German a few yards out in front, so I crawled out and rifled his haversack. He had a tin of cooked beef and vegetables, something like our own, and some biscuit. I made a good feed and then chucked some into the trench for the other boys. Afterwards I had a fearful stomach ache—it must have been the cold German stew.

The Germans kept up an irregular fire all night and got quite a few of our boys, particularly at the turn of the trench where we were. It must have been around 2 a.m. I was sitting in my little trench, two bombs ready, and the rest under me, feeling about tired out. Someone must have sounded an alarm for our boys opened up rapid fire. At the same time a bomb dropped within three feet of me. I jumped up in a hurry and threw three grenades into the woods as fast as I could get rid of them. In a few minutes, however, everything quieted down. After daylight we looked back up our trench and found that there were five of us left back to the turn. Beyond that we could see quite a few. I'm thankful that we came through that night.

Five in a Trench

About 9 a.m. (Saturday) we noticed the men moving out of the trench back of the turn. No word had been sent to us and we wondered what was up. The five of us held a little council of war and decided to stick awhile. I am glad we did. In about half an hour relief came up. They had come in broad daylight. To get out we had to run back over the open more than 200 yards, the Huns sniping at us all the way. The only cover was a "dead furrow" about a foot deep. A fellow would make a dash of 20 yards or so, and then flop face down in the mud. They got some of us. After that we had the cover of hedges and low lying ground till we got to headquarters, where we manned a reserve trench.

$13.05 Raised For the Examiner Tobacco Fund

At a Masquerade Ball at Viamede on Tuesday Evening Last—The Prize Winners

VIAMEDE, Aug. 5.—On Tuesday evening the first masquerade ball of the season was held; and although a very wet night the hall was well filled with masqueraders and spectators. A number of very pretty costumes were in evidence and made it very difficult for the judges to award the prizes. The prizes were awarded as follows: First, Miss Audrey Morine, of Toronto, as 'Folly'; second, Miss Smith of Toronto as "The Allies," and Miss Irene Thompson of Mount Julian as Canada, (tie); third, Miss Hazel Lannin, as Japanese lady.

Among the costumes deserving special mention were: Mrs. Morine of Toronto, as "Tipperary Mary," Miss Lothum, of Akron, Ohio, as "Dutch Girl," Miss Banning of Akron, Ohio, as "Mammy."

The proceeds which amounted to $13.05, is to be devoted to the Examiner Overseas Tobacco Fund for the soldiers.

As a great many of the cottagers were disappointed at not being present, it has been decided to repeat the masquerade on Friday evening, the charge being 10 cents for masqueraders and 25 cents for spectators, so if it is a fine night, there should be a large attendance to swell the receipts for such a desirable object.

The following is the list of those in costume: Miss Hazel Lannin of Rochester, 'Japanese Lady,' Mrs. Morine of Toronto, 'Tipperary Mary,' Miss Lannin of Rochester, 'Hamlet,' Mrs. Sweet of Rochester, 'Hamlet's Ghost,' Mrs. Hall of Rochester, 'The Shade of the Kaiser,' Mrs. (Col.) Denison, Toronto, 'Sister Mary,' Miss Brown of Quebec, 'Father Paul,' Miss Stella Shearer of Keene, 'Sam Jones,' Miss Irene Thompson, Mt. Julian, 'Canada,' Miss Margaret Denison, Toronto, 'Bob Roberts,' Miss Doris Score, Toronto, 'Red Riding Hood,' Miss C. Wilbur and Mrs. R. Wilbur, Rochester, 'Twins,' Miss Lothman, Akran, O., 'Dutch Girl,' Miss A. G. Jenny, Toronto, 'Japanese Lady,' Miss Banning, Akron, O., 'Mammy,' Miss Edna Knox, Toronto, 'Dolly Varden,' Miss E. Four More Years of War Belief of Allies, Says Mr. W. E. Corey

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Mr. William Ellis Corey, formerly president of the United States Steel Corporation, was a passenger on board the steamship Espanage, of the French line, which arrived yesterday from Bordeaux. He has been for four months at his home (the Villa Genise) twelve miles south east of Paris. Mr. Corey has turned his villa over to the French army for use as a convalescent hospital.

"The Allies are optimistic," said Mr. Corey, "but they are preparing for three or four years of war. The war is decidedly one of chemistry and mechanics. The Allies are eager for both the moral and financial support of the United States, but are more interested in the financial end. It would not be a good thing for the United States to get into the conflict. Unpreparedness is the reason. It would take this country two years to get into shape to combat a first-class Power. We might lick Portugal or Liberia or Spain, but this would be an effort. I have no use for a man who wants peace at any price, nor for the man who wants war at any cost. 'Peace with dignity' is the right slogan.

"Russia must reorganize her army. There is no doubt of her resources, but they have got a bad start. It is generally recognized and I believe that the Grand Duke Nicholas is the greatest military leader in Europe."

King and Queen Attend Service At St. Paul's

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The British Empire united yesterday in prayerful observance of the anniversary of the declaration of war against Germany. In virtually every city and town in the British Isles, as well as in all parts of the Dominions and Colonies overseas, the day was one of intercession and prayer, with meetings of common aim and purpose to ask the aid of the Almighty for ultimate victory in a cause which all British peoples consider just and righteous.

The chief ceremony was held in London, with services attended by King George and Queen Mary at noon in St. Paul's Cathedral. The King and Queen drove to the Cathedral in an open landau, without State ceremonial, though cheering crowds lined the thoroughfares to view them in passing.

The cathedral was thrown open to all-comers, and before a vast throng the Most Rev. Randall T. Davidson the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Right Rev. Arthur E. Ingram, the Bishop of London, and their assistants, conducted a brief and simple service, concluding with the hymn "Through the Night of Darkest Hour" and the National Anthem.

A notable feature of the gathering was the presence of a great number of wounded soldiers and sailors, who were given a preference of seats at the King's request. His Majesty wore the khaki uniform of a General Staff Officer.

Patriotic meetings were held everywhere throughout the afternoon to reaffirm Great Britain's intention to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion.

BRITISH STEAMER TORPEDOED.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The 1,600-ton British steamer Costello was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine. Captain Penwill and seven of the crew landed to-day.

MESSAGE OF APPRECIATION.

OTTAWA, Aug. 5.—King George has sent to the Duke of Connaught the following message to Canadian people in reply to a cable sent yesterday pledging all Canadians' support in prosecution of war.

"It is great pleasure to receive from you and the Canadian people such an expression of devotion and of loyal determination to bring this war to a successful conclusion as contained in your telegram. These sentiments were forcibly endorsed by Sir Robert Borden's eloquent speech yesterday."—(Signed) George.

BRITISH SUBMARINES ACTIVE.

BRUSA, Asiatic Turkey, Aug. 5.—Daring English submarine commanders, by burrowing beneath the thickly mined waters of the Dardanelles and eluding the Turkish fleet, have created a reign of terror from the western entrance to the Sea of Marmora and to the very gates of Constantinople. Exactly how many Turkish ships have been sent to the bottom by British submersibles probably is known only to the Turkish Ministry of Marine. The undersea craft have been particularly successful in striking at Turkish transports in the Sea of Marmora, where transports are steaming to and from the Gallipoli Peninsula. The greatest precautions are taken against English submarines. Armed soldiers line the rails with orders to shoot at everything appearing on the surface. The police are confident that the British submarines have a base somewhere in the Sea of Marmora, and that some one of a few hundred Englishmen remaining in Constantinople is supplying this base with petrol. A few days ago a boat from Brusa to Constantinople had actually been stopped and boarded by officers from a British submarine within a few miles of the Islam capital. They were looking for Turkish soldiers. They found none, but took off what food supplies there were aboard, paying for them in English gold, and saluting courteously as they left the ship.

FATE OF AN EXPERT NEEDLE MAKER.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 5.—Private Horace Gee, who became known throughout England as "the indespensable man," as the result of a debate in Parliament, has been killed in action in the Dardanelles. After he had enlisted, the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce petitioned Parliament to release him from military service, on the ground that his services as an expert maker of needles were indespensable to the boot trade of Central England. The matter was brought up in Parliament and the Government was compelled to defend its refusal to release Gee, stating that the shortage of needles had not so far affected the rate of production of army boots.

VAST NEEDS OF THE BRITISH NAVY.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The labour of a million men will be required to insure the predominance of the British fleet at sea, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Reginald McKenna, declared at a meeting at Preston. The British Government, he said, was spending upon the navy nearly half a million pounds ($2,500,000) daily in excess of what was spent in peace times.

900 TURKISH VESSELS SUNK.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 5.—Russian destroyers in the Black Sea continue their devastating work upon the flotilla carrying supplies for Constantinople. Altogether over 900 enemy vessels have been burnt or sunk since the beginning of the war, among the number being several large steamers and a dozen sailing ships of a thousand tons each. Most of the vessels were, of course, small coasting craft, which counted on their insignificance to escape the vigilance of the Russian scout boats. Some were sunk at sea, but the majority were burnt at anchor or within easy reach of shore. Care has been taken also to destroy all boat building yards along the coast so that this small vessel trade upon which Constantinople is largely dependent for the necessaries of life may safely be regarded as having been extinguished.

INQUIRY HAS BEEN ORDERED

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Aug. 5. — Inquiry has been ordered into the wreck of the steamer Alexandria which ran ashore on the Scarboro bluffs near Toronto on Monday night. It will be conducted by Capt. Demers, Dominion Wreck Commissioner, who is at present at Quebec, but will go to Toronto shortly.

Sergt. Hart Says Men Have Opportunities To Advance Themselves

Sergt. F. H. Hart, who is assisting in the recruiting during the present campaign, and who headed the recruiting parade at the Armouries, last night, enlisted as a private in January last. He was employed in the C. G. E. and had no previous military experience. When the men were given a chance to prepare themselves for the non-commissioned ranks he accepted, and his later studies, together with the mechanical experience obtained at his work, fitted him for the position of armorer's sergeant. He was one of four men trained from the 39th Battalion, and he states that there are other mechanics who could prepare themselves for the same work. Sergt. Hart will likely remain in the city while the present recruiting work continues.

Vital Statistics For the Month

Death Rate Shows a Substantial Decrease

The vital statistics for the month of July show a substantial decrease in both the marriage and death rate. The month of July is usually considered to be a banner month for the knight of the bow and arrow, yet last month, only sixteen marriages were recorded. The death rate for the month was only one-half of that for the corresponding month of last year.

Following are the figures:

	1914	1915
Births	41	45
Marriages	23	16
Deaths	26	13

Building Permits.

July, 1915—12 permits, total valuation $7,060.

July, 1914—10 permits, total valuation $60,555.

MOUNTED RIFLES GET 22 RECRUITS

Price of the License Was Out of Reach

Therefore the Citizens May Be Deprived of the Privilege of Purchasing Patent Device—Many Drunks After Rainy Weather

Magistrate Dumble does not think much of the Mail and Empire as a legal adviser. John F. Carter of Toronto, would have saved a part of $10 if he had consulted a lawyer instead of a Toronto journal. Mr. Carter came before His Worship in the police court this morning on a charge of peddling in the city without a license. He offered as his excuse that he had consulted the Mail and Empire with regard to whether a license was necessary in this district, and says he was informed that it was not.

"It serves your right for getting your law there," said the Magistrate.

Mr. Carter proceeded to demonstrate his wares to the Magistrate, a patent gas plate, and it looked for a time as if he was in a fair way to making a sale. The Magistrate at least decided that the gas plate was a good thing, and when Carter said that he could not afford to spend $50 on a license, and would have therefore to discontinue the sale in this county. His Worship thought that it was too bad that the people here would be deprived of the chance to purchase a gas plate. Carter was accordingly directed to see the city clerk with regard to getting a license for a shorter term than a year. The matter would have to come before the Finance Committee however and it is doubtful if that body will see the advantage of making any exception to the rule for the benefit of Mr. Carter.

The rainy weather made a busy time for the policemen. "Rainy Day" drunks were in abundance at the police court this morning.

Herbert Fulwood pleaded guilty to having been drunk in a public place, and parted with $2 with the option of ten days in jail.

William Warrington was in the same condition at an early hour this morning and met a like fate when he pleaded guilty before the Magistrate.

John Fowler was on the "Indian" list and got drunk. It cost him the sum of $10 for his "spree."

Len Douglas supplied John Fowler with the "firewater" and was assessed $25, to be paid forthwith.

LEAVES FOR TORONTO.

August Peterson had one arm and one leg off. He came here from Ottawa a few days ago and explained to His Worship that he was selling shoe laces for a living.

"We have a whole staff of these men about the city," remarked the magistrate.

Peterson claims to have had his leg and arm injured in a logging camp. He will be allowed to get out of the city. He says he is goinng to Toronto.

"There is more room for the like of you in Toronto," was the parting rejoinder to August from the Bench.

WANDERER RETURNS.

"It seems to me I know this man. Have I not seen him before?—why it is Isaac Dormer." This was the salute to the jovial Isaac, erstwhile farm laborer and a frequent inmate of Castle Nesbitt, from the magisterial chair.

Isaac explained that he had returned to the city on Monday from Ennismore and would have returned to the township yesterday but it rained. As usual when Isaac had a little spare money and nothing else to do, he imbibed. There was a man in Ennismore he wanted to go to work for, but this story had been offered so often that the chief was a little skeptical.

"Did you ever work for this man before?" asked Magistrate Dumble.

"No," piped Mr. Dormer.

"That explains it," returned His Worship.

"If he will get out, Your Worship, let him get out," said Chief Thompson.

Dormer will be allowed to go to Ennismore again to work but he is threatened with a term of six months in the Reformatory for Ontario if he again comes before Magistrate Dumble.

John Sweeney was given several chances to make good but he could not do it. He was charged this morning with vagrancy and was sent to the Reformatory for Ontario for six months.

The "Empire" Seperator Sales Contest

Mr. Fred J. Doughty of This City Wins First Prize for the Second Time

Mr. F. J. Doughty, of this city, one of the 18 Canadian sale-men for the Empire Cream Separator Co., in Canada, has been successful, for the second time, in capturing the first prize offered to the salesman who secured the largest number of sales during the month of July. Yesterday Mr. Doughty received a cheque for $50 from the Company, being the first prize money, the number of his points being 412. Mr. Doughty's friends will be pleased to hear of his splendid record, which is all the more interesting when it is known that up to July 12th he had not scored a single point, and that the day after the contest he placed another order with his Company for over $700.

Christened.

THE GERMAN ATROCITIES AS OFFICIALLY REPORTED BY BRYCE COMMISSION

Aerschot and District

Period I. (August 19th and following Days.)

Aerschot.

The German army entered Aerschot quite early in the morning. Workmen going to work were seized and taken hostages.

The Germans, apparently already irritated, proceeded to make a search for the priests and threatened to burn the convent if the priests should happen to be found there. One priest was accused of inciting the inhabitants to fire on the troops, and when he denied it, the Burgomaster was blamed by the officer. The priest then showed the officer the notices on the walls, signed by the Burgomaster, warning the inhabitants not to intervene in hostilities.

Monsieur Tielmans, the Burgomaster, was then ordered by some German officers to address the crowd and tell them to hand in any weapons which they might have in their possession at the Town Hall, and to warn them that anyone who was found with weapons would be killed. As a matter of fact, the arms in the possession of civilians had already been collected at the beginning of the war. The Burgomaster's speech resulted in the delivery of one gun which had been used for pigeon shooting. The hostages were then released. Throughout the day the town was looted by the soldiers. Many shop windows were broken and the contents of the shop fronts ransacked.

A shot was fired about 7 o'clock in the evening, by which time many of the soldiers were drunk. The Germans were not of one mind as to the direction from which the shot proceeded. Some said it came from a jeweller's shop, and some said it came from other houses. No one was hit by this shot, but thereafter German soldiers began to fire in various directions at people in the streets.

It is said that a German general or colonel was killed at the Burgomaster's house. As far as the committee have been able to ascertain, the identity of the officer has never been revealed. The German version of the story is that he was killed by the fifteen-year-old son of the Burgomaster; the committee, however, is satisfied by the evidence of several independent witnesses that some German officers were standing at the window of the Burgomaster's house, that a large body of German troops were in the square, that some of these soldiers were drunk and let off their rifles, that in the volley one of the officers standing at the window of the Burgomaster's house fell, that at the time of the accident the wife and son of the Burgomaster nor his son were in the least degree responsible for the occurrence which served as a pretext for their subsequent execution, and for firing and sack of the town.

This account agrees substantially with that given in a letter, written by Mme. Teilmans, the Burgomaster's wife, which is printed in the fifth report of the Belgian Commission. The letter is as follows:

"This is how it happened. About 4 in the afternoon my husband was giving cigars to the sentinels stationed at the door. I saw that the general and his aides-de-camp were looking at us from the balcony, and told him to come indoors. Just then I looked towards the Grand Place, where more than 2,000 Germans were encamped, and distinctly saw two columns of smoke followed by a fusilade, the Germans were firing on the houses, and forcing their way into them. My husband, children, servant, and myself had just time to dash into the staircase leading to the cellar. The Germans were firing into the passages of the houses. After a few minutes of indescribable horror, one of the General's aides-de-camp came down and said: 'The General is dead, where is the Burgomaster?' My husband said to me, 'This will be serious for me.' As he went forward, I said to the aides-de-camp, 'You can see for yourself, sir, that my husband did not fire. 'That makes no difference,' he said, 'he is responsible.' My husband was taken off. My son, who was at my side, took us into another cellar. The same aides-de-camp came and dragged him out, and made him walk in front of him, kicking him as he went. The poor boy could hardly walk. That morning when they came to the town the Germans had fired through the windows of the houses, and a bullet had come into the room where my son was, and he had been wounded in the calf by a ricochet. After my husband and son was gone, I was dragged all through the house by Germans, with their revolvers levelled at my head. I was compelled to see their dead General. Then my daughter and I were thrown into the street without cloaks or anything. We were massed in the Grand Place, surrounded by a cordon of soldiers, and compelled to witness the destruction of our beloved town. And then by the hideous light of the fire I saw them for the last time, about one in the morning, my husband and my boy tied together. My brother-in-law was behind them. They were being led out to execution."

The houses were set on fire with apparatus, while people were dragged from their houses already burning, and some were shot in the streets. Many civilians were marched to a field on the road to Louvain and kept there all night. Meanwhile many of the inhabitants were collected in the square. By this time very many of the troops were drunk. On the following day a number of civilians were shot under the orders of an officer, together with the Burgomaster, his brother and his son. Of this incident, which is spoken to by many witnesses, a clear account is given: "German "soldiers came and took hold of me "and every other man they could see, "and eventually there were about 60 "of us, including some of (i.e., eighty "years of age), and they made us ac"company them. . . . All the prison"ers had to walk with their hands "above their heads. We were then "stopped and made to stand in a line, "and an officer, a big fat man who "had a blueish uniform . . . came "along the line and picked out the "Burgomaster, his brother, and his "son, and some men who had been "employed under the red cross. In all "ten men were picked out . . . the "remainder were made to turn their "back upon the ten. I then heard "some shots fired, and I and the oth"er men turned round and we saw "all the ten men, including the Bur"gomaster, were lying on the ground." This incident is spoken to by other witnesses also; some of the depositions appear in the appendix.

Gelrode.

On the same day, at Gelrode, a small village close to Aerschot, 25 civilians were imprisoned in the church; seven were taken out by 15 German soldiers in charge of an officer just outside. One of the seven tried to run away, whereupon all the six who remained behind alive were shot. This was on the night of the 19th of August. No provocation whatever had been given. The men in question had been searched, and no arms had been found upon them. Here, as at Aerschot, precautions had been taken previously to secure the delivery up of all arms in the hands of civilians. Some of the survivors were compelled to dig graves for the seven. At a later date the corpses were disinterred and reburied in consecrated ground. The marks of the bullets in the brick wall against which the six were shot were then still visible. On the same day a woman was shot by some German soldiers as she was walking home. This was done at a distance of 300 ft. and for no apparent reason. An account of a murder by officer at Campenhout is given in a latter part of this report, and depositions relating to Rotselaer, Tremeloo, and Hespelaer will be found in the appendix. The committee is specially impressed by the character of the outrages committed in the smaller villages. Many of these are exceptionally shocking, and cannot be regarded as contemplated or prescribed by the responsible commanders of the troops by whom they were committed. The inference, however, which we draw from these occurrences is that when once troops have encouraged in a career of terrorism the more savage and brutal natures, of whom there are some in every large army, are liable to run to wild excess, more particularly in these regions where they are least subject to observation and control.

Period II, Aerschot and district, will appear in the Evening Examiner August 6th, when quite a catalogue of crimes of a most revolting nature will be brought to light.

WASHING HAIR BRUSHES.

The necessary frequent washing of hairbrushes in order to keep them clean, softens the bristles. To prevent this dip them in a strong solution of alum water immediately after washing. This alum water can be bottled and kept on hand for several occasions—it is clean, to rthe brushes are thoroughly washed before being dipped into it.

Good Health.
The governments of both Canada and the United States have stringent regulations regarding food adulterations. Makers are now forbidden to label an article "pure" that is not just as represented.
It was the HONEST manufacturer that worked to have these laws passed.
When a manufacturer of food products advertises his goods as "pure," under the present Canadian laws, they are really pure; you can depend upon that. It will pay you to insist upon the advertised brands. If you accept substitutes you CANNOT be sure.

Will Contest Dacia Decision

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The announcement from Paris that a French prize court had confirmed the seizure of the American steamer Dacia as a fair prize found the State Department preparing to protest the decision, which carries with it forfeiture of the vessel. It is planned to make this a test case of the right of a neutral country to grant registry to a belligerent-owned merchant ship.

The Dacia's cotton cargo is not involved, the French Government having purchased the cotton through a special appropriation.

Early Closing Order Received

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—Official notice from the Provincial License Board to have all bars in Kingston hotels closed at 7 p.m. from Aug. 9th till November 30th, was received this morning, and hotelmen are protesting, stating that revenue will suffer greatly as a result. Temperance people are not satisfied. They claim that early closing will not benefit. Soldiers are off parade at 4:30 each afternoon, and have plenty time to get liquor. Arrangements are made for meetings to protest against the action of the Provincial Board.

OAK HALL PATRIOTIC WINDOW ATTRACTIVE

The north window of the Oak Hall store has been used by Mr. George Wesley for a fine patriotic display that has been worked out with close attention to detail. While indicating the various styles in men's clothing, it also quietly emphasizes that khaki is the fashionable vogue for Canadian men at the present time. The flags of all the allies are shown, with draped Union Jacks predominating. Altogether it is one of the neatest and most effective window displays of this character seen along the street.

GIVES MACHINE GUN TO 2ND BATT.

Mr. E. F. Mason Sending Communication Containing This Offer to Military Heads

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Mason are forwarding to the military authorities at Ottawa their offer of a machine gun, preferably to be sent to the 2nd Battalion in Flanders. Unable to secure anyone to satisfactorily take over his business, or to send anyone, Mr. Mason accepted the only means of assisting the men at the front by sending something of material usefulness. Consequently Mr. Mason waited upon Col. Walker at the Armouries this morning to take up the matter of communicating with the proper military authorities. The machine gun will be of the latest type, and Mr. Mason is willing to pay all extra charges to have it sent to the battalion at once if, as it is generally believed, it is most needed by them. Apparently, from the report, Mr. Mason has endeavoured to obtain some person whom he could with confidence place in charge of his business, but no one would accept the responsibility, although willing to work in the ordinary way. Hence his gift of a machine gun in his representative.

NOVICES RECEIVED THE HOLY HABIT

Interesting Ceremony at St. Joseph's Mount This Morning

At St. Joseph's Mount, this morning eleven novices received the Holy Habit. Retreat began on July 28th, directed by Rev. Father Kehoe, of St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto. At the close of the retreat the ceremony of the Holy Habit of the Order took place.

Mass was celebrated by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, assisted by Very Rev. Dean McColl, as Deacon, Rev. Father McCauley, as Sub-Deacon, and Rev. Father F. J. O'Sullivan as Master of Ceremonies. The other clergy in the sanctuary were Right Rev. Father Monsignor Casey, Rev. Father Monaghen, North Bay, Ont.; Rev. Father Kennedy, C. S. S., Texas; Rev. Father J. O'Brien, Rev. Father Maher, Rev. Father McCarthy Rev. Father McGinnity, and Rev. Father Leonard.

At the conclusion of the Mass a very eloquent sermon was preached by Rev. Father Kehoe, director of the retreat. He dwelt upon the dignity and reward of the religious life, and welcomed the young novices into the large body of workers for the Church.

The novices were received by the Bishop according to the formula of the congregation. They then left the Chapel to exchange their white robes for the black habit of the order, during which time the choir sang the beautiful Profession Hymn "Go Ye Forth Daughters of Zion." On their return the Bishop spoke a few words of welcome and encouragement on the life they had undertaken.

The following are those who received the Holy Habit: Sister Mary Isadore, Sister Mary Carmel, Sister Mary Avila, Sister Mary St. Anthony, Sister Mary St. Boniface, Sister Mary Frances, Sister Mary Terisa, Sister Mary St. Rita, Sister Mary Teresita, Sister Mary Colette, and Sister Mary Victorine.

76 Members Have Enlisted

Y. M. C. A. Contribution to the Firing Line—"Y" Notes

A mid-summer rally for young men will be held in the parlours Sunday next, at 4 o'clock. Evangelist Sharpe will speak, and the Stringer Sisters will render evangelistic songs.

Every young man should be present and enjoy this special occasion.

The plunge is popular with the members of the Boys' Department who have their swims every afternoon.

While there have been some delays in the matter of asking for tenders, the proposed changes to the building will be started soon. We trust that our property committee will pass upon the plans and specifications and present same at a meeting of the directors to be held next week.

The tennis courts have been in good condition this year and are in daily use.

The Y.M.C.A. list of members who have been accepted for the front now numbers seventy-six. Our caretaker, Mr. James, is very anxious to go with the boys, but is held down by a game knee. However, no recruiting officer is giving more constant attention to securing boys for the front than Mr. James. Mr. James says: "I have stood on the coast in Dover on a clear day and plainly seen the white chalk hills of Calais." No wonder the Germans want to place their big guns in Calais, but she won't, for we will not let her."

When we re-finish our flag pole in the near future, it will not be for a Kultur flag, even the juniors, the Women's Auxiliary and the Mothers' Club will fight first.

By the way, we have not got a Union Jack suitable for the flag pole, as we have worn out the old one. Who will make the "Y" a present of a flag during the enlisting campaign?

24 Recruits Who Recently Joined

List of the Men Who Volunteered During the Past Three or Four Days for the Infantry Branch

Among the recent recruits for the infantry passed by Major (Dr.) Eastwood, during the past few days, are the following:

Franklin R. Tamblin, 56 Victoria Avenue.
Walter Young of the Dominion Bank.
John T. James, 488 George Street.
Emile Baumer, 567 George Street.
John Gough, Millbrook.
Edward Wm. Payne, 215 Carlisle Avenue.
Joseph Vollans, 470 Reid Street.
Harold Wood, 110 Murray Street.
Stanley McCabe, 206 Perry Street.
Sidney McCabe, 206 Perry Street.
Fred Dunkley, Morrow Street.
Wm. Jones, 561 Patterson Street.
Stanley Ballard, 60 Murray Street.
Harold White, North Monaghan.
Oscar McNeeley, 471 Rubidge street.

Edward Cooney, 340 Aylmer Street.
Fred C. Grey, 356 London Street.
G. Clifford Langford, 224 Rubidge Street.
Wm Silcock, 247 Aylmer Street.
George H. Houghton, Orpington Road, North Monaghan.
Wilfred Griffin, 257 Stewart Street.
Jos. Watson, 677 Division Street.

RECRUITING NOTES

Mr. George Grange, caretaker of the Armouries, estimated last night's crowd at 7,000.

The new infantry recruits are wearing a big red band on their left sleeves being the word "enlisted." There was quite a gathering of these men at the Armouries this afternoon; their first drill will be held tomorrow morning under the instruction of Sergt. Hart. The red bands will be the distinctive touch until more uniforms are received.

The officers of the Speakers' Patriotic League have engaged as recruiting headquarters, apart from the work at the armouries, the old Commercial Hotel at the corner of Brock and Hunter streets. It is expected that the officers will project their work from this centre which will be suitably equipped.

The boys who got through to-day all know each other by this time, and there is a marked reminiscence of the recruiting for the 1st contingent a little later than this time a year ago.

The men are certainly proud of their uniforms or distinctive armlets.

Private Stan McCabe regaled his new comrades in arms this afternoon to "When You Wore a Tulip" and all the other new songs, at the Armouries. They were taking a last pleasure out of the piano used last night.

WEDDING BELLS

MENZIES—McGREGOR.

A quiet wedding was celebrated yesterday at the George Street Methodist Church parsonage when Mr. Thos. Menzies and Miss Matilda McGregor, of Peterborough, were united in the Holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Annis.

BIRTH.

New York Stocks

"It takes money and nerve to make money in these war stocks," remarked Benjamin Block, of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Finley, Barrell and Co. "And let me tell you it takes a great deal more nerve than money."

World consumption of cotton in the season ended July 31, according to H. G. Hester, secretary of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, amounted to 14,341,000 bales, as compared with 14,541,000 bales in the preceding year. American consumption was at a record rate, Northern mills using 2,-018,000 bales, an increase of 47,000, and Southern mills 3,163,000, an increase of 1,160,000. Visible supply at end of the year was 5,39,000 bales.

Siege Warfare Along the Whole Front of Broken Line of Trenches

French Authority Explains Impossibility of Great Advances Over Territory Checked by Square Metre for Artillery and Where Assault is Met in Concrete Subterranean Works Armoured and Casemated.

STOP BEST PREPARED TRENCH ATTACK

Special Cable to The Examiner

PARIS, Aug. 6.—An explanation why so little progress is being made in the French and Belgian war zones, so far as actual ground gaining is concerned is found in the statement from unquestionable authority, in which the almost insurmountable difficulties of the present struggle are set forth.

"During the last six months," says this authority, "from the North Sea to the Swiss Mountains there has been veritable siege warfare along the length of the broken line of trenches. In this warfare all strategic manoeuvres are absent, because manoeuvres are impossible on ground where every square meter is marked and swept by artillery fire. The only alternative is a frontal attack. Such an attack is smashed to pieces in one part or another against the formidable organizations of defence in which all the resources of art and science have been employed by the two adversaries.

"In concrete, subterranean works, armoured and casemated, flanked with rapid firers and mortars and linked to one another by marvellously concealed communicating trenches, which are protected by the fire of heavy batteries, dwell the infantry abundantly provided with rifles and hand grenades. To take possession of one of these works it is first necessary to dismantle these trenches and destroy the material which they shelter. This is the artillery' task.

"No one before the war could have imagined the vast amount of shells required. Several thousand shells fired during a few hours on a restricted space announce an attack for which this preparation is being made.

"But no matter how numerous the heavy guns or how well directed their fire, it often happens that the preparation has been insufficient. One or two rapid firers mow down the troops who climb from the trenches ready for the charge, and after suffering heavy sacrifices the attacking party arrive at the first line of trenches of the enemy. The opposing artillery, with a literal wall of fire, effectively prevents any reinforcements from advancing to their support.

"They must fortify the captured trenches, being subjected the while to a much more accurate bombardment, as the enemy knows the exact range of their former positions.

"Such offensive movements could not be multiplied nor prolonged indefinitely, as much on account of the moral and physical effort which they demand of the men as on account of the losses which they involve. Neither can such offensives be improvised. Before beginning an attack large quantities of material and projectiles must be gathered in one place previously appointed by the commander, advanced fortifications dug, and the ground minutely studied.

"If, despite these difficulties, the French army renews an offensive at the price of a bloody sacrifice, it is with the conscientious mission of holding large enemy forces on the western front. By the Marne victory it stopped the invasion and ruined the first German plan, which was, first, to shatter France and return then against Russia.

"By the victory of the Yser, with the aid of the allied armies closing the line of defence, it effectively prevented the enemy from getting a foothold in Pas De Calais.

"By continuous offensive actions from February to July in Champagne, the Argonne and Artois, it demoralized approximately two million men and captured an enormous amount of material. Without allowing the enemy an instant's respite it forced the German general staff to utilize on the western front reserves in barracks and arsenals.

"It would be a serious mistake to measure our effort by the ground conquered. The demoralization and wearing down of the German army is the real goal.

"We have attained this goal, since it has been proved that during these six months the enemy has suffered heavy losses, and taking everything into consideration he can only remove from our front eight per cent. of his total effectives.

BATTLES ON WESTERN FRONT.

"The great battles on the western front were fought in Champagne during the months of February and March, between the Meuse and the Moselle during the month of April, and in Artois during May and June.

"In Champagne we have taken the enemy's defences for a depth of from two to seven kilometers (from one and one-third to four and one-third miles), which repeated and heavy counter attacks have not been able to recapture. Between four and five German army corps have suffered heavy losses, two regiments of the guard being almost destroyed. On the captured ground nearly two thousand German dead were counted. We took 2,000 prisoners, rapid fire guns and a large number of trench cannon.

"Between the Meuse and the Moselle we now occupy the Eparges Crater, which was very strongly fortified. There, two Bavarian divisions, having received orders to hold at all costs, left heaps of bodies.

"To this great success must be added the success in the Bois d'Ailly and the Bois Le Prette, which the Germans call 'Bois de la Mort.'

"In Artois more than 8,000 prisoners, cannon of all calibres, a hundred quick firers and bomb throwers fell into our hands.

"Along a front of ten kilometers (more than six miles) we have advanced from two to four kilometers and captured the villages of Ablain-St. Nazaire, Carency and Nenville St. Vaast, transformed into fortress by our adversaries, who brought up to stem our victorious offensive sixteen divisions, one company being reduced to four men.

"Besides these three principal actions operations of less importance permitted us to take at Toutvent 1,200 metres of trenches and at Quennevieres 1,500 metres.

"The capture of Vauquois, in the Argonne, and Metzeral and Hartmanns-Weiler, in the Fecht Valley in Alsace, constituted brilliant victories for our troops, judging from the desperate character of the fighting. The amount of munitions expended and the number of forces engaged in those engagements were veritable battles. Their preparation and realization represent large sacrifices.

TRENCH LIFE CONTINUAL BATTLE.

But even when no engagements take place the life of the troops in the trenches is a continual battle. The first line of infantry, only a few metres distant from the enemy, enjoys not a single minute of quietude. It is under the constant menace of grenades, bursting shrapnel, bombs from mine throwers, and there is a continual fear of subterranean mines.

"The infantrymen must remain continually on the alert—occasionally in the smoke of asphyxiating bombs—hold himself ready at every moment to repulse an attack, repair fortifications, remove obstructions that have fallen into the trenches and live in the continued presence of death. Such a life demands continual activity on the part of the officers, calmness on the part of the men, patience and bravery at all times.

"The French army has gained from its long sojourn in the trenches magnificent endurance. It has lost nothing of its eagerness and confidence. Its faith in the offensive remains intact. Its morale is the admiration of those who command it. This morale is the best gauge of final victory, by which our territory will be liberated, Europe freed and peace re-established."

German Spy Aboard Canadian Transport

Disguised as Nun and Shared Cabin of Girl Who Found Him Shaving

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—How a German spy, disguised as a nun, was aboard a sea mate of a Canadian transport, after he had escaped a steerage watch on the suspecting English girl, was told in a letter received here to-day by friends of Lottie Cameron, son of Sir Donald Cameron, former Governor of Manitoba.

"We were taking an young English girl home," said the letter, "and the boat was crowded. The only accommodation for the second officers was built the stateroom of a sweet-faced nun.

"The third night out our friend woke up and saw the nun crouched before a small mirror shaving.

It all depends upon the quality of the material used, the skill and interest of the workmen, and the intentions of the man behind.

We frankly admit that ours is not the largest Optical Establishment in Ontario.

But we do maintain that, with our thoroughly modern equipped shop and with well paid workmen personally interested in its welfare, and working under the supervision of Mr. Fowler, we get better results at less cost to the customer from our parlors than do the larger shops.

Guaranteed quality, better prices and all round better service—that is what you are assured at Fowler's Optical Parlors.

in at a steep slope. Now the edge o' the bank is a level line, all on one side is land, all on the other side is water. One step takes you in knee deep, two steps takes you in up to the shoulders. You could wade back even from there, but one more step takes you in over your head, and then you can't get out unless some one helps you, as friend Lute here can tell you and you don't believe it.

"If you're goin' slow when you hit a pool why, knee deep is as far as you're likely to go, but if you're speedin' at all, you're mighty likely to go in over your head."

She kept tryin' to interrupt me but I had words to say and so just kept a-talkin' my score. "When a young feller is hungry for adventure, he generally goes at it fast, and then if he gets started to ridin' with gunpowder, it's mighty easy for him to trip over into holdin' up trains and takin' a steamboat in a while, and into the pond he goes. Now, this is where all right, but it's water-wrong, and he's all worth savin' if you can get him to shore.

"On the other hand, if he starts out sneakin' and spyin' and scalin', why, he hasn't fallen into water at all but into nickle-lined, and even if you get him out he won't be worth savin'. Your son is just a good boy as he ever was, and he's only made one mistake, but a mighty big one, and all you've got to do is to tell him to come home and tell the truth and he'll be all right."

Then I stopped in. At me, the worst I had done was to break out in a cold sweat—perspiration it was called at the time—and I'd been up a whole night, but that was natural enough, and all the time I'd been talking to her I'd been thinking of Jim and Blood and the chance I'd have to see the Bar 20 boys once more. So I told her where Lute stood, and finally I was ready to start. Jim helped Clover bloom and then stopped off at Lute Steele's ranch. He had once said that I was cock-a-doodle-do up your mind yet, what you're goin' to do?"

"Yep," says he. "I'm goin' to Mexico."

"Now, now, you don't like me as well as you used to," says she, "or you'd be a-comin' back to Texas with me."

"Where you goin' now?" says he.

"Down to the Panhandle," says I. He had once said that I was cock-a-doodle-do up your mind yet, what you're goin' to do?"

"Yep," says he. "I'm goin' to Mexico."

"Now, now, you don't like me as well as you used to," says she, "or you'd be a-comin' back to Texas with me."

THE COTTON CONTROVERSY

Special to The Examiner

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—While cotton growers and other experts interested are urging President Wilson to protect the foreign trade in cotton, the majority of newspapers in the United States seem to believe that Britain's attitude is not as unfriendly as expected and that no serious difficulty will be experienced in the matter.

STOP THE MISERY OF INDIGESTION

A Temperance Remedy That Ends Soreness, Belching, Heaviness, Heartburn and Dizziness.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been successful in the treatment of indigestion, that is, hundreds of testimonials received from grateful people who have used it for that purpose, prove that it is a powerful remedy for that disease.

It is not a cure-all, but acts directly upon the digestive organs, helping them into activity and causing the digestive juices to thoroughly incorporate the food you eat, ample nourishment is made, the stomach rests, and indigestion, with its weak, nervous feelings, headaches, bad blood, etc., disappears. Pure, rich blood is made by this medicine, which is carried through the system, and every organ is fed on Medical Discovery, and you will have no more indigestion.

It is an old, tried friend. Get it to-day, start to take it to-day and before another day has passed the impurities in the blood will begin to leave your body through the eliminating organs, and in a few days you will know by your steadier nerves, firmer step, clearer mind and brighter eyes and clearer skin that the pure blood is passing out, and new, rich, pure blood is filling your veins and arteries.

The same good blood will cause pimples, acne, eczema and all skin eruptions to dry up and disappear. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the helpful remedy that nearly everyone needs. It contains no alcohol or narcotics of any kind. It cleanses the blood and carries it through which the blood flows, to be excreted. Get it at any medicine dealer in liquid or tablet form.—Adv.

Dr. Pierce's medicines are manufactured in Canada at the world's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ont.

Dr. Pierce's 1000 page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," is sent free on receipt of 5 cents or stamps to pay cost of mailing and Entry. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

OUR DUTY TO THE BLIND

How to Rid the Skin of Objectionable Hairs

Veils to Beauty

A simple method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required. Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water; apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone.

Seized With Paralysis Could Not Walk

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, rendering unable to walk and unable to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hodgkins tells in the letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anne's, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was hopeless to do anything, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was enough well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon I. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have serious headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the power by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Lights.

Mr Pickadilly came home from his club one morning about 2 o'clock. He entered his happy home, crept up the stairs softly so as not to awaken his spouse, then felt for the switch to turn on the electric light. He could not find it and in the darkness stumbled over a chair.

"What's that?" came a voice from the bed.

"Where in the deuce are the lights in this house?" snarled Pickadilly, trying in his bluff to put a bold face on the matter.

"Lights!" cried Mrs. Pickadilly scathingly. "Pull up the blinds!"—Judge.

The Earliest Artillery.

We think the eighteen inch artillery as distinctly modern. Yet the first cannon ever taken into the field were of that caliber. A crude mortar was fired at the battle of Crecy, fought in 1346. The early cannon balls were chiseled from stone, and the projectile, which fits the ancient mortar, is made of solid granite. Two powerful men could scarcely lift it. These ancient projectiles remained in use for a surprisingly long time, for it is recorded that in 1807 a British man of war engaged against the Turks had her main mast severed by a 700 pound stone shot from a Turkish battery.—American Boy.

KNOW THYSELF.

It is of dangerous consequence to represent to man how near he is to the level of beasts without showing him at the same time his greatness. It is likewise dangerous to let him see his greatness without his meanness. It is more dangerous yet to leave him ignorant of either, but very beneficial that he should be made sensible of both.—Pascal.

When Doctors Disagree.

"I am seventy today," said Mr Stivergray, "but still hale and hearty and naturally desirous of living as long as I can. If there were any known, definite way by which life could be greatly extended I think I should have the grit or the common sense, or both, to follow that course.

But as far as my knowledge goes there is no such absolutely definite course to follow. The people who live to be very old, say 95, 100, 105 and around those figures, appear to have led all sorts of lives."—New York Sun.

Breaking Up "Chatter."

The famous painter Fusell had a great contempt for chatter. One afternoon a party of friends paid a visit to his studio, and after a few moments spent in looking at the pictures they seated themselves and proceeded to indulge in a long and purposeless talk. At last, in one of the slight pauses, Fusell said earnestly, "I had pork for dinner today."

"Why, my dear Mr. Fusell," exclaimed one of the startled group, "what an extremely odd remark!"

"Is it?" said the painter ingenuously. "Why, isn't it as interesting and important as anything that has been said for the last hour?"

A Cruel Joke.

Oswald, a witty and original Parisian, had a mania for practical joking. He was very amusing to his friends, but when his talents were exerted to avenge some wrong there was more bitterness than fun in his wit. One evening when a man who had not treated him politely gave a reception he revenged himself cruelly. The man was slightly deformed. All the hunchbacks of Paris, 500 in number, presented themselves at his reception. They had received notices from Oswald that if they should go to this address on this evening they would learn of a legacy which had been left them.

Telling Eggs.

The problem of telling eggs is not an easy one by any means. Very few of us know how to do it properly. On the other hand, there are those who think they should not be told at all, be: that is old fashioned nonsense, inspired entirely by false modesty. It is safe to say that eggs should be told at as early an age as possible consistent with their temperament. If allowed to go too long there is grave danger that the egg will become bad, and when an egg becomes bad it is hopeless. The world is full of bad eggs which might have been saved if they had been told in time.—Lippincott's.

The Aged and Infirm One.

The Haldane family has always been noted in England for its famous walkers, and the present head of the family tells this story of one of his ancestors.

This old gentleman, having been prayed for by a clergyman as "thine aged and infirm servant," immediately suggested a little walk with his surprised clerical friend. The latter consented, and the "aged and infirm" Mr. Haldane took him for such a tremendously long walk that when the clergyman returned utterly exhausted, he fell asleep and could only with difficulty be awakened to conduct a religious service.—London M. A. P.

APPEARANCES.

Never be influenced by external appearance in forming your judgment of a person's worth. This is an important rule, for many a noble spirit is covered by habiliments of poverty, while not infrequently a showy exterior conceals a villain of the basest kind.

The Psychology of Practice.

The question of short versus long periods of practice in training the human muscles for any particular kind of work is obviously one having far-reaching application. Some interesting experiments on this subject have been carried out by Dr. K. S. Lashley of Johns Hopkins university. Acquisition of skill in archery was selected as the subject of observation. Twenty untrained persons were divided into three groups. One group shot five arrows with the English longbow per day; another twenty shots per day and the third forty shots. The result showed conclusively that the group shooting only five times a day improved in accuracy with less expenditure of time in practice than was required by either of the other groups for the same amount of improvement. A report on the experiments says: "The relatively greater efficiency of short periods of practice continuing for many days is in accordance with the results of the study of animals and of speech habits in man and indicates that in training to muscular feats, in both animals and men, the length of practice periods required is usually too great for maximum efficiency."—Philadelphia Record.

The City of Pola.

Since the Austrians made the city of Pola their chief base in 1848 they have accomplished wonders there. It is claimed that with the assistance of submarines and aircraft Pola is virtually impregnable. Its commodious harbor, almost land locked, has been enlarged so that it easily contains the entire Austrian fleet. It is divided into two basins by a chain of small islands. The entrance is strongly defended, and an extensive system of fortifications on the hills inclosing the harbor insures complete protection. There is a good roadstead in the large channel of Fasana, which separates the mainland from the Brionian islands. The marine arsenal of Pola is a vast establishment with all the requisites for a large fleet. Artillery laboratories and powder magazines are situated on the north shore, and behind the arsenal is San Policarpo, with huge barracks and hospitals.—Argonaut.

Byron's Famous Swim.

Byron was cruising up the Dardanelles in a British warship, the Salsette, when he accomplished his famous swim from Abydos to Sestos, the distance (a little over four miles) being covered in seventy minutes. "You will smile at this exploit," the poet wrote to R. C. Dallas in a letter describing the swim, "but as it made an ancient immortal I see no reason why a modern may not be permitted to boast of it, particularly as I had no mistress to comfort me at landing."

According to Hobhouse, his traveling companion, Byron "had previously made a more perilous but less celebrated passage, for I recollect that when we were in Portugal he swam from Old Lisbon to Belem castle and, having to contend with a tide and countercurrent, the wind blowing freshly, was but little less than two hours in crossing the river."—Pall Mall Gazette.

He Wouldn't Give Thanks.

An eighteenth century clerical humorist, one Thom of Govan, the Glasgow Herald states, had no great fondness for days of national fasting or even of thanksgiving. At the close of the American war he commenced a sermon thus: "My friends, we are commanded by royal authority to meet this day for the purpose of public thanksgiving. Now, I should like to know what it is we are to give thanks for. Is it for the loss of thirteen provinces? Is it for the slaughter of so many thousands of our countrymen? Is it for so many millions of increased national debt? I see, my friends, you are all laughing at me, and I am not surprised at it, for were I not standing where I am I would be laughing myself."

Politeness in China.

In China parents are held responsible for the manners of their children. Accordingly, for the credit of their parents, people try to be polite. If you are mobbed in a Chinese town you should look straight at one or two of the people and say: "Your parents did not pay much attention to your manners. They did not teach you the rules of propriety." A remark like this will make the crowd slink away, one by one, ashamed of themselves.

Novel Proposal.

"Have you ever been engaged to be married before?" asked the young man.

"Yes, six times," replied the sweet young thing.

"Well, if your hand is not working just now I'd like to ask for it."—Yonkers Statesman.

Baby Army Officers.

It used to be the custom in England to buy commissions in the army for infants, and then they would be promoted as vacancies occurred. In this way a boy would have high rank when he was old enough to become a real soldier.

Little Worries.

In Chesterton's "Pronouncing Tribes" is this: A friend of mine who was visiting a poor woman in bereavement and casting about for some phrase of consolation that should not be over insolent or weak said at last: "I think one can live through these great sorrows and even be the better. What wears one is the little worries."

"That's quite right, mum," answered the old woman, with emphasis, "and I ought to know, seeing I've had ten of 'em."

Professions.

"Hello, Barker!" said Smithkin meeting his friend on the street. "How goes it?"

"All right, I guess," said Barker.

"Seen Bobbie Stonger lately?"

"Yes. Bobbie is down at my place at Westhampton now. I invited him down for the week end."

"Why, I thought that was three weeks ago!"

"It was," said Barker, "but you know, Bobbie is an expert at making both ends meet."—Harper's.

Curious Remedies.

In some parts of England one of the best cures for a swollen neck is to draw a snake nine times across the throat of the suffering one, after which the snake is killed, and its skin sewed in a silken bag and tightly sewed around the neck. Another way almost as good, is to put the live snake in a bottle, which is tightly corked and buried near the roots of a rosebush, and as the helpless snake decays the swelling in the neck of the patient will disappear.

A Story of Charles Reade.

Charles Mathews was fond of telling a story of Charles Reade when the curtain fell at the old Queen's theater in London on a pronounced failure called "A White Lie." There was no shadow of a call for the author. The curtain divided the audience from the author, who stood on the stage shaking his fist at the invisible foe, still smiling blandly and in mellifluous accents saying: "Infernal idiots! When shall I teach you to respect Charles Reade?"

The Spit Snake.

There is a snake belonging to the small family causidae, inhabiting Africa, that is said to have the power of ejecting its venom to a short distance. This snake is called by the Dutch Boers "spuw slang," or spit snake. When this snake erects its teeth the pressure of the maxillary bone on the gland causes the venom to flow in drops, and it may be quite possible that by discharging air from its mouth the poison may be blown some distance.

A Strenuous Preacher.

Whitefield, one of the founders of Methodism, who died in 1770, was a strenuous preacher. His usual program was forty hours' solid speaking each week and this to congregations measured in thousands, but he often spoke for sixty hours.

This was not all, for "after his labors, instead of taking rest, he was engaged in offering up prayers and intercessions or in singing hymns, as he manner was, in every house to which he was invited."

Sandy Reasoned Well.

Sandy McEwen 's six years old. The other day a girl baby was born in the family across the way. Said Sandy, worldly wise:

"The first week I s'pose she'll have a birthday ev'ry day. The first month she'll have one ev'ry week. The first year she'll have one ev'ry month. After that she'll have one ev'ry year forever an' ever."

"No, dear—only till she dies," corrected an older member of the family.

"Is that so?" answered Sandy scornfully. "Ain't George Washington been dead for quite some time, and ain't he having birthdays yet?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Smyrna.

Smyrna can lay claim to a loftier lineage than perhaps any other city on the earth. It is her proud boast that from the earliest dawn of history down to the present time her continuity of fame and fame is unbroken. It is in this spirit that she claims Homer for a citizen. His river, the Meles, which gave him a name, runs near the city, and the cave is still shown where he wrote his poems. Smyrna has not been slack in appropriating Homer, endowing him even with a local temple. The saddest chapters in the history of the city are those which record earthquakes and massacres of Greeks by Turks.—London Chronicle.

ELBOW GREASE

Thousands of people in small positions whine because their talents are thrown away, because their ability has no elbow room. It is not elbow room they need, it is "elbow grease." It is energy and strength. Their very whining shows they are too small for the place they are in now. When the right kind of person has too small a place he does his work so well as to make the place bigger.—Le Baron R. Briggs.

In Christianity the selfconsciousness of the spirit is awakened in pain, through suffering, disease, spiritualizes over the lower animals.—Heine.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, AUGUST 6, 1915

A BERLIN SUMMARY OF THE RUSSIAN SITUATION

RUSSIAN SITUATION CAUSES SPECULATION IN GERMANY

Enemy Hopes to Capture a Large Force of Russians Who Are Offering Determined Resistance at the Apex of the Triangle---War Expert Reviews the Situation on the Western Front---Lines Are Invulnerable---Italian Dirigible Fell Into Adriatic Sea.

Special Cable to The Examiner.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—So engrossed is the German public in the mighty effort now being made to cut off the Russian retreat that there was little speculation here to-day regarding Germany's next move. In official circles the hint was dropped last night that the next stroke of the German armies will astonish the world. From Warsaw itself little information had been received here to-day, though it was understood that the fleeing garrison was being hotly pursued. This was taken to mean either that the Russians had not succeeded in destroying all the Vistula bridges in their hasty flight, or that the Bavarian Prince held pontoons in readiness and had quickly bridged the stream. At least 100,000 Russians, fighting in the angle whose apex rested on the Novo Georgievsk fortress, believed to be threatened with capture by the fall of the Polish capital, before nightfall. Russians who escaped from Warsaw are expected to have begun arriving at Novo Binisk, twenty-seven miles east of the capital. It was not expected that the Slavs would attempt any serious stand directly east of Praga. The capture of Riga, of almost equal importance from a military point of view as the taking of Warsaw, is expected before to-morrow night. The German troops already are within artillery range of the city, and German aeroplanes have dropped circulars in the heart of the town announcing that the Germans are about to enter.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—J. W. T. Mason, war expert of the United Press, in speculating on future moves by Germany says: "The French and British lines cannot be pierced with the same ammount of pressure that is being used in Poland. In fact it is doubtful whether by any possibility they can be seriously broken at all. The British and French trenches are far better prepared and better manned than is the Russian front. There is nothing publicly known about the western situation that might encourage the Germans to hope for victory. The western Allies have been saving their ammunition since the eastern drive began. In order to meet the possible German offensive against themselves, they are rested and are admirably prepared for defensive combat. That the Teutonic armies, therefore, should cease their Russian offensive and attempt a new battle of Flanders in the west, it is impossible to believe. To force a separate peace from Russia will probably continue to be the Kaiser's dominating purpose."

ROME, Aug. 6.—An Italian dirigible returning from the bombardment of the Austrian naval base of Pola fell into the Adriatic, the Ministry of Marine announced to-day. The Austrians captured a crew of six men.

ARMENIANS MASSACRED.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The Daily "Chronicle" (morning):—A tragic episode of the war in the east is the wholesale massacre of Armenians in the eastern vila of Asia Minor by the Turks and Kruds. The Germans who are master of the Central Ottoman Administration have to their everlasting shame not only permitted but rather encouraged these horrors.

NISH, Aug. 6.—That important negotiations between the Allies and the Balkan States are now being carried on, was admitted in an official statement from the Serbian Foreign Office to-day.

Representatives of the Quadruple Entente yesterday presented certain friendly overtures to Prime Minister Pashitih of Serbia, said the official statement. These overtures were for the purpose of avoiding friction between the Balkan States and to establish en entente between them favourable to the Allies.

PUBLIC WAS PREPARED.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 6.—News of the German occupation of Warsaw was received quite calmly here to-day, newspapers having prepared the public for the evacuation nearly a fortnight in advance.

CANADIAN STEAMER TORPEDOED.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The Canadian steamer "Midland Queen" has been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine. The crew was rescued. She was in the British Government service, and was owned by the Kichelieu and Ontario Navigation Co., and registered at the port of Midland, Ont. She was built in 1901 and was 249 feet long.

Death of Prominent Millbrook Citizen

Funeral of the Late Major Winslow Took Place Yesterday

MILLBROOK, Aug 5—After an illness of about four years, Major Charles H Winslow, one of Millbrook's best known citizens, passed away on Tuesday.

Deceased was born in Cavan, north of Millbrook, and for fifteen years he farmed south of the town and then moved here, where he was manager of the elevator for many years for Mr C Goode, of Toronto. He held many positions of trust, among them being secretary-treasurer of the Millbrook Agricultural Society, President of Cavan Conservative Association, member of Bowling Club, Council, school Board. He served with the Millbrook Co. in 1866, afterwards becoming Captain of the Co. and was in command of the composite company, recruited by Millbrook and Bethany, and formed part of the Midland Brigade under Col Williams in 1885. He held the long service medal, and retired some years since. In religion an Anglican he held several offices connected by that church. He was married to Miss Lazetta M Farwell, of Oshawa who predeceased him eleven years ago. To this union one son was born, Arthur C F, who, with his second wife nee Miss Edith A Russell, one brother, William of Souris and two sisters, Mrs Geo Payne, of Ops and Mrs J H Sootheran of Lindsay, survive him.

The funeral under the auspices of I B Hall Lodge, A F and A M, took place to St Paul's cemetery, yesterday afternoon at two o'clock.

COSSACKS KNOW HOW TO SAVE WOUNDED

Crude But Effective Methods of Treating Ugly Wounds

According to the Russian physician, Dr Paschkow, much can be learned from the Cossacks, especially their method of treating wounds on the field of battle when no medical assistance is at hand. Dr Paschkow has been with the Cossacks since the beginning of the war, and has made some very interesting observations.

In case of rifle and bayonet wounds, says Dr Paschkow, the Cossacks simply cover them with a layer of ashes obtained by the burning up of a piece of wood or some cotton goods. These ashes after being thoroughly applied to all parts of the wounded then are covered with any available material which is tied over them. Dr Paschkow says that he observed numerous cases where even very ugly wounds from shrapnels were thus treated and the afflicted quickly recovered and were ready again for action in the field.

Patriotic Concert By Massed Bands at Central Park To-night

Instead of Weekly Concert at Victoria Park---Proposed That Citizens Have Fund to Defray Cost of Hospital Attendance on Volunteers Rejected For Slight Defects--Rev. Jas. Rollins Seeking a Place---Recruiting Notes.

A massed band concert will be given in Central Park to-night by the 57th Regimental and Salvation Army bands. The programme will be mostly of a patriotic character, and the recruiting movement will be given an additional stimulant. The enthusiasm aroused on Wednesday night is being well maintained, recruits are coming in satisfactorily, but the endeavour will be to increase the interest that is being shown and to reach more and more of the men who are making up their minds that the present call is the one they will accept. Considering the aims of to-night's concert there should be a big attendance.

A feature of the concert to-night will be two patriotic addresses delivered by Mr. Daniel O'Connell and Col. J. W. Miller. Both these gentlemen are fluent speakers and are enthused with the spirit of patriotism that is required to carry local efforts to their full measure of success.

Bandsmen Accepted.

A number of local bandsmen have already been accepted by Dr Eastwood and it is reported that more are coming. Mr. James, Mr. Chambers and Mr. Gibson of the 57th Regimental Band are already on the list, and Mr. Peryer of the Salvation Army. Mr Tamblyn is also mentioned as a bandsman.

No Recruits This Morning.

In the infantry branch there were no recruits passed this morning. Those already accepted were drilling on the Central Park to-day, getting their first taste of military movements.

16 More For Infantry.

Thirty-six volunteers were examined by Dr. Eastwood for the infantry branch at the armouries last night and fifteen were accepted. This is a little higher average of acceptances and is approaching the fifty per cent mark.

TWINS ENLIST.

Horace and Leonard Blake, 157 Rubidge Street, are twin brothers who have enlisted with the Mounted Rifles.

Eddie Graham Going.

Mr Eddie Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs G. N. Graham of the Empress Hotel is among the Mounted Rifle recruits.

FORSAKES EXPRESS.

Harold White, son of Mr Elric White, has forsaken his express delivery business, and is now drilling with the infantry recruits at Central Park.

Dr Cameron, of Peterborough, has been detailed by Major Gardiner, A.D.M.S., to conduct the examination of all recruits in Peterborough and district. Dr. Cameron is a very capable surgeon and the Militia Department considers itself fortunate in being able to secure his services.

Sergeants Here.

Sergt.-Major R. Biggs, Sergt. Farrance and a number of other noncoms from Barriefield have arrived in the city to assist in the recruiting campaign. They were around the streets this morning and will continue their efforts. They receive from the local committee lists of men whom it is their intention to see if possible and talk over the recruiting question with them.

"C" Company of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, has forwarded a box of tobacco to the 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, First Canadian Contingent.

Recent Recruits To Mounted Rifles

Col. Johnston has the following list of recruits for the 8th Mounted Rifles. The officers have been so busy with the recruiting work they have been unable to provide for preliminary drilling, but the men, as soon as they enlist, go out to help in bringing in more men:

E. A. MacFarlane, R. R. No. 3, Peterborough.
W. H. Field, 100 Gladstone Ave.
W. E. Scully, 577 Patterson Street.
F. J. Hall, 634 Union Street.
C. Orford, 634 Union Street.
Ross McCall, 559 Aylmer Street.
J. Woodcock, 582 Chamberlen Street.
C. Ratchford, 2 Benson Ave.
A. Parrington, 339 Aylmer Street.
John Foster, 634 Union Street.
J. Murphy, 180 Dufferin Street.
E. Farrell, 159 Rubidge Street.
F. Pence, 145 Stewart Street.
T. H. Evans, Western Avenue, Brownton.
A. Beasley, 68 James Street.
A. Pritchard, New Chamberlen Street.
J. Brady, 248 Euclid Avenue.
A. Skarizi, 666 Reed Street.
Ed. Graham, Oriental Pool Room.
Horace Blake, 157 Rubidge Street.
Leonard Blake, 157 Rubidge Street.

Suggestion That Citizens Assist

Several officers this morning endorsed a suggestion that citizens who have no other means of assisting in helping recruiting might contribute toward a fund which would be used to meet the expense of minor operations at the hospitals on recruits who are turned down for slight physical defects. It is understood that Dr Eastwood and Dr. Cameron have been giving their services without charge, but there is the hospital fee to be paid. In some cases the volunteers have been able to pay this themselves, but some of the men being without means were passed automatically into the discard. It was stated that the hospital expense in the average case would not amount to more than ten dollars, and if citizens established a fund for these cases they would be rendering a most practical service.

There has been one proposal that the city set aside a sum for this work and two members of the Patriotic league were appointed to interview the hospitals. As yet nothing has been announced. The suggestion therefore, that the citizens take up the question is timely, practical, and it is believed, could be worked out successfully. However, it remains for some one to take the initiative.

TWO INCIDENTS OF THE BIG MEETING

Here are two little episodes of Wednesday night's meeting at the armouries. A citizen and his wife were standing near the door among the hundreds who were unable to reach the fringe of the benches. Near them was a young couple who attracted no attention until the recruiting began. They appeared then to be in earnest communication, and as the piper approached on the third round the young chap broke away in an effort to reach the aisle. But at the same time his lady friend reached out and caught his sleeve, and got behind him. "Come on out of here," she said, "you are not going!" And arguing the matter they struggled through the door.

The citizen and his wife followed later, and crossed the park to catch a north-bound car. While standing on the park swatd they heard from the north side of a big flower plot a girl say, "You are no better than a lot of those other men you either go with them, or you won't come with with me."

"Now, go easy," the man replied; "there's lots of time to talk this over. Let's go."

"No; we talked it over too long. You've got to make up your mind right now."

"Oh, well, if that's the way you look at it," and without even "goodnight" the chap turned down George street.

The girl dallied a second and walked across the park pavement towards McDonnell street.

"We are seeing a lot of things to-night," said the woman to her husband. "Just then their car came north.

Rev. Jas. Rollins Eager To Enlist

Rev Jas Rollins, Pastor of St Andrew's Church, has offered his services to Col Walker to enlist as Chaplain, Quarter-Master, or Paymaster. He has been particularly persistent in applying for a position, not only being interested in the work, but also believing that he would be in a stronger position to extend his influence among those who may be thinking, or should be thinking of, going. Col. Walker regards his application with favour and is writing the Military Department at Ottawa recommending St Andrew's Pastor for any vacancy that may be open.

May Recruit For Battery Unit Here

It is expected that another Battery unit will be recruited in Peterborough within a short time. At the armouries there were rumours to this effect, but as Captain W. C. Ackerman was not in the city it could not be learned what information he had received on the subject. Mr Ernie Lowes, who passed the examination yesterday, was the first recruit for it. If the Battery recruiting is not carried on at once he will likely go with the infantry and seek a transfer at Kingston to the artillery.

Comment on the Fall of Warsaw

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Commenting on the fall of Warsaw the London Post says: "All things considered the Russian public has been wonderfully patient and uncomplaining. Their extremities provide doubtless reason for the belief which is our security for confidence as well as theirs, that the general staffs of their countries are acting in full harmony and with complete knowledge of each other's position and purposes, and from this premise one may reach the conclusion that after all, things cannot be very dark when the leaders can take the situation so calmly and so say passively."

VIOLENT ATTACK DIRECT AGAINST FRENCH FORCES GERMANS WERE REPULSED

The Enemy Is Now Attacking on the Whole Front Extending From the Argonne Region to the Heights of the Meuse--"Intense" Artillery and Infantry Actions Are Occurring.

Special Cable to The Examiner.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—(French official.)—A violent onslaught against the French work around Verdun has been launched by the armies under the German Crown Prince. Beginning with intermittent bombardments in the Argonne two days ago, the Teutons are now attacking on the whole front extending from the western Argonne to the heights of the Meuse. Military critics here are not agreed as to whether the German attacks constitute the beginning of a genuine offensive movement, but are paying close heed to the situation around the fortress. This afternoon's official statements say that "intense" artillery and infantry actions are occurring in the Argonne region, with the Germans attacking. The French positions around Eparges, and all along the Meuse Heights are under attack, but the Germans have been repulsed in each instance. Further south around St. Mihiel the enemy is shelling the French trenches near the Apremont forest. On other sectors of the battle front little of importance developed throughout last night. The Germans continued weak efforts against the French positions around Souchese and Neuville, St. Vaast and in the region north of Arras, but their grenade attacks were repulsed.

PETERBORO' BOY INJURED IN A RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

Team of Horses in Charge of a Bridgenorth Man Ran Away With Disastrous Results

LOAD SLIPPED

Joseph Franks, son of Mr. Thomas Franks, 481 Homewood Avenue, was seriously injured as the result of a runaway accident that occurred in Bridgenorth late yesterday afternoon. Melville McWilliams, son of Mr Adam McWilliams, of Bridgenorth who was in charge of the team that ran away, also sustained a severe shaking up. About two months ago he sustained a broken leg and as a result was confined to the hospital for a month. Yesterday's accident occurred on a farm a short distance from Bridgenorth.

The two boys were driving a load of loose shingles from the farm to the village. While driving out of the barn where the shingles were loaded, the front stakes gave way, causing the load to slip forward together with the driver and the Franks boy. The horses started to run away but were brought to a standstill before they reached the floating bridge on Chemong Lake. Had they crossed the bridge they would have encountered a funeral and the accident might have assumed much larger proportions.

The two boys were thrown from the load and young Franks who is a cousin of McVille McWilliams, sustained severe injuries about the head. Doctors Morgan and Mann of Peterborough were summoned and this morning Franks was removed to his home in Comstock's ambulance. McWilliams was more fortunate and escaped with a few bruises.

ANOTHER MACHINE GUN DONATED

Mr. R. M. Waddell and Mrs. Hugh Waddell Contribute One of the Most Appreciative Weapons of the Present War

A machine gun for the use of the Canadian Expeditionary forces has been donated by Mr R M Waddell and Mrs Hugh Waddell of this city. This is one of a number that has been contributed by Peterborough citizens within the past few days and is indicative of the fact that the wave of practical patriotism which has been so manifest in Peterborough since the outbreak of the war will not be allowed to wane.

LAWN BOWLING

The oppressively warm weather has caused even a greater number than usual to resort to the green for the outer air and recreation.

Viewing the scene from the club house, with its smoothly shaven lawn, its fenny rinks bordered by the straight white lines together with the jovial activity of the numerous players present a very pleasing appearance.

Here they are playing out the lob contest, over there they are finishing a schedule game, while a little further over fitful amusement and hearty congratulations are heard over some of the new players who are handling lightly from some of our noted players and none are congratulating the winners more heartily than are the losers.

It is pleasing to see the harmonious rivalry. They just seem like a jolly bowling bunch.

The air rings with a whole hearted shout at a broken shot. Now a polite applause expresses appreciation of a well played, perhaps most opportune shot shrewdly played if with doubled force.

The lob game was played last night between the Maynard and Cottrell rinks. The score was as follows:

Maynard ... 12 10 0 1 3 0 1 1 3 = 31
Cottrell ... 0 2 1 0 0 1 0 0 0 = 4

ARE MEETING WITH A FAIR RESPONSE

Although Total Sum for the 59th Regimental Fund is Not Yet Realized—Citizens Asked to Help

Capt. Maurice Park and Lieut. Rackham of the 59th Battalion who have been canvassing for funds for a field kitchen and other equipment for the battalion, say that they have met with a very fair response although the amount so far realized is a long way from the sum required. It is hoped that public-spirited citizens who have not yet been approached, will assist by substantial donations to this worthy object. The time for canvassing is necessarily limited owing to the shortness of the officers' leave. Consequently, all who are willing to help are asked to communicate with either of the above gentlemen.

ANOTHER MEMBER OF ST. JOHN'S CHOIR LEAVING CITY

At the practice of St. John's Choir last night a farewell recital was tendered Mr. R. J. Mr. Stones has been a valued member of St. John's Choir for more than two years and was a faithful attendant at practices and services. SHALL WE "DO OUR PART?"

Canadians are naturally greatly gratified over the honours being showered in both England and France, upon our Premier, Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Borden. This is not a personal honour altogether, though it might well be a fitting recognition of Sir Robert's dignity of bearing and high personal qualities, which make him a worthy representative of the greatest Dominion of the Empire.

But the honours he received have a far higher significance. They are a recognition of the splendid part Canada has played in the Empire's hour of trial; of the services she has rendered, as an earnest of still greater contribution to the triumph of the cause of freedom. Sir Robert in asserting in London on Aug. 4th that Canada was "inspired by an unflinching determination to do our part," gave it as a message from Canada.

Such a declaration will only be academic and a mere fashion of speaking, if the people of Canada does not implement the message delivered through the mouth of Sir Robert Borden.

"Unflinching determination" on the part of Canada is only empty declamation if it is not translated into terms of recruits for the fighting ranks. We may shout Rule Britannia, and sing God Save the King, till we are black in the face, and wave the flag till our arms ache, and these things will amount to nothing unless we put behind our enthusiasm the spirit of action—of doing something, and so preventing Sir Robert Borden from being a false prophet.

The form Canada's "unflinching determination" should, first of all, take, is soldiers for the fighting ranks—recruits.

These are the first and absolutely necessary element in Canada doing her duty. We can't all get into the firing line, but there are thousands in this city and county, who might, and indeed should, be there that are not there. Men eligible for enlistment cannot justify their refusal to enter the ranks. If they persist they become parasites—men merely accepting the defence, by others, of their life and liberties, while they are doing nothing. They will be doing nothing, and will become shirkers, something that has small honour in the ranks of labour, or the general activities of citizenship. Men who in the days of peace, become shirkers become in time our vagrants and tramps. What name do they deserve in time of war?

We, who are able to bear arms in this time of war, and refuse to do so, can hardly be counted in the ranks of good citizenship, nor expect to occupy a respected place in the ranks of citizenship, where everybody else—those who cannot enlist, have, nevertheless, enlisted in doing their share of work in the only way open to them. Women cannot fight in the ranks, but they are doing their share. They are working day by day, and night by night, to help and strengthen and equip those who have had the courage and manliness to take up arms. Other citizens beyond military age are doing their bit. It is not possible for the legal firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry to shoulder muskets, or for Mr. E. F. Mason, or Mrs. Hugh Waddell, or Mr. R. M. Waddell. Yet these men have shown themselves men, and a women takes the place and does the work of mony fighting men. They are a fine example to others, in a similar position, and with a similar call, to supply machine guns, each one, in the hands of a capable man, equal in firing and fighting effectiveness to three dozen soldiers.

They are the first of many others, who will, probably, follow their example. A military man says that he has the promise of two more machine guns from local citizens; they are in the ranks with thousands of others who are doing their bit in their own way, who can't fight, but can help the fighting.

The men eligible for enlisting, have their duty facing them, and if they decline are the only ones of any account among our citiezenship that are not doing their bit.

It is unfair to overload one class of the community in which all are bearing a share of the burden. We print a letter in another column, calling upon manufacturers to pay their employees who enlist a moderate sum per week while they are soldiering.

This is putting the matter upon a rather sordid basis — pay for doing duty. In this war we must all make sacrifices; and as all are to be benefitted by the sacrifices made, all should share in the sacrifices made. The manufacturers are hard hit by the war. Many establishments keep their establishments running without profit mainly, in effect if not intention, to provide employment. The manufacturers guarantee the places to employees, who enlist and get good pay—$1.85 per day all told; a liberal allowance for the maintenance of dependents they leave behind, with the whole country working together for the soldiers' comfort while he is on duty. The manufacturers have done well in this city towards their employees who enlist. They suffer the sacrifice of losing their services and hold their places open. They should not be called upon to further sacrifice, for the common benefit. The sacrifice if any should be borne in common by those that benefit in common from the services of our fighting forces.

To make good Sir Robert Borden's declaration of our "unflinching determination to do our part," we must all put our shoulders to the wheel. First of all the call comes to the man physically fit, to enter actively into the fight. If he does that the rest will do their duty too, as the mass of the people is doing now.

In this struggle the forces are of two kinds, the men who stand in the fighting line and the reserves at home—the men and women who are doing as effective, though not as direct, fighting, by furnishing the munitions of war, by furnishing the material backing of the soldiers actually in the battle line. Each force is complementary to the other. If the fighters will come forward, the home reserves will be correspondingly strengthened, and more fully do their duty, and both working together will make more than noble—will make true—the words of Sir Robert Borden's declaration of—

"Our unflinching determination to do our part."

ALL ON THE FOOD LIST

That there are 30,000,000 people on the Government food list in Germany is a fact that has been disclosed in spite of the censorship. While the civilized barbarians are certainly in a commercially demoralized condition, it would be unwise to base hopes or calculations on their condition measured by standards of free countries. That proportion in the food list in a free country would be a manifestation of economic collapse, but under the denial of rights in Germany's organization it would not be a sign of weakness if all the people were on the food list. The Socialist formula that official and military Germany has been fighting and condemning has been embraced in its worst form, not by the people freely, but by despotic authority. The Government that is under the necessity of giving to each according to his needs is also taking from each according to his ability.

A man may be on the food list and have in his barn the products of a good harvest. The Government that is taking food at a rate that would under freedom threaten or indicate national bankruptcy, is taking food with an absolute disregard for the rights of the owners. The man who has raised a crop of grain may find himself on the same dole or allowance of bread as the man who has done nothing to augment the nation's stores. Various indications of bankruptcy may merely mean an indiscriminate pooling of the nation's resources and the support of all from the common store. The denial of personal rights and the discouragement of individual initiative involved in this subservience to and dependence upon a Government, is the real penalty already brought home to the German people. A multitude of hands and few minds may accomplish certain definite and restricted results, but the building and maintaining of a nation requires a multitude of hands and a multitude of independent minds. That the Germans have been educated to disregard their duties, obligations and pledges, reveals the blight of subservience to organization.

The Globe.

WORK OF THE BRITISH NAVY IN THE FIRST YEAR OF THE WAR

The allied nations and all neutral nations owe a debt of the deepest gratitude to the British navy. It is the world should speculate on the outcome of the war and its probable duration, now that the end of the first year has been reached, and to the navy all look for invincible protection as victory shapes.

The supremacy of the navy has been acknowledged by Germany. The fact that for a whole year the German navy has been in hiding to escape destruction is the strongest praise from any source. Nor is this all. German colonies, representing greater acreage than Germany itself, have been taken from it, and Germany admits that it cannot send any of its vast army to the rescue. Its merchant marine is paralyzed. Unable to come out of the Kiel Canal and fight the British navy in a stand-up fight, the Kaiser's sea lords resort to gouging and sending out the murderous submarine to strike down every vessel it can, no matter by what nation owned, or whether its passengers belong to a neutral or belligerent nation, or whether they are men, women or children.

The action of the submarine is no more cowardly, even in the case of the Lusitania, than the action of the German army in murdering the Belgian population. What they did on land to the Belgian nation they would do on the sea but for the British navy. The British navy will make Germany account to Belgium for the wrongs inflicted.

Germany struck Belgium with the sword. It was in an unrighteous cause. Germany must be compelled to hand over that sword to the allied armies, and until it does there can be no peace. Germany can have no right to speak of peace till the wrong done to Belgium is compensated for as near as now may be. Those who speak of the warring nations as if there was blame on both sides cannot justify that attitude. The war was forced by Germany after years of preparation and study. The nature aforethought was of long years' duration and the means by which the Germans seek to effect their purpose is fiendish. No matter how religious the Kaiser may pretend to be, his actions do not point heavenward. The British navy, stronger now than a year ago, that has protected all other nations, will prove true to the words of Thomas Campbell:

The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn,
Till dangers troubled night depart
And the Star of Peace Return.
Then, then, ye ocean warriors,
Our song and toast shall flow
To the fame of your name.
When the storm has ceased to blow,
When the fiery fight is heard no more,
And the storm has ceased to blow.

TABLE MANNERS

By Inga M. K. Allison.

HOWEVER attractive may be the table service, if there be present those who are conspicuously ill-mannered, pleasure in the meal is marred for some of those present. In no phase of our social relations may carelessness and thoughtlessness be so apt to offend as in our manners at table. This is unfortunate since to make one's presence at table agreeable does not require great knowledge, or extreme effort. It simply means being considerate of others, being sensible, and being honorable.

To drink of a beverage noisily, to not express a preference when asked, to use the meal-time as an opportunity for the repeating of harmful gossip—these are but typical instances of ill-mannered conduct that could not occur if there were consideration for others, the use of commonsense and adherance to a sense of honor.

If each of the rules for conduct at table so commonly given in books on etiquette, is analyzed, it will be found to have an explanation as simple as those just suggested. Such rules are not arbitrarily arranged by over-exacting and fussy women, for the sake of making the small boy uncomfortable. They are rather reminders of the deportment that will help to make our living together more easy and agreeable. Being courteous is but the adapting of one's best self to the best selves of others. This is often most successfully accomplished through keeping one's self in the comfort and conveniences of others.

HE MADE A HIT

LITTLE Ralph, an only child of four, had been permitted to stay up one evening when his parents had company. At the table he made a quaint remark, at which all the guests laughed. He instantly saw that he had made a hit, and with commendable enterprise sought to follow it up.

"Dad," he shouted, "what was that other smart thing I said yesterday?"

Water in which onions have been boiled is good for cleaning gilt picture frames. It removes specks and dirt and brightens the gilt. It should not be used until cold.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A FLOWER AMONG WEEDS

Story of the Eighteenth Century.

By P. A. MITCHEL.

During the reign of Louis XV. France reached a culmination of profligacy which had been growing for years. While the king was in his minority the regent, his uncle, Duke of Orleans, set the example of debauchery to the court and through the court to the kingdom. Louis himself, on assuming the sceptre, by continuing in his uncle's foot steps completed the work of laying the foundation for the French revolution which broke out during the reign of his successor.

During the regency of the Duke of Orleans the wealthiest nobles owned estates in different parts of France. Only the more moral of these lived in their country chateaus, for the profligate could not endure to live elsewhere than in Paris, where the intriguing and debauchery were going on. Among those who preferred the virtue of rural life was the young Marquis Gaston de Poquette, who, though a soldier of acknowledged bravery, had a mind capable of foreseeing the ruin the regent, the princes of the blood and the nobility were bringing upon France.

However, the marquis was obliged occasionally to go to Paris either at the call of the regent or on account of some duty connected with his station as a peer of the realm. One day on the street on which stands what was then the palace of the Louvre he passed a young lady riding in her "chair," the very sight of whom deeply impressed him. She was not only beautiful, but a natural purity showed itself in every line of her countenance. This was the more noticeable, for at that time the women of the court were as bad as the men, and the lives they led were discernible in their features.

The marquis followed the young lady with his eyes, and when he saw her carried into the palace he heaved a sigh, for he did not believe that any woman could enter that royal abode and be good. Her entrance there, however, proved that she was a lady of rank.

The marquis' duty to the sovereign later called him to the court, and he saw there the lady whom he had met in her "chair." Hanging over her was a famous but notorious duke, the most pronounced and successful beau of that period. He was a very wealthy man, and he was also the most accomplished villain of his day. Three times he had been in the Bastille, the third time for having attempted to betray France.

Another sight marked the marquis' discovery that the girl who had made such an impression on him was probably falling into the hands of this notorious villain. Leaving the palace without even inquiring the name or rank of the young lady, M. Roquette returned to his estate and, shutting himself up in his chateau, endeavored to banish her image, which had haunted him since the first moment he had seen her.

This was not possible. To the young such impressions are very strong. What it was in that pure face that had taken hold of him he did not know. What he did know was that she was a member of a profligate court, that he had seen its most licentious rake hanging over her, and he did not doubt that sooner or later she would go down under the influences which surrounded her.

Gaston de Roquette remained on his estate for a month without returning to Paris. Often was he tempted to go there for another glimpse of the face that had enthralled him, but he believed that in yielding to the temptation he would only bring upon himself greater pain. So he devoted himself to the care of his estate and to his tenants. He endeavored to occupy himself with his books, but this was impossible, for, whatever he did, his mind was upon that pure being, growing like a flower in the midst of poisonous weeds.

Whether it was that the young marquis was a poor sleeper or that Cupid was keeping him awake, he went to bed late and at times when unable to sleep would arise, dress himself and walk about outside. Not far from the chateau was the church where he and his household and his tenants worshiped and about which their forefathers slept. Within the structure were the bones of the De Roquettes incased in sepulchers or under the flags, the sepulchers supporting marble figures of the departed, while here and there were the arms the men had borne in war.

Gaston de Roquette often strolled about during his midnight walks in the churchyard, but had never cared to enter the church at night when it was deserted. One night when troubled with sleeplessness he was strolling in the grounds near the chateau when, glancing toward the church, he saw a light apparently within the structure. Thinking that he had seen a firefly, he was turning away, when he saw the light again, this time shining evidently through a different window than before. Surely some one was moving in the church. Walking toward it, he went to a window and looked in. There was no light except that the moon, which was nearly full, shone in, dimly revealing the recumbent marble figures on the sepulchers.

Thinking again that he had been mistaken, he was about to turn away when it occurred to him to try the knob of the door at the main entrance. To his surprise, the door was not locked. Entering the church, he found no one, but through a crack in a door leading from the chancel to a room used by the priest and acolytes came a ray of light. What could it mean? The pastor of the church was an old man, too feeble to be engaged in any church duty at dead of night. It was no religious matter that was being observed.

The marquis was about to walk toward the door through which the light came when it opened and half a dozen persons came out of the apartment. They bore lights, but so dim were they that De Roquette could not distinguish the faces of the several members of the party. There were a priest who was unknown to him, two men and two women, evidently persons of rank, and the last two to enter the church were a man and a woman. From this woman's dress De Roquette judged that the couple were about to be married. The little party moved toward the chancel, where the priest stationed himself, the couple before him, the two other men on the side of the groom, the two women on the side of the bride.

The marquis walked softly forward, hoping to get a nearer view of the faces, but before he reached a point of vantage their backs were to him. The priest faced him, and he saw at once that he was not the pastor of the church. To the marquis' astonishment he recognized in a priest's garb a worthless fellow of the neighborhood, who had served several terms in prison as a malefactor.

Assured that some piece of villainy was being perpetrated, De Roquette seized an enormous sword resting on the tomb of one of his ancestors and, rushing forward till he stood directly behind the wedding party, cried out:

"I forbid the bans!"

The false priest looked up from a book he held in his hand, and the others turned quickly.

Then did the marquis meet with a great surprise. The attendants were men and women of the court. The groom was the profligate duke, while the bride was the lady of whom the marquis had been dreaming. She had entered with apparent reluctance and now looked up like a frightened bird. The duke, with the assurance that often characterizes vice, knit his brows and said threateningly:

"Who are you, monsieur?"

"Gaston, Marquis de Roquette, proprietor of the estate on which this church stands. No ceremony is permitted here except it is conducted by Father Arouet, the pastor. Surely none will be permitted by one not in orders and the veriest scamp in the province!"

Paralyzed by these words, the group, all except the bride, stood as if discovered in a crime. Then she, breaking away from them, flew to De Roquette and, catching at him for protection, stood regarding the others in terror. Raising the ponderous sword, the length of which was nearly equal to his own height, he stood ready to bring it down upon whomsoever might interfere with him or her. The duke, drawing the rapier at his side, advanced, paused, then said to the girl:

"Emilie, will you not return to me?"

She made no other answer than to cower behind her protector.

"This is no place, marquis," said the duke, "for a dispute among men. Let us go out among the graves. The sexton will not have far to carry you in the morning."

"I will certainly give your grace an opportunity to cross swords with me," replied the marquis, "but not at the present moment, unless you force me to do so. My first duty is to protect this lady, and I see no one here with whom I may safely leave her."

One of the attendant men sprang forward and seized the duke by the arm. He was followed by the other man, then by the women. All pleaded with him to desist.

"This will make a scandal," they argued, "that will put you again in the Bastille and send the rest of us to our country estates, where we will have nothing to do but pine for Paris. We were foolish to abet you in this wild scheme. And the Countess Emilie! Do you suppose the powerful family to which she belongs will not avenge this insult if it becomes known? Give up your mad scheme. It is doubtless fortunate that it has been interrupted, and if it can be kept secret none of us may suffer on account of our part in it."

The duke stood burning to proceed, but all declared that it was of them that he should think and not of himself, though an exile to the country would be less irksome than the Bastille. Finally he sheathed his sword and, after one more appeal to the countess to come to him, he was hurried out of the church by his friends, leaving the marquis and the girl he had saved from a mock marriage alone together.

Here stops the chronicle of one of the vilest episodes of the time of the regency of Philippe of France, but one which in that day was known only to a few. Later Gaston Marquis de Roquette and Emilie Countess de Vandiere were married in the very church where the mock marriage had been interrupted. And it is a matter of record that neither of them ever again appeared at court. Surrounded by their children, adored by their tenants, they lived a life of simplicity and purity.

But when at the end of the eighteenth century the people of France rose to throw off the yoke of a profligate nobility the innocent were made to suffer with the guilty. The marquis and marquise's grandchildren paid a penalty that they did not deserve.

Must Be Swimmers

Every student who graduates from Princeton University must be an accomplished swimmer, in the edict just issued forth from the authorities of Old Nassau. Beginning with the class of 1919, every student who quits a sheepskin must be able to pass a test, this saying that is even more difficult than the examination given to professional life guards at most of the big watering places.

For the last four years the student at Princeton has been required to swim 50 yards, using two recognized strokes, but the plan of turning out accomplished and well trained all-round swimmers is said that the administration is going to recommend that the requirement be raised to 100 yards, and that physical education throughout the country

THE GERMAN ATROCITIES AS OFFICIALLY REPORTED BY BRYCE COMMISSION

Aerschot and District.

Period II (August 25th.)

Immediately after the battle of Malines which resulted in the evacuation by the Germans of the northern Maines, Sempst, Hofstade, and Eppeghem, a long series of murders were committed either just before or during the retreat of the army. Many of the inhabitants who were unarmed, including women and young children were killed, some of them under circumstances. Evidence given is to show that the deaths of these Belgians was due not to accident but to deliberate purpose. The wounds were generally stabs or cuts and for the most part appear to have been inflicted with the bayonet.

Malines.

In Malines itself many bodies were seen. One witness saw a German officer cut a woman's breast off. It had not rendered him and was many other dead bodies of women in the streets.

Hofstade.

In Hofstade a number of houses had been set on fire and many corpses were seen, some in houses, some in backyards and some in the streets. Several examples are given below.

Two witnesses speak to having seen the body of a young man pierced by bayonet thrusts, with the wrists cut also.

On a side road the corpse of a civilian was seen on his doorstep with a bayonet wound in the stomach, and by his side the dead body of a boy of five or six with his hands nearly severed.

The corpses of a woman and a boy were seen at the blacksmith's. They had been killed with the bayonet. In a cafe a young man, also killed with the bayonet, was holding his hands together as if in the attitude of supplication.

Two young women were lying in the background of the house. One had her breasts cut off, and the other had been stabbed. A young man had been hacked with the bayonet until his entrails protruded. He also had his hands joined in the attitude of prayer.

In the garden of a house in the main street bodies of two women were observed, and in another house the body of a boy of 16 with two bayonet wounds in the chest.

Sempst.

In Sempst a similar condition of affairs existed. Houses were burning, and in some of them were the charred remains of civilians.

In a bicycle shop a witness saw the burned corpse of a man. Other witnesses speak to this incident. Another civilian, unarmed, was shot as he was running away. As will be remembered, all arms had been given up some time before by order of the burgomaster.

The corpse of a man with his legs cut off, who was partly bound, was seen by another witness, who also saw a girl of seventeen dressed only in a chemise and in great distress. She alleged that she herself and other girls had been dragged into a field, stripped naked and violated, and that some of them had been killed with the bayonet.

Weerde. At Weerde four corpses of civilians were lying in the road. It was running away. As will be remembered, all arms had been given up some time before by order of the burgomaster.

Weerde. At Weerde four corpses of civilians were lying in the road. It was running away. As will be remembered on the German soldiers, but this is denied. The arms had been given up long before. Two children were killed in a village apparently Weerde, quite wantonly as they were standing in the road with their mother. They were three or four years old, and were killed with the bayonet. Burning a small farm building close by formed a convenient means of getting rid of the bodies. They were thrown into the flames from the bayonets. It is right to add that no commissioned officer was present at this time.

Eppeghem. At Eppeghem, on the 25th of August, a pregnant woman who had been wounded with a bayonet was discovered in the convent. She was dying. On the road six dead bodies of labourers were seen.

Elewyt. At Elewyt a man's naked body was tied up to a ring in the wall in the backyard of a house. He was dead, and his corpse was mutilated in a manner too horrible to record. A woman's naked body was also found in a stable abutting on the same backyard.

Vilvorde. At Vilvorde corpses of civilians were also found. These villages are all on the line from Malines to Brussels.

Boort Meerbeck. At Boort Meerbeck a German soldier was seen to fire three shots at a little girl of five years old. Having killed her at last, he stabbed it with the butt end of a rifle. A Belgian soldier who had seen him another time murder from a distance.

Heyst op Den Berg. At Heyst op Den Berg the charred bodies of a civilian was found in a butcher's shop, and in a hand cart twenty yards away was the charred body of an inhabitant.

Louvain. We see no date that a German soldier shot a civilian, and then beat him with the butt end of his rifle. He then made him go to the next house, a civilian following. Here the man was shot dead. Another civilian pleaded successfully for his life.

Haecht. At Haecht the inhabitants were seen in the main square a heap of bodies, all dead.

In a baker's house, which was broken up, the mutilated corpse of a woman of 30 or 35 was discovered. A child of three with its stomach cut open by a bayonet was lying near a house.

Werchter. At Werchter the corpses of a man and woman and four women persons were found in the house. It is stated that they had been murdered because one of the latter, a girl, would not allow the Germans to ravage her.

This catalogue of crimes does not by any means represent the sum total of the depositions relating to this district laid before the commission. The above are given merely as examples of acts which the evidence shows to have taken place in hundreds that might have seemed scarcely credible. In the rest of the district, that is to say, Aerschot and the other villages from which the Germans had not been driven, the effect of the battle was to cause a reckless reign of murder, arson, pillage and cruelty which had to some extent died down after the 25th or 26th of August.

In Aerschot itself fresh prisoners seem to have been taken and added to those who were already in the church, since it would appear that prisoners were kept to some extent in the church during the whole of the German occupation of Aerschot. The second occasion on which large numbers of prisoners were put there was shortly after the battle of Malines, and it was then that the priest of Gelrode was brought to Aerschot church, treated abominably, and finally murdered.

One witness describes the scene graphically. "The whole of the prisoners men, women and children, were placed in the church. Nobody was allowed to go outside the church "to obey the calls of nature, the "church had to be used for that purpose. We were afterwards allowed "to go outside the church for this "purpose, and then I saw the clergy "man of Gelrode standing by the wall "of the church with his hands above "his head, being guarded by soldiers." The actual details of the murder of the priest are as follows. The priest was struck several times by the soldiers on the head. He was pushed up against the wall of the church. He asked in Flemish to be allowed to stand with his face to the wall, and tried to turn around. The Germans stopped him, and then turned him with his face to the wall, with his hands above his head. An hour later the same witness saw the priest still standing there. He was then led away by the Germans a distance of 50 yards. There, with his face against the wall of a house, he was shot by five soldiers. Other murders of which we have evidence appear on appendix.

Some of the prisoners in the church of Aerschot were actually kept there until the arrival of the British army on September 11th, when they were released. Others were marched to Louvain, and eventually mixed with other prisoners, both from Louvain and the surrounding districts and taken to Germany and elsewhere. It is said by one that about 1,000 were marched to Louvain and that the journey took six hours. The journey to Louvain is thus described by a witness. We were all marched out to Louvain, walking. There were some very old people amongst us, about a man of 90 years of age. The very old people were drawn in cart and barrow by the younger men. There was an officer who shouted to the people fell out by the side of the road. Shoot them."

Aerschot and District. Period III (September). Louvain and District, will appear in the Evening Examiner August 7th.

Letter From Gunner Dorris

Battery in Which Peterboro' Detachment is Located, is in Action Most of the Time

Mr. Albert Dorris, 241 1-2 Lock Street, is in receipt of an interesting letter from his brother, Gunner Ambrose Dorris, of the Peterborough Detachment of the 11th Battery, 1st Brigade, First Canadian Expeditionary Force, contributes the following:

We are having a quiet spell here at present. The weather is very windy and cool. However we expect a little warmer weather before winter sets in. Dec. winter weather here is wet and cold but we do not have anything like the same amount of snow that you have in Canada. Our guns are in action most of the time and we are kept pretty much on the go. I was up in the front line of trenches for five days and nights and was not sorry when we were relieved. I expect to get over there again pretty soon. While in the trenches we ran across the 1th and 2nd Battalions and I had the pleasure of meeting several Peterborough boys whom I knew. Among them were Sgt. Armstrong, Ross Kendry, Sherry Banks, Fred Burns, the two Watt brothers and Tom Dunnuitt, and several others whom I fail to remember at the present time. They are looking fine and say that they never felt better.

A LACROSSE LAD.

I received the paper you sent and saw Bill Crowley's photo in one of them. He is going to the front with the Calgary Regiment. I wish him good luck. He sure had some job. I also saw that our lacrosse team got trimmed real hard in Hastings. You had better tell them to hang up their sticks and wait for my return. Whenever I get any lacrosse news it makes me wish that I was where I could get into the old uniform, grab my sticks and dig in. I saw two fellows with lacrosse sticks having a game of catch once I came here. It made me think of the good old times I had playing the games myself.

The second contingent is supposed to be in France or Belgium, but I haven't seen anything of them yet. We heard that we were going to the front for a long rest when the second contingent arrived. But it was the same as many other things that we hear, just a false rumour. We are all going to get a week's rest in England in our turn. None of us know or have any idea when our turn will come. They only allow two each week to go.

Men Go Into the Trenches Singing

Lieut. C. P. Fee Writes Interesting Letter From France—"Peterborough Chaps on the Spot When Wanted"

Lieut. C. P. Fee with the first Canadian Divisional Frame, writes the following letter to the editor of the Millbrook Mirror and which will be found interesting by his many friends here.

Well, when I reached here I felt that I had reached the proper company. My trip across from Southampton was an interesting one as I was made O. C. Troops by the Embarkation Authorities there and we had a choppy passage in the Duchess of Argyle, with a good escort of destroyers. Some of the troops disembarked at Havre, the remainder at Rouen. We spent a day and a half there and then proceeded up country, and it proved very interesting indeed.

I have met a lot of former campaign friends and have located some good new ones.

Any one following the papers will get a good idea of what the Canadians are doing. We are travelling together, and it takes up all the different corps to complete our establishment this side the channel.

A lot of Peterborough chaps have suffered in the game, and I am glad to be able to state that they were on the spot when wanted.

In getting in touch with the different corps, whether it be Scotch, English, Irish, Indian or Canadian one really feels proud to be British.

I have watched the boys coming in and out of the trenches, and probably you would see some of the Northumberland Fusiliers, Warwicks, Suffolks or Scotch or Irish chaps coming out, they would be singing. Here we are, here we are, here we are again, we gave it to them at Neuve Chapelle and we're ready to, them.

The boys on the way up to the Canadians kept singing "Here we are, here we are, here we are again, we kept them busy at Ypres, you know, and we're keep them going again.

The country in rear of the firing line is really very pretty indeed, and the crops are real good, water supply is not the best for man or beast.

The women and elder men are doing the work in the fields, with a few exceptions. Weather is fine and warm and sufficient rain thus far to supply requirements.

Am always pleased to hear from old Millbrook friends.

Have seen some very interesting balloon and aeroplane scraps, with the enemy trying hard to drop bombs on his target.

Of course rifle and heavy and light artillery, with machine gun fire is an every day occurrence, almost all along the line, and at night the star shells make some spots as clear as day, almost as good as an electric light exhibition showing different types of new light.

Hoping the lads all well. With sincere good wishes.

PRESENTED CABINET TO MR. COWAN

His Service to the Canadian Horticultral Association Were Appreciated

Mr. F. Wise of this city has been re-elected to the Executive Committee of the Canadian Horticultural Association. The annual convention of the Association wound up in London, Ont., yesterday, at noon.

Services Appreciated.

Votes of thanks were extended to the retiring president, Mr. H. B. Cowan of Peterborough, and to the secretary-treasurer, J. Lack, of Montreal. In the case of the former, appreciation was emphasized by the presentation, on behalf of the society, of a handsome cabinet of silver to Mr. Cowan, the gold plate on the cover bearing the names of both the late president and his wife.

Mr. Sam Jordan of this city was also present, and he acted as one of the judges of the Trade Exhibit.

Call It Unfair.

During the convention considerable discussion has taken place regarding the fact that a number of horticultural societies throughout the country which have been receiving grants from the Government have been buying seeds and bulbs and advertising them for sale to the public. Since these societies receive the Government grant, it is felt that unfair competition with local florists is created. The convention registered its objection and appointed a committee of three with power to add to their number: W. L. Lindsay, Tillsonburg, H. Simmers, Toronto, and J. Caveth, Orkville to wait upon the Ontario Minister of Agriculture in regard to the matter.

It is estimated that in Canada there are about one thousand florists and gardeners, of whom only 113 are members of the Horticultural Society. On motion of Mr. Caveth, the following representative membership committee was appointed to act through the year and report to the next convention: H. B. Cowan, Peterborough, J. Lack, Montreal, F. Adams, Toronto, Philpott, Winnipeg, Connon, Hamilton, Commance, London.

Papers of Interest.

A paper on "Perennials" by W. J. Potter of the Parks Department, Toronto, was listened to with deepest interest. Mr. Potter stated that perennials have very much increased in popularity in the past few years, especially a few well-known varieties. He urged the importance of the cultivation of perennials, of which some 200 varieties grow in Canada, and also the advisability of planting for the effect in of the public, the less familiar varieties.

It was the privilege of the convention to have present the leading exponent in Canada on orchid culture, W. Hutcheon of Bay Estates, Brampton, Ont., who himself, has in the neighbourhood of 25,000 orchid plants. Between 300 and 500 varieties are cultivated in Canada. The plants have been originally brought from the South, variety being increased by growing from seed and crossing.

Banquet is Windup.

Yesterday afternoon the visitors were taken on an automobile trip around the city and to Springbank Park, and the very successful London convention was brought to a grand climax by a banquet at eight o'clock last evening in the city hall.

Large Crowd at Middleton's School-house

Occasion Was the Presentation of Prize to Miss Mildred Mahood for Educational Ability

The second line of Smith never saw a larger or more enthusiastic crowd of people gathered in its school-house than that of last evening, on the occasion of the presentation by Mr. Burnham, M.P., of his prize to Miss Mildred Mahood, for taking first place for the Township of Smith at the recent entrance examinations. The Reeve, Mr. Fred McKee, occupied the chair. Amongst those on the platform were Lt.-Col. Miller, Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Mr. Burnham, M.P., and the Secretary of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Tully. Speeches were delivered by Messrs. Ed. Elliott, Lt.-Col. Miller, Geo. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., J. Mahood, J. Mahood, C. L. Moore and Miss Carter, the teacher, in an appropriate and appreciative manner. Excellent music was rendered by Mrs. Young and Mr. Coleman, and recitations were given by Miss Young and Miss Green.

At the conclusion of the programme a magnificent supper was served and at 11 o'clock, after singing the national anthem, the audience dispersed, voting the meeting one of the best they had ever attended.

Suggestion to Encourage Recruiting

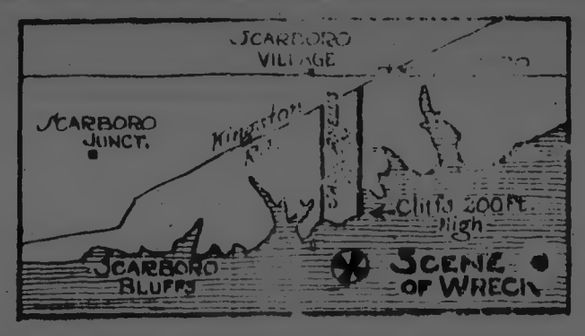
To the Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I think a good way to get men to enlist would be for the manufacturers of the different firms in this city to offer the men that are willing a moderate sum per week whilst soldiering. Another thing to my mind is that all men rejected should have a badge or something to show to that effect. I have done a little but for about seven months somewhere the other side of the Atlantic and met with an accident which caused my temporary discharge, and am with me to go back when I get better. I may say that I am grateful to wear the Imperial Service Badge to show I have done something. Now I wonder which boss will be the first to offer his men four or five dollars per week to go and fight these Germans, who I have a great contempt for.

Yours truly,
C. R.

Sad Drowning in Welland

Mrs. M. A. Perrault, Charlotte street, received the sad intelligence this morning of the death of her brother, Thomas Perrault, by drowning in Welland a few days ago. The body was not recovered until yesterday. The late Mr. Perrault was a native of Hastings, where he resided until about seventeen years ago when he went to Thorold, afterwards removing to Welland, where he has resided for the past eight years. He leaves a wife and two children in Welland, as well as his mother and four brothers in Peterborough and district.



WHERE FREIGHTER ALEXANDRIA WAS WRECKED. Diagram shows Scarboro Bluffs where the freighter Alexandria of the Canada Steamships Lines went ashore. All her crew were rescued. The wreck is the greatest in many years in the history of Lake Ontario.

MR. LOUIS MENDEL AT RED BANK, N.J.

It will be of interest to his many friends in Peterborough to know that Mr. Louis Mendel, formerly of this city, is pursuing his art with great success in Red Bank, New Jersey. He has recently purchased a new seven-passenger touring car. He still retains his interest in Peterborough and says the Examiner is the best paper he has seen yet.

FINANCES OF THE DOMINION

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Aug. 6.—An increase of ninety-two million dollars in temporary loan, an increase of over thirteen millions in the net debt of the Dominion and a further increase of over sixteen million dollars in Dominion notes outstanding at the beginning of August are the chief features in the liability columns of the Dominion's financial statement for the month of July, last just published. An increase of $413,264 in Customs revenue of $81,427 in excess of $375,000 in Post Office receipts, with a decrease of $525,921 in the Public Works revenue, including railways, and a further decrease of $230,698 in miscellaneous revenue, are the chief features on the revenue side of the statement.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF PATRIOTIC LEAGUE

A meeting of all the members of the Speakers' Patriotic League is called for this evening at eight o'clock in their headquarters at the corners of Brock and Hunter street. A telegram from Col. Henning has been received in connection with the proposed Peterborough battalion and it is very important that every member of the local branch of the league be present tonight. The principal discussion will be the proceeding with the raising of the battalion. Hence a complete expression of opinion is required. It is understood that if Peterborough actually decides and secures the warrant to go ahead with the work the battalion will be manned and to a large extent officered in Peterborough and that the men may remain here during the greater part of the fall and winter.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Three young ladies of this city, with a very patriotic spirit, who if they were young gentlemen would have enlisted, but as they are not would like to know through your paper, if you could give us full particulars about the Red Cross Nurses Society and if not, where we could find out for ourselves. If it should prove that we were not sufficiently educated to go in training for a nurse, would like to know in what way we could be of personal use to those brave soldiers who have gone to the front, especially in a case where one has no means to pay to their comfort.

Trusting to receive an early reply through your paper, we are

CRASHED THROUGH THE RAILING INTO TWENTY-SIX FEET OF WATER AND FIVE PEOPLE ARE DROWNED

Tragic Ending to a Five-Car Holiday Excursion Party at Lake Muskoka--Were Trapped By Storm Shields and Cover---Three Escaped.

PORT SYDNEY, Muskoka, Aug 6.—Five Toronto people met death here yesterday afternoon under tragic circumstances. They were passengers on the last automobile — a touring Ford — of a five-car holiday excursion party. Hastening homeward in a driving rain, the ill-fated car struck the guard floating bridge over the north end of Long Lake, shied half way over, crashed through the fourfoot railing, and plunged down into the twenty-six feet of water.

There were eight passengers. All sank with the car, trapped by the storm shields and cover. Henry R. Alley and his nine-year-old son, Fred, Miss F. M. Lawson and her nephew, Angus Lawson, and Beverley Swabey were drowned. Harold Swabey and Douglas Lawson, both about thirteen years of age, escaped. John Clarke, the owner and driver, was also saved. Clarke lives at Utterson.

Three Struggle to Safety.

All the victims were summer visitors at the Clyffe House. The party was returning from an automobile trip, and the ill-fated car was about three-quarters of the way across the pontoon bridge when it dashed over the side. There was not a moment's warning. The people went down with the car. Clarke, the driver, and the two young boys managed to release themselves, and rose to the surface. Grasping the bridge, they pulled themselves out.

Mr. J. P. McNalley, who lives near the scene of the accident, saw the tragedy and rushed to the scene. Seeing that he could do little himself, he telephoned the hotel, and in a few minutes citizens and summer visitors arrived in cars. Several of them, including Albert Bell, dived. Their efforts at first were unsuccessful, and it was nearly an hour before the first body, that of Angus Lawson, was brought to the surface. Dr. Porter, who was passing, did all in his power to revive the boy, but was unable to resuscitate him. Grappling irons had meantime been obtained from Port Sydney, and at 6 o'clock the last body had been recovered.

Fastening Themselves In.

According to the statement of Dr. MacDonald, Coroner, when the accident occurred the occupants were fastening on the side shields of the car to protect themselves from the rain. In the front seat with the driver was Miss Lawson, who had the boy Swabey on her knee. Mr. Alley and the others were in the back seat.

The auto in plunging in the water did not overturn, and was found upright by the divers in the bottom of the lake. It was pulled out last evening.

Tears His Way Out.

Douglas Lawson, one of those who escaped, said that as soon as the car struck the railing he commenced to tear his way out, and continued to battle until the car settled on the bottom. Pulling himself through the side he rose to the surface and grabbed the bridge.

Dr. MacDonald opened an inquest last evening and adjourned until Monday afternoon. All five bodies were taken to the Town Hall at Utterson, where they were lying last night, with Constable Brown in charge.

Dr. MacDonald said that Mr. Alley's watch, which he took from his clothing, was stopped at precisely 3 o'clock, which is also the time given by others as to when the accident occurred. The last body recovered was in the water three hours.

The floating bridge is maintained by the Government, and during the summer months carries very heavy traffic. It is kept together by cables. The lake is one mile west of Utterson. The other cars of the auto party were some minutes ahead and did not know of the accident until they reached the hotel.

"Fences Across the Road to Hell"

Subject of Evangelist Sharpe's Discourse at the Big Tabernacle Last Evening

Last night every seat in the Hunter street Tabernacle was occupied when Evangelist Sharpe's sermon was truly a great service. He [illegible] was greatly moved and as every night more people came forward at the Evangelist's invitation to "take a stand" for Christ. Christians who had been living [illegible] when genuine revivals were common knowledge would say with [illegible] heart, "Thank God the days of revival are not past," for the meeting last night was one [illegible] and it didn't matter where the presence of God was, it could be truly felt.

The subject of the [illegible] address (which by the way was one of the most powerful and convincing sermons we have ever heard) was "Fences Across the Road to Hell."

He spoke from the Master's words in Matthew, 5:40, "And ye will not come to Me that ye might have life." "There is only one reason why you are unsaved if you are not saved to-night," said the preacher, "and that reason is found in my text. God has done everything possible for a lost sinner and just God is ready to keep you and me out of hell. There are a whole lot of people who are saying, 'If God is a loving and just God why doesn't He save us.' We read in His word that He is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance, and the reason you are not saved is because you won't be saved. If you will obey you can be saved to-night.

I believe in hell because my Bible tells me that there is one God pity you if you are waiting till Eternity to find out if there is a hell. If there is a heaven, there is one who [illegible] believe in [illegible] hell you believe it unbelief will take you there. You can't get to [illegible] hell by your unbelief.

There are people in this [illegible] who are climbing the fences which God has placed across the road to hell.

The Evangelist mentioned four of these fences. The first fence across the road is the Bible. I read in the Toronto papers to-day that there are [illegible] men killed and [illegible] wounded in the great war and why Mr. Alley? It is because they have left the Word of God and its place [illegible] human culture in the place of the Bible. Germany sent pamphlets to the front to prepare them for battle, and when the empty and they could see [illegible] the words of God. Voltaire, one of the last of the [illegible] infidel [illegible] the physicians half of his wealth if he would prolong his life six weeks, to which the physician answered that he could not promise him life for six days. Then Voltaire said, "Well and you're going with me," and Voltaire died [illegible] with the fear of God. We're coming to a time [illegible]

God has placed in that [illegible] another fence, and that is [illegible] [illegible] Christ, which is the only way to heaven. [illegible] Christ, which is the only way to heaven. [illegible] Christ, which is the only way to heaven.

EMPIRES EASILY WON FROM THE CLASSICS YESTERDAY

The Final Score Was 14 to 5---The Stay-at-homes on the Weekly Half Holiday Got a Chance to See Some City League Ball.

When the Empires and Classics met at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon to play off a tie game it was a cinch for the Empires, who made it 14 to 5.

The first four innings looked like a real ball and the fans settled down to witness a close game to the finish. But the Empires got away in the fifth and sixth scoring five runs in each of these frames. The only time the Classics looked really dangerous was the eighth, when Shey tallied four times.

The Empires were without the services of Rahmel on the mound and Johnston pitched. He surprised the fans when he came out into the field and only one runner advanced to first. Cheetham started for the Classics but retired in the sixth in favor of Delmore Rose.

Entries Should Be Sent In Soon

Those on the committee in charge of the T.A.S. Field Day on Saturday, August 14th are busy making final arrangements. A special attraction will be the Inter-Catholic Baseball League Championship. There is also a good programme of sports with a good list of prizes. The events will be open to all athletes in the city who are in good standing.

Entries should be sent in as soon as possible to the secretary, G. J. Maher, Review office.

CITY LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP MAY BE DECIDED TO-MORROW

To-morrow's City League games will probably settle the championship. It hinges on East City beating the Empires, which would give Dan McCabe's team the bacon.

There is still a chance that the Thistles might tie East City for first place. Should the Empires beat East City and the Thistles win from the Classics the stage would be accomplished.

With East City winning, the baseball scene in the city will be about finished with the exception of some exhibition games with outside teams, including Monday's game with St. Paul's of Toronto. There promises to be a bumper crowd out to see to-morrow's games. The less we hear said regret that the Empires and Classics were unable to present their regular lineup yesterday afternoon, as several of the regulars were unable to get away from work. They will all be on hand to-morrow afternoon, however. The East City team is still intact for the game, although several of the players are having an enlistment fever. Cavanagh and Knapman are off the Thistles, but Manager Yeoho has some likely substitutes.

Empire Knot Belting has signed to pitch for the Brantford Club in the Canadian League and he will not be available here any longer.

THE ALL-STARS ARE READY FOR GAME ON CIVIC HOLIDAY

The All Stars will be strong for the game on Monday with St. Paul's of Toronto, when they meet at Riverside Park Monday being Civic Holiday. The City League officials have been put to considerable expense to supply a good attraction for those of the citizens who remain at home.

The Toronto team (St. Paul's) which have been secured, is one of the best amateur teams in the city of Toronto, and they are reported to have a good chance to win the amateur championship of Ontario. At present they are leading in the Don Valley League.

The All Stars had a practice at Riverside Park last night, the Empire Class [illegible] and they were asked to be on hand. All players who were asked to come out last night yesterday are requested to be at the Park in uniform on Monday.

Mr. J. Daly's Mare Won Easily at Cleveland

A Cleveland paper gives the following account of Mr. Jame Daly's (Peterborough) pacing mare Yedna at that city.

Yedna, the little Canadian mare that looks like the pacing sensation of the 1915 two-year-olds, was the surprise at Glenwood Tuesday afternoon, and furnished the first thrill of the day, covering a fast half in 1:02 1-4 and equalling the track record of 2:06 1-4 when she passed the stand pulled down to a walk.

Yedna was entered for the 2:15 pace. That was all that was needed for her to make the fastest good 2:15 pace. But that is not all, as will be told presently. Yedna is owned by Mrs. Grace M. Baker Foster, wife of Dr. Foster, Canadian veterinarian, and is trained by Gilbert M. Foster, brother of the Doctor, and was ready for the fight. As a result the Canadian equine queen was not extended.

Immediately upon Grace M. Foster rising on the right side of the driver's sheepskin lap robe to make trouble, Fogarty took Yedna back. In fact he kept her back all the way during the final quarter and she was actually pulled down to a jog at the finish. The heat was a corker, and if Yedna had been asked to go the full mile she would have beaten the fastest heat of the 2:15 pace.

PROPOSES FUND FOR MACHINE GUNS, ETC.

Citizen Desires to Help But Cannot Purchase Entire Gun

A citizen of ordinary means who cannot afford a machine gun, but who desires to contribute something toward the present cause, has suggested that a fund might be opened by him or others who may be actuated by the same feeling. He would like to do his bit but cannot be able to pay for only a portion of a machine gun. There may be other citizens who are interested in this matter, and if so those who are thinking in terms of machine guns or other extras for the men, might possibly be able to begin a movement which would enable them to do their share.

TRAGEDY AVERTED AT EEL'S CREEK

STONEY LAKE Aug. 6.—A double drowning tragedy was narrowly averted at Eel's Creek, Stoney Lake, on Friday last, when two young men from Rochester, summering at the lake, were rescued by a launch in charge of Miss Norma Mitchell, of Toronto, and a party of Toronto friends, including Mr. H. Adams of 110 Hazleton Avenue, Toronto. As the launch neared the falls the men were seen in the water, while two ladies on the shore were frantically calling for help. The launch was slowed down and a rope thrown, after which the boat was paddled close and the men drawn in. Both were in an exhausted condition and were taken to Mr. Mitchell's cottage, where they were cared for until able to proceed to their hotel.

THE DOCTOR NEEDED

A CERTAIN country minister was the owner of a swift and spirited horse. On one occasion, while he was driving through the village, he overtook the local doctor on foot.

"Jump in, doctor," he said, pulling up. "I've got a horse here that goes pretty well."

The doctor jumped in and the parson drove off. The horse did go well, in the sense of speed, but in a little while it began to behave badly, and ended by tipping over the carriage and spilling out both the occupants.

"Look here," said the doctor, "what do you mean by inviting me to ride behind a horse like that?"

"Well, you see, luckily this time there are no bones broken, but I always like to have a doctor with me when I drive that animal."

The full particulars of the accident are not at hand yet, but it is reported that he was knocked down by a motor truck and sustained a scalp wound, but as far as could be learned this morning no bones were broken. Mrs. Hall went to Toronto at noon to-day, and it is hoped that the accident is not more serious than the report gives out. Mr. Hall is at present confined to the hospital.

WEDDING BELLS

BROMWELL—BOYLE.

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. Boyle, 16 Stewart Street, on August 4th, when their daughter, Lillas May was married to Mr. J. Alfred Bromwell at 11.30 a.m., by the Rev. B. Greatrix. The bride entered the room to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Gladys Brewster. The room was tastefully decorated with white bunting and flags. The bride was attired in cream satin with overdress of silk crepe trimmed with seed pearls. The bridal couple were unattended, only the immediate friends of each being present.

The presents were numerous and costly, showing the high esteem in which the bridal couple were held. The happy couple left on the 3.47 train for Toronto and other points west.

On their return they will reside at 191 Rubidge street.

OBITUARY

THE LATE WM. RUSSELL

MILLBROOK, Aug. 6.—The late William Russell was born in Devonshire, England, in 1826, and came to Canada with his parents in 1831, when two years old. The family settled in Peterborough, where Mr. Russell's father was afterwards killed at Whitlow's Rapids, now known as the locks. The family then moved to Emily, where his mother died. While living in Peterborough Mr. Russell married Miss Jane Meharry, daughter of the late Andrew Meharry, afterwards moving to Cavan, where he engaged in farming, and later to Millbrook, where he has resided over 30 years. He joined L.O.L. No. 50 in 1853, and for 62 years has never missed a 12th of July parade till the past year. His wife predeceased him 12 years ago, and one son, John, by six years. Four daughters and three sons survive, viz.: Mrs. Henderson, Pontypool; Mrs. Ward, Carmel; Mrs. McCurry, and Mrs. Fisher, Millbrook; the sons are Robert, Bethany; Henry, Cobourg and Levi, Millbrook. One brother, John of Peterborough, also survive him.

Crop Situation in Smith Township

It would be difficult to estimate the damage that has resulted to the crops in Peterborough County as a result of the recent rains. One week ago the country was in an exceptionally flourishing condition, and to-day one sees on every hand the devasting effects of the rain and wind storm which swept over this portion of the country a few days ago. In conversation with Mr. John Telford, of Bridgenorth, the Examiner learned that the situation in that particular section of the country is anything but promising. The oat crop was laid low and also much of the spring wheat and corn. A portion of this may recover so as to make it possible to harvest it in the regular way but a lot of it will have to be cut one way. That is to say, the binder will only be able to operate from the opposite direction to which the crop is inclined. That means cutting the field from one side only which is not only a prolonged operation but incurs considerable extra expense. Then again the crop will not ripen to such good advantage when it is flattened out. Much of the corn may recover and also the barley which is not so heavy in the straw. The fall wheat is all in the shock, and the farmers are only waiting for fine weather in order to put the crop under cover.

Russians in Retirement Defend Railways and Inflict Blows on Invaders

Teuton Onslaught in East Has Reached Its High Tide---Abandon Novo Georgievsk---Autonomy For Poland

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—With the great Russian fortresses of Warsaw and Ivangorod captured, and the fall of Riga, the capital of the Baltic provinces, imminent, the Austro-German onslaugh has reacher its high tide in the east. These events are likely soon to be followed by the pronouncement of a united and semi-autonomous Poland, embracing not only the territory wrested from the Russians, but the Austrian crownland of Galicia.

Meantime the Russian armies are fighting their way backward toward Russia proper, inflicting blows on the invaders wherever possible, trying to fend them off the railways running north and south, in order that the ends of the German nippers may not meet and in closing bring disaster to Russian arms.

POSITION OF THE ARMY.

The position of the army of Grand Duke Nicholas now is a matter of solicitude, as the occupation of Warsaw is believed to be a prelude to a greater purpose, that of enveloping the retreating forces.

Petrograd reports show the Grand Duke has retired to the right bank of the Vistula both at Warsaw and Ivangorod, destroying the bridges at both points and contesting the German advance across the river.

The fate of the army of Russia defending the Vistula front is still unknown. The failure of the German War Office to make any mention of extensive captures in announcing the fall of Warsaw has, however, caused a feeling of great optimism among British military experts. They feel sure that, if the Germans had trapped any considerable number of the forces of Grand Duke Nicholas, the fact would have been proclaimed.

British military men pay the highest possible tribute to the masterly strategy of Grand Duke Nicholas, which has enabled the Russians time and again to slip out of dangerously tight places.

Back of the retiring Russians is the vast morass of central Poland with few railways and primitive roads, making virtually impossible a quick movement of guns and supplies; while back of Warsaw, the only fortress available as a rallying point for the Russians is Brest-Litovsk. Thus the Russians are menaced by General Von Buelow's columns bending southward and by Field Marshall Von Mackensen's southern army bending northward.

The fall of Ivangorod proper, forecast in the Russian retirement from the west of the city, is officially reported yesterday in bulletins, both from Berlin and Vienna.

AUTONOMY FOR POLAND.

The occupation of Warsaw now is centring attention on a series of important events that are being arranged. First will be the selection of a German governor. Reports indicate the appointee will be a German prince, possibly a son of the German Emperor or an Austrian archduke, who will be vested with authority akin to that which Napoleon gave to his stepson and to his marshals as kings of occupied territory.

The German offer of autonomy is regarded as a bid for the support of the population of Poland as against a similar declaration of Emperor Nicholas promising eventual autonomy under Russian suzerainty. The outcome of these events in Warsaw probably will determine the political status of Poland during the war.

FACE WINTER CAMPAIGN.

What the Germans will do next in a military way after attempting to complete their enveloping movement is a matter of much speculation. If the campaign against the Russians is not energetically pushed there is the possibility of the present victories being undone, while if an offensive in the east is continued the Germans face the rigors and dangers of a winter campaign in Russia.

Conservative students here think it will result in a compromise, in which the Germans will withdraw part of their eastern army, leaving enough men to maintain and secure the defensive positions when they have dug themselves in.

BERLIN, Aug. 7.—The retreat of the Russian armies was impeded by terrific rainstorms and Germans hope to capture thousands.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 7.—Grand Duke Nicholas has telegraphed that within one month the Russians will be on an offensive that the Germans cannot stem.

"Adriatic" Loaded With War Stuffs

NEW YORK, Aug. 5. A year ago yesterday the Adriatic of the White Star line, left New York with 150 first cabin passengers, most of them Englishmen returning to answer the call to colours, and no cargo. Yesterday she took only thirteen cabin passengers, but she was loaded to the water line with 18,000 tons of munitions of war.

She is the largest British passenger steamship now in service, and because of her speed not the slightest precaution, such as sandbags around her steam steering gear, were taken. Among her passengers were fifteen Americans.

In all classes she had 174 passengers. Among them were Robert Frank and George Moreley, from Saskatoon, Canada, who are going to join the British army. They have just completed the trip from their home to New York, a distance of 2963 miles, on a motorcycle with a side car attachment.

HOME FOR CAPTAIN SCOTT'S MOTHER.

The King has granted a set of apartments at Hampton Court Palace to Mrs. Scott, mother of Captain Scott, the explorer, who died in 1912 after reaching the South Pole. The Times adds that the apartments are in Tennis Court Lane, near which the ancient moat used to run, and were for many years occupied by Lady Palliser, widow of Major-General Sir Charles Palliser.

RUSSIANS ARE IN U. S. TO BUY HAND GRENADES FOR ARMY

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 6. The Russian military commission is reported as making every effort to obtain the construction in large numbers of hand grenades in the United States. This is a new form of weapon which the present war has developed, not new in idea, for the Chinese used something of the sort many years ago, but in mechanical arrangement the present day hand grenade is a highly perfected machine.

The Russians have been depending largely on Danish works for hand grenades, it is said, but this source of supply is said to have suddenly closed, due it is declared in certain quarters to pressure exerted by the Germans. Until recently Denmark was able to trade with Russia via the Baltic, but the activity of the German Baltic fleet has put a stop to ocean traffic and Danish communication with Russia is now confined to the Archangel route around the North Cape and overland across Norway and Sweden to Lapeca at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia.

The Danish type of hand grenade is reported to be the best of the sort in Europe today. It is understood, however, that Danish Rifle factories are turning out 10,000 a day. It is known, however, that the Danes have brought the construction price down as low as fifty-three cents for an empty grenade.

American firms now are figuring out the cost of making these grenades in this country, preliminary estimates place the cost at New York about $1.75 a grenade. The Russians, it is learned, are not at all arbitrary in the matter of material used. Sheet metal, brass, or even tin may be used, so long as the walls of the grenade are sufficiently strong to hold the explosive and give firm support to the fuse attachment. The grenades are carried in a bag by the soldier, and in size are much larger than a baseball. The grenade thrower crawls as near as possible to the enemy trenches and hurls the grenades much as one would a ball. It takes practice to become expert, and one who is accustomed to throw a ball should possess the element necessary for the making of a first-class grenadier. The grenades are exploded by fuse action and on bursting produce exactly the same effect as that of a shell when fired from a gun. During the civil war in the United States it was a frequent practice in the navy to arm boarding parties with 6 and 12-pounder shells fitted with short train fuses. These fuses were ignited and hurled by the men carrying them. Many of the men of the union fleet, in assaulting Fort Fisher, carried shells for throwing by hand.

An unusual feature of the present war is seen in the very fact that the grenades are possible again. Prior to August 1, military men for the most part hardly conceived it possible that troops armed with the present day long range rifle could ever approach close enough to make use of hand grenades. Not only is such the case but the Germans are even using flame projectiles, which necessitates an even closer approach to an enemy than when hand grenades are used.

The Russian military commission in this country is anticipating little trouble in moving forward quickly great quantities of supplies from the United States direct to the firing line as soon as the new double track railway from Ekaterinburg to Petrograd is completed. The new road is to be finished by October 1st next, and will be forever beyond the open reach from the German shores on the Arctic Ocean to the Russian capital.

Russia Now Loses Use of Machine Shops

Special to The Examiner

The fall of Warsaw places in the hands of the Germans the principal maritime shops and munitions supplies plants in Poland, and leaves to Russia no other shops nearer than those along the Petrograd-Warsaw-Kherpof Railway.

For years the Warsaw shops supplemented by those of Lodz and Vilna, have been the chief contributors to the industrial development in Poland and Western Russia. It is estimated that fully fifty thousand mechanics were employed in the Warsaw shops and building trades. The works of Gerlach & Pulst, at Warsaw, were the largest machine-tool works in Poland, and this firm was conducting, prior to the war, its manufacture of machinery for making machinery in strictly American lines. This same establishment, by reason of manufacturing in series, has been able for several years to offset German competition and had in consequence earned a hearty share of German enmity. Unless the valuable plant has been destroyed by the retreating Russians it is fair to assume that the Germans will turn the Gerlach & Pulst shops to making munitions for their own account.

Other noteworthy machinery works at Warsaw are those of K. Rudzki & Co.; Rohn, Zielinski & Co., and Borman, Szwede & Co. These four great plants are among the best in their lines in Europe and were engaged in all lines of machinery construction, railway and bridge construction and equipment for shop installations. The loss of these fine works will be in itself a heavy blow to the Russians.

With the loss of the Polish plants Russia must now appeal even stronger to the shops at Petrograd, Moscow Khehoff and Sebastopol. The Riga works are in danger of going the same as those of Warsaw, and with the loss of the Polish plants the Russian army has no source of supplies nearer by railroad than thirty hours' travel.

What to Use and Avoid On Faces That Perspire

Skin to be healthy must breathe. It also must perspire must expel through the pores its share of the body's waste material. Certain creams and powders clog the pores, interfering both with elimination and breathing, especially during the heated period. If more women understood this, there would be fewer self-ruined complexions. If they would use ordinary mercolized wax they would have healthy complexions. This remarkable substance actually absorbs a bad skin, also unclogging the pores. Result: The fresher, younger under-skin is permitted to breathe and to show itself. The exquisite new complexion gradually comes out, one free from any appearance of artificiality. Obtain an ounce of mercolized wax from your druggist and try it. Apply nightly like cold cream, for a week or two, washing it off morning.

To remove wrinkles, here's a marvelous effective treatment, which acts naturally and harmlessly. Dissolve one powdered saxolite in pint witch hazel and use as a wash after.

Mutinies in German Garrisons

Examiner Special.

HAVRE, Aug. 7.—Serious mutinies have broken out in German garrisons. At Liege, Ghent and Bruges, corps who were ordered to the Yser front refused to march. A number of ring leaders have been reported shot.

Patent leather shoes should be carefully wiped off with a soft cloth when they are removed and then a few drops of oil should be rubbed into them. This will keep the leather soft and prevent it from cracking.

Have Captured Summit of San Michele

Special to The Examiner

TURIN, Aug. 7.—Italian troops have stormed and captured the summit of Monte San Michele, one of the peaks dominating Goritz. Despatches received here to-day said the Italian attacks have been renewed with a fierceness that makes the fall of the Austrian fortress in the near future a practical certainty.

Dares All Forces of the Kaiser On the West

Special to The Examiner

PARIS, France, Aug. 7. (Special cable.)—At every point on the French-British-Belgian lines from Switzerland to the North Sea, there reigns a spirit of optimism and confidence that dares all the forces of Kaiser Wilhelm, from the eastern front, or from elsewhere, to attempt another march westward towards Paris and be annihilated. The whole situation is summed up in a dogged determination that war shall not end till the allies are in Germany, with their guns battering the enemies' positions across the Rhine. Such is the message that the allies' soldiers send to their people at home, on the anniversary of the declaration of war and on the night that the news was received that the Germans have taken Warsaw. Backing up this spirit of confidence is the most marvellous plan of defences the world has ever seen. The allied armies have not been idle during last few weeks. Every soldier has been an engineer, sapper and contributed his labour towards the upbuilding of fortifications, calculated to withstand even Germany's unheard of weapons.

NOT THE BIGGEST
BUT THERE'S NONE BETTER
The size of an institution doesn't necessarily determine the quality of its product or service.
The biggest doesn't always produce the best.
It all depends upon the quality of the material used, the skill and interest of the workman, and the intentions of "the man behind."
We frankly admit that ours is not the largest Optical Establishment in Ontario.
But we do maintain that, with our thoroughly modern equipped shop, and with well paid workmen personally interested in its welfare, and working under the supervision of Mr. Fowler, we get better results at less cost to the customer from our parlors than do the larger shops.
Guaranteed quality, better prices, and all-round better service—that is what you are assured at Fowler's Optical Parlors.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

TESTING A BETROTHED

It Did Not Turn Out Exactly as Expected.

By JOHN Y. LARNED

"Alec, one of the most dangerous things in the world is to interfere in a love affair. I am not going to interfere exactly. That's not the right name for it, but I am your brother, and since you are going to take the matrimonial leap in the dark I venture to suggest a test to be applied to the girl you are about to marry."

"Mildred Huntington needs no test. She is perfect in every respect."

"Granted; but will not a proof of this add to your comfort? I will not deny that Mildred is perfect in every respect. She may be this and yet under certain circumstances think it advisable to marry some other person than you."

"What do you mean?"

"You know how hungry our American girls are for foreign titles."

"Some of them."

"Suppose Mildred should meet a British earl, a French duke, an Austrian or Italian prince, and he should propose to make her his wife, are you sure that she would stand by you?"

"Perfectly."

"Then there is nothing to be said."

This dialogue occurred at a hotel in Maine. Alec and Fred Winston were members of a party that had been together there for several weeks, and the men were about to finish their outing by a hunt in the vicinity of Moosehead lake. Several of the girls were disgruntled at being deprived of what they considered the best part of the season's pleasures, camping in a wilderness—and demanded to be taken on the hunting trip. The men demurred, but so persistent were the women that they finally triumphed. More elaborate preparations were made, a chaperon was obtained, and instead of returning to civilization the party, consisting of five men and four women, started for the wilderness.

"Fred," said Alec the morning of their departure, "I wish you hadn't put that notion into my head."

"What notion?"

"About testing Mildred. I don't like to do it, but the temptation is becoming irresistible. I shall make the test as soon as we get home."

"You mean when you get where you will find a man to play the part of a titled aristocrat?"

"Yes."

When the party reached their camping ground and had settled themselves in their temporary canvas home, Fred Winston, who had made up the party, announced that they must have a guide and he was going out to find one. Setting out, he soon came upon a party of hunters who were about to leave the woods and asked if they had a guide who wished another job when they released him.

"There's a chance for you, Hawkesworth," said one of the party.

A man about thirty years old asked some questions about what was required and when informed said that he wouldn't mind taking the job. Having gathered his belongings, he bade goodby to his friends and started to camp with Winston. Hawkesworth was an Englishman, and Winston noticing his British accent conceived the idea of using him to make the test he had proposed to his brother upon Miss Huntington.

"How would you like," he said to the guide, "to play the part of a nobleman?"

Hawkesworth looked up at him, but made no reply. Winston gradually unfolded his scheme. Hawkesworth listened to what he said without comment till he had concluded, then said that he would not pass himself off for anything more than what he was, but he had no objection to Winston declaring that he was a prince of royal blood if he liked.

"That's all I wish," said the latter.

When they reached camp Winston introduced the guide in this wise: "Permit me to present my friend Hawkesworth of London. He has the mania for hunting common among English bloods and is in the Maine woods for moose. He has consented at my invitation to honor us by joining our party, and, since he knows the best hunting grounds, will pilot us. We won't need any other guide."

Hawkesworth was made welcome, and when Fred Winston intimated that he was the Earl of Bingleton there was quite a flutter in the camp, especially among the women.

"He doesn't look like an earl at all," said one of the girls. "He's very ordinary."

"Why should an earl look different from any other man?" said his interlocutor. "Besides, how can style be detected from one who wears a flannel shirt? You can't judge a man by his clothes. They say that the worst dressed assembly in the world is the House of Lords. They don't [illegible]

[illegible] that his fiancee had [illegible] Hawkesworth to [illegible] proposed. Whether it would [illegible] ter to be an earl, he [illegible] his fiancee [illegible] who regarded Hawkesworth with curiosity were desirous to know how they should address an earl, and were told that they might call him what they liked so long as they didn't call him anything above Tom Hawkesworth.

Hawkesworth, judged by certain attributes, was just the man a woman would admire. There was a natural air of dominating force about him. He was a silent man. It is the man who is always expressing opinions who does not get credit for depth, even if he has it. He who never talks is supposed to be always thinking. Great generals have usually been reticent men.

When the party was made up it was supposed that the women would remain in camp while the men went out to hunt, but they had not been in the woods long before it was proposed that the girls go out with the men to shoot moose. They were in camp costume, which favored the plan, and there were plenty of guns. So the four girls went with the men one morning on a hunting tramp, and it was understood that each girl should be assigned a protector. Fred Winston made the assignments and deputed Hawkesworth to be the guardian of Miss Huntington. On reaching a certain spring where numerous tracks indicated that animals came for water the party scattered, the several couples going in different directions for game, it being agreed that they should meet later at the spring.

As Hawkesworth and Miss Huntington took their departure the lady informed the guide that she wished to shoot a moose and for him to give way to her. He responded that there was no reason why she should not do so provided a moose gave them an opportunity. In time, hearing a breaking of branches, he notified his charge to be ready to fire, and a little later when they stepped out into the open space a large buck moose was seen feeding a few hundred yards from them.

"Wait till he exposes his flank," said the guide.

He had scarcely spoken the words before the animal turned.

"Fire!" said the guide.

Miss Huntington fired, but instead of hitting the moose behind the foreshoulder she inflicted an irritating wound in a nonvital part. The animal, enraged, charged upon them.

Even a skillful hunter may wince at seeing a wild animal coming down on him to crush him. Miss Huntington's legs gave way under her, and she dropped on her knees. Hawkesworth dropped beside her, but on one knee instead of two, and leveled his rifle at the moose. Miss Huntington had no doubt that she would be trampled by the infuriated animal. There was a crack beside her, and the moose dropped, plunging forward at the same time till his nose was within a dozen feet of them.

Then Miss Huntington completed her collapse by falling in a faint. When she came to herself she was in Hawkesworth's arms and he was looking down into her face with an expression that filled her with rapture.

If she was to be won by an exhibition of the masterfulness of man there could be nothing more effective than what had taken place. When the two joined the others nothing was said about the adventure except that they had bagged a fine specimen of the inhabitants of the woods. But it was not long before Fred Winston told his brother that Mildred Huntington had fallen before the test to which she had been subjected. It was no news to Alec. He had seen immediately after the hunting party that he had been supplanted. But he did not know that his betrothed's heart had been taken away from him by love instead of her desire for a title.

The party did not long hang together. Alec Winston and his fiancee were evidently at odds, and this threw a damper on the whole party. As soon as a sufficiency of game had been shot the tents were struck. When they took their departure Hawkesworth remained behind.

On the way Miss Huntington made it known to the other girls that her engagement to Alec Winston was broken. When asked the cause she replied that he had offered to release her and she had accepted the offer. Of course the announcement was made to the men by Alec, who sympathized with him, though the girls were not disposed to blame Mildred. In their hearts they felt that an earl was worth more than a commoner any day, and they were not sure but that they would have acted likewise under similar circumstances. It was supposed that the Earl of Bingleton was poverty stricken, but Miss Huntington was rich. The match, if she succeeded in capturing him, would be a good one.

That Miss Huntington had captured the prize became evident during the winter from the fact that cards were issued announcing the marriage of Mildred Huntington and Thomas Lawrence Hawkesworth. Then every one opened his eyes. What did it mean that the groom was announced on his wedding cards without his title? Surely a nobleman would not remain incognito.

Gradually the truth leaked out. Hawkesworth was no earl at all and long before he proposed to Miss Huntington he disabused her mind of this false impression. He was the son of an English clergyman. Having a taste for woods and waters, he had spent much of his time in American forests, being enabled to do so by a small inheritance that gave him £500 a year.

And so it was that a desire to test his fiancee lost her to Alec Winston. He never quite forgave his brother for leading him to make the test, but Fred says:

"What's the difference, Alec? If she did not leave you for a title she left you for a man she liked better."

Entire Family Stricken With Cholera.

YOUNGEST CHILD DIED.

Mrs. E. Slade, 376 Logan Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "When I first arrived in Canada, nearly four years ago, my entire family was stricken with cholera from which the youngest child died. Soon after a friend recommended Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and acting on the advice I administered it to all who were suffering with the most gratifying results. Since that first attack my children have been subject to stomach troubles, but on the first symptoms I resort to "Dr. Fowler's," and it always brings relief. I have immense faith in this medicine and always keep a bottle on hand, also I never fail to recommend it to anyone who is similarly troubled."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 70 years, and has become so universally used, that many firms have gone so far as to try and produce a substitute for it, and even claiming similar names, and saying it is "The Same" or "Just As Good."

Do not accept their word for this as these no-name, no-reputation, worthless imitations may be dangerous to your health.

The genuine "Dr. Fowler's" is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Price, 35c.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get a box of Orderine in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of Orderine increases the oxygen carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of Orderine in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address: E. J. Little Drug Co., Box 2.60, Montreal, Can.

CANNING VEGETABLES

[illegible] year when [illegible] in their [illegible] Instead of [illegible] with which to [illegible] will [illegible] constant the housewife is: Will we [illegible] vegetables in the home? If [illegible] there by saving the garden products, or will we waste this material that [illegible] be canned for neighborhood advantage?

Many people have trouble in canning peas, beans and corn. This trouble may be overcome by thorough cooking. One very satisfactory way is as follows:

Select young and tender vegetables, pack firmly in the jar, cover with cold water, and add a teaspoon of salt to each quart. Put on the rubber and top and steam for [illegible] hours in a boiler or steamer. A boiler may be used in place of a steamer if a false bottom or rack is used to keep the jars from the bottom of the boiler. Green peppers are canned very well by the cold water method. Select the green peppers, cut off the stem end and remove seeds. Parboil in open for about 15 minutes or until the peppers are tender. They should not be cooked long enough to cause them to lose their shape. Pack them in jars, pour cold water over the peppers and seal. They are ready for use any time during the winter. These peppers may be filled with cold slaw, hot over meats or other suitable fillings.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

(Edited by Dr. David H. Reeder, Chicago, Ill.)

Do It Now. That seems to be a queer heading for a talk on health but those of you who know me best know that there is generally a reason. Here it is.

One of the readers of the Home Health Club was impressed with the fact that I always advise prompt action when dangerous conditions are suspected, so when a pain in her breast became frequent she carefully examined to find the cause. To her surprise she found a lump of considerable size. At once she sought her Club book and under the heading of 'Cancer of the Breast,' found a description of just such a lump. Quite as promptly she applied a simple home treatment and in a reasonable time the lump and the pain had nearly disappeared. The fact that it did not entirely disappear, however, caused her to worry and as that would not do at all she wrote for more specific directions, which I was very glad to give. The lump was not a cancer, but if nothing had been done I am quite sure that within a year the diagnosis would have been quite definite.

I do not advise that you run to the doctor for every little ache or pain, but it is vastly better to consult him frequently and keep well than to let suspicious conditions develop incurable or dangerous diseases. If you find that diarrhoea is just getting started, go at once to your dentist and have him clean your teeth thoroughly, then go to your druggist and get about ten cents worth of Tincture of Ipecac. About four times daily, that is, before each meal and before going to bed put four drops of the tincture into one-half glassful of water and brush your teeth thoroughly with it. By this method you will not only save your teeth, but prevent such ailments as rheumatoid, arthritis and endocarditis, but other conditions as disagreeable if not so serious. Do it now, is good advice.

Here is a medicinal bath for the nervously worn and those who cannot sleep for nights. It was the prescription of an old physician. Take of sea salt four ounces, spirits of ammonia two ounces, of pure alcohol eight ounces, and sufficient hot water to take a full quart of the liquid. Dissolve the sea salt in the hot water, and pour into the alcohol the spirits of ammonia and camphor. Fill the salt water and let stand until cool, shake well and bottle for use. With a soft sponge dipped in the mixture wet over the surface of the whole body. Rub vigorously until the skin glows. When nervous or 'blue' or wakeful do not omit this bath. The rest and refreshing that follow will repay the effort required to prepare it.

THE TACTFUL WIFE

The best way to manage a husband is by tact. Arguing, complaining, and grumbling, will not produce half the effect that tact does.

First of all, the wife must show her husband loving understanding and sympathy. She must let him see that she considers him in everything. She must not answer him back if he is cross.

When he is faultfinding and impatient she should be just the reverse. Sharp answers and bitter words never yet made for happiness.

The tactful wife will always be pleasant and agreeable to her husband's friends, ready to entertain them even if her partner brings them home unexpectedly to dinner.

Even though she may not like some of her husband's friends, the wife who loves her husband will never let his friends see it.

Docotr Said Sciatica--- Rheumatism--Lumbago

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to see me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESSING SACQUE.

By Anabel Worthington.

This natty garment is ideal for summer weather, as it may be made of practically all materials and will require only an hour or so of time.

The garment is cut in a single piece, but in most cases it will be necessary to seam it in the centre of the back. This must be determined by the width of the material used and also by the pattern of it. Especial care must be used when cutting any one piece garment from striped materials, as they look badly unless the stripes run in similar manner at both sides.

The neck of this dressing sacque is open in V shape and there is a little flare below the belt. There is no division at the waistline, but the placing of the belt gives a broken effect. The sleeves are of three-quarter length.

The little cap is also a one piece article and the band across the face is the only separate piecing. The cap may be made of the same material as the sacque, or if this be too heavy to be pretty a thin silk or net may serve instead.

For the dressing sacque there are some very attractive cotton voiles and also some mercerized cottons of small price which will be delightful for summer wear.

The sacque pattern, No. 7,239, is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 3¼ yards of 36 inch material with 2 yards of ribbon binding.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

SUBMARINES LARGER

Great Development of Craft Now Manned by Twenty Thousand

Much as the submarine, the torpedo, and the mine are discussed, few save those immediately concerned with them have anything but the haziest idea as to the extent of the under-water warfare now being waged as a preliminary to the titanic struggle of the "Day." At least two hundred and sixty-four below seas craft are engaged—the submarine fleets of Great Britain, France, Russia, Japan, Italy, Germany and Austria, with crews totalling some twenty thousand officers and men; that, to say nothing of the many employed less directly in connection with this phase of naval fighting, and those who are called to mine-laying, mine-sweeping, or torpedo duty.

For the submarine demands much surface work. There must be submarine floating docks for the cripples; experts in submarine construction; seaplanes to search for those dark patches in the semi-transparent sea-green which denote the presence of submarines or mines; attendant ships for the aerial scouts; destroyer flotillas to fight the submarines and ward them off the capital ships; and, in addition, constructors of underwater defences.

All of this is of vital importance for the submarines of to-day are by no means those of yesterday. They have gained immeasurably in safety, efficiency, size, and armament; have come to deserve the name "Daylight Torpedo Boat." Indeed "they are rapidly passing beyond the purely torpedo and coastal defensive stage, and are taking on to themselves the role of the ocean-cruiser." The size of these vessels has increased from 50 to 1,000 tons' displacement. They now carry not only a considerable number of the largest size torpedo, but also quick-firing guns for repelling attacks by small surface vessels, and are capable of accompanying fleets to sea.

The radius of action of the latest vessels both of the British and French navies amounts to several thousand miles. In the case of the British, the displacement has risen to 1,500 tons, the speed to 30 knots, and the armament to six torpedo tubes and four 12-pounder quick-firing guns. The torpedo is itself a submarine projectile. The extreme effective range and speed has risen from 4,000 yards at 18 knots to 7,000 yards at 45 knots or 12,000 yards at 30 knots.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS.

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B. writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

PROSPERO GALVAN HATED

As Inquisitor For Austria He Secured Information by Torture

A hundred years hence women in Ala of Italy will still threaten unruly children with the "curse of Galvan." Go into Ala to-day and ask inhabitants what they know of Prospero Galvan, and you will see their faces blanch with hatred, if no longer with terror; because there is still with them, and will be so long as they and their children's children inhabit Ala, the spectre of the sworn torturer of Ala, the Trentino renegade, the sergeant of gendarmes, and the infamous instrument of Francis Joseph.

The square, brutal face, the narrow grey eyes, cold, piercing, and pitiless; the shaven head and the massive jaw, with its huge mandibles; the low forehead of the typical criminal, and the big pointed moustachios will for many years be the nightmare of the people of the Val Lagarina. For this Galvan was a torturer by profession and instinct.

To him was entrusted the task of searching out those inhabitants of the district whose sympathies were with Italy. There is not a house which he has not robbed under pretence of searching for fugitives; there is not a family he has not blackmailed under threat of denouncing father or son or brother as "Italophil." He "made friends" of some families under pretence of being secretly on the Italian side (for he comes of a good Italian family), then baited the male members secretly and at night before a "commission of inquiry" at the headquarters of the gensarmery, and there flogged them to try to extract from them the names of "Italophils." An army of spies was in his service, and he created an atmosphere of hatred, terror, and persecution. When war appeared inevitable he sent his wife and children into Switzerland because he knew that whosoever bore his name would meet with no mercy at the hands of any Italian of the Trentino.

TOOK THE ADVICE OF HIS FRIEND

Stomach Trouble and Rheumatism Relieved By "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. L. LABRIE

598 Champlain St., Montreal.

"I have been restored to health by taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from 'Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble.' I became very weak, had frequent dizzy spells and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints and my hands swollen.

A friend advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and from the outset, they did me good. After I had started the second box, I felt I was getting well and I persevered in the treatment. I can truthfully say that 'Fruit-a-tives' is the only medicine that helped me."

LOUIS LABRIE.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the famous medicine made from fruit juices. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

PATIENCE

Take a list of successful men; compile a roll of heroes; write down the names of the great men and women of this or any generation. Without an exception you will find that each and all possessed the supreme quality of patience—precious, invaluable, and essential. Note the word "essential."

Now, think of the men who once seemed destined for big things, but who halted on the edge of success. What did they lack? Patience! What spoiled them? Impatience! For with impatience goes rashness, haste, defeat.

Fruit impatiently plucked before it is ripe makes sour eating. Yes, take that lesson from Nature. Fruit comes after the leaf, the bud, the blossom. And those come after patient preparation, digging, sowing, weeding, working, waiting.

The gardener—and what is life, but a garden, with the fruits of success for the patient toiler—who impatiently watches for seeds to sprout hastens nothing.

Results must be worked and waited for. Don't seek impatiently to anticipate them. You cannot.

The antidote to impatience is work and more work. Remember that impatience wins nothing. The delayed train comes no sooner; seeds grow no quicker; the dawn breaks no earlier; nothing is hastened. To sit and fume with impatience effects nothing except yourself.

Lay the train of causes well and truly, neglect nothing, and then wait with patience for the result.

Wait—and Work!

Impatience is exhausting mentally and physically. Fussing and fuming, foot-tapping, worrying, anxiety all take it out of you. Patience saves wear and tear, and patient folks live the longest. Those who are in a tremendous hurry for results, who quarrel with impatience, don't last in life's race. Precious vitality is drained by impatience. It's a vampire, nothing less.

Rid yourself of it!

Patience is one of the virtues, and far from the least. Unlike some other qualities, it may be acquired. Acquire it. Practice patience. Work, and wait, wait, and work. It is human to pine impatiently for quick results, but quick-grown stuff is poor, weak, and imperfect. The perfect result, the established success, the big prize waits on perfect patience.

This war has made us more patient. We were impatient enough once. Now, being obliged to wait, we do wait, and it is good for us. 'Let patience do her perfect work' is a Bible text, and it holds profound truth.

Impatience to right the world's wrongs is a fine spirit, but the growth of centuries is not altered in a day. Patience wins even there.

Belgium can wait. French can. Jeffie can, so can our trench heroes. Cannot you?

There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." Wait for the flood! The ebb goes. Dig wrong way.

Finally, patience is a hard lesson to learn, but learned, it brings calm and contentment and the result. That's the reward of patience—always the result.

So be patient.

You'll like yourself better, so will all your friends and acquaintances.

Home Remedies.

A cupful of hot salt water will very often relieve a headache when everything else fails.

A patient unable to retain food or medicine often finds much relief by placing a hot cloth over the stomach, and a cold one at the bottom of the feet. The heat draws the blood from the extremities to the stomach and the food is then retained and digested.

For a child, hot soda water is much better than stimulants and induces almost immediate perspiration.

WAR'S TOLL HEAVIER

Proportion of British Killed in Present War is Large

The Lancet, discussing the statistics of British casualties, says: In no previous war of which we have accurate statistical records has there been as great a loss of life in similar periods of time as in the present war, and the figures dealing with the army can be submitted to certain rough comparisons.

Throughout the Crimean campaign the British losses were 2,755 killed and 12,094 wounded, and our allies lost 8,250 killed and had 39,868 wounded. In the Franco-German War of 1870-71, during the whole period from July to April, the Germans had 17,570 killed and 96,189 wounded. In the Russo-Turkish War of 1877 the Russians lost 32,780 killed and had 71,246 wounded. In the South African War there were 5,256 killed in action and 25,286 wounded. In the absence of authoritative statistics as to the numbers of men engaged, it is impossible to compare the relative losses by wounds and by death in the recent campaign with previous experience.

The ratio of killed to wounded and missing is as 1 to 4.25, or 23.5 per cent. In the Crimea the ratio killed to the number wounded and missing was as 1 to 4.4, or 22.7 per cent.; in the Franco-German War of 1870-71 it was as 1 to 5.70, or 17.12 per cent.; in the Russo-Turkish War it was as 1 to 2.17, or 45.98 per cent.; in South Africa it was as 1 to 5, or 20 per cent. The proportion of killed to wounded has therefore so far been similar to, but slightly in excess of, our experiences in the Crimea and South Africa. Among officers the proportion of killed to wounded has been in the present war much higher than in the case of the men—namely, as 1 to 2.3, or 43.61 per cent.; it forms our main anxiety.

RUSS TOMMY'S HUMOR

The Princess Pierre Troubetskoi—Amelia Rives, the novelist—tells a story of a Russian soldier. This soldier, at the end of the 1915 winter campaign, was invalided home, and his aged master, hearing that he had done well in the trenches, said to him: "Well, Ivan, I have had good reports of you. Tell me what reward you would like me to give you for your splendidly patriotic work."

"Barin," said the mujik, "if you'll give me enough silver roubles to stretch from one ear to the other, I'll be content."

"But that seems a very small reward," said the old count.

"It's enough for me, barin," said the mujhik, with a laugh, and, lifting the long hair that fell upon the left side of his face, he showed that his left ear was missing—he had left it on the battlefield of Stary Sambor.

How Thin People Can Put On Flesh

A New Discovery

Thin men and women that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night! What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets. Omit the flesh cream rubons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of those a single Sargol tablet in two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, stay there fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come 60 tablets to a package, and all druggists sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

FOR HUSBANDS AND WIVES.

The young wife should always be ready to welcome to her husband's wants on his return home, and must not burden him with her trivial little vexations, for likely enough her man has had a tiresome day at his work.

She should have as nice a supper ready for him as her means will allow.

If she gives her husband the best she can afford he will be content.

Then she must be sympathetic with him, and try to understand his varying moods, and she should show an interest in his work and in his doings.

It does no end of good to a man to know that his life-partner takes a keen interest in all he does.

It is loving sympathy between husband and wife that means so much to the making of a really happy home.

If each will try to play their part to the best of their ability, not to criticize and to live up to the comradeship standard, then there is every chance of a very happy married life.

Neither the wife nor the husband should say "Oh, anything will do—we know each other so well." "Anything" won't do.

Let each contrive to give of their best whether it is tender sympathy, love, patience, tolerance, or good temper.

CROWN PRINCE'S ARMY HAMMERING AT VERDUN

Continuous Attack on French Position---Hand Grenade Encounters at Several Points on Western Front---German Attack Repulsed at Hill 213.

Special Cable to The Examiner.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—(French official).—Attacks by the Crown Prince's army on the French works around Verdun first reported in yesterday's official despatches continued throughout yesterday and last night without interruption. German infantry is hammering hard at the French lines in the western Argonne, aiming at the railway leading east to Verdun.

The official communique this afternoon reported that a violent German attack was repulsed in the region of Hill 213.

Bomb fighting of a sanguinary nature has occurred around Tracey le Val and in the region of Berry au Bac in the last 24 hours. Artillery actions and grenade combats continue around Souchez.

SUBS GETTING ONLY FISHING SMACKS.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—German submarines have sunk six English fishing smacks and set fire to the Danish schooner Hans Emil in the last 24 hours. The crews of the fishing smacks were landed safely to-day. The schooner's crew was placed aboard the Danish steamer "Tyr."

ITALIAN SUBMARINE REPORTED LOST.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—Reports have reached Rome that the Italian submarine "Nereide" was sunk by an Austrian submarine in a recent encounter in the Adriatic. The Nereide was built in 1913. She displaced 221 tons on the surface and carried a crew of 17 men.

LURING GERMANS INTO "FATHOMLESS RUSSIA."

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Telegraphing from Petrograd the correspondent of the Morning Post says: "The Russians are now beginning a centrifugal movement by which they will have several powerful armies always tempting the Germans yet deeper into fathomless Russia."

SWEDEN'S MILITARY PREPARATIONS.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The London Morning Post expressed the fear that Sweden's unfriendly attitude towards Russia may eventually lead to war. The Post reported that warlike preparations have been observed in northern Sweden, and that she is apparently becoming emboldeend by recent German successes.

ARCHBISHOP OF RIGA HOLDS LAST SERVICE.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 7.—The Archbishop of Riga held the last service at the Riga Cathedral on Thursday and, with the consistory, left the capital of the Baltic provinces.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The London correspondent of the Tribune in a letter states that it is known in Britain that at least twenty-nine German submarines have been destroyed in British waters or captured. For obvious reasons the Admiralty does not report every instance of British success in this line. It is currently reported that a huge net stretched across the Channel from Dover to Calais caught three subs in two days. At the same time Germany is continually improving and sending out new subs, but Germany's underwater blockade is not proving any more effective than when it started.

A Double Drowning Accident At South Bay, Stoney Lake

Victor Anderson and Leslie Hull Leave Belvidere Camp on a Fishing Expedition--Upturned Canoe Leads to the Recovery of the Bodies a Few Hours Later---Anderson Was an Expert Swimmer---Cause of the Accident is Unknown as There Were No Witnesses ---Victims Resided in Rochester.

Stoney Lake was the scene of a double drowning yesterday, when Victor J. Anderson, age 26, and Leslie Hull age 12, both of Rochester, lost their lives at a point known as Fish Rock. Just how the accident happened will probably never be known. The victims left Belvedere Camp early in the morning. They were supplied with all the equipment incidental to a fishing trip. Nothing more was heard of them until their upturned canoe was discovered about three o'clock in the afternoon, in the neighbourhood of Fish Rock. After a brief but futile search around the neighbourhood the significance of the upturned canoe assumed a grim reality. Grappling irons were secured and within an hour the body of Victor Anderson was taken from the lake. The body of the Hull boy was not recovered until after nine o'clock in the evening. Attached to his clothes was a fish hook and a piece of fishing line. A portion of the line was wrapped around the anchor line of the boat. It is supposed that the canoe upset following an attempt to land a fish, and that Anderson, who was an expert swimmer, lost his life in an attempt to assist his companion.

His Twenty-Sixth Birthday.

The body of Anderson was shipped to Peterborough this morning and subsequently removed on the 11.40 tram, via Grank Trunk Railway to Cobourg from which point it will be taken to Rochester, where the deceased resided. It is probable that the remains of the Hull boy will be interred in Lakefield. It is being held in Norwood pending the arrival of his father from Rochester. Anderson was Foreign Manager of the American Machinery Company, Rochester. He had been a visitor at the camp of Mrs. Hull since July 24th, and was preparing to return to Rochester. He remarked to his friends early yesterday morning that to-day (Saturday) would be his twenty-sixth birthday.

Leslie Hull was a son of Mr. Thomas Hull, of 235 Lux street, Rochester. He had been camping with his mother and sister at South Bay since early summer. Mrs. Hull originally resided in Peterborough, and has numerous friends in the city, and also in the Stoney Lake district. Three uncles of the boy assisted in the search for the bodies, while it fell to the lot of one of the uncles to recover the remains of his nephew.

Removed to Norwood.

It was a motley gathering that congregated at South Bay last evening following the recovery of the two bodies. Friends of the victims were loud in their praise of those who sought to render such help as was required under the circumstances. Both bodies were removed to Norwood where they were prepared for burial. Failure of the victims to return for dinner, first created in the minds of those concerned, suspicion that something had happened. A search was not instituted until nearly three o'clock in the afternoon, as it was first thought that Anderson and his companion had been fairly successful in their fishing trip and had decided to remain out an hour or two longer. The fact that Anderson was to return home to-day strengthened this conclusion. About three o'clock a couple of friends of the deceased started out with the intention of securing some grasshoppers for bait. They paddled in the direction of Fish Rock in the hope of running across Anderson and his companion. When some distance away from their objective they sighted the upturned canoe which they immediately recognized. A preliminary search was made in the neighbouring country in the hope that the missing ones might have landed. Failing in this grappling irons were secured with the above result.

SWEEPING VICTORY FOR THE MANITOBA LIBERALS IN TEST ELECTIONS HELD YESTERDAY

PRIVATE JOHN JORDAN

Son of Mr. James Jordan of Byersville. Private Jordan is with the 21st Battalion, at Sandling Camp, Kent, England. This was a humorous pose on board ship, Private Jordan being practically the only man in condition to smile. The others were under the effects of seasickness.

Almost Unanimous Endorsement of the Norris Government—Only Five Conservatives Elected—Inglorious End of the Rogers Party

WINNIPEG ALL LIBERAL

WINNIPEG, Aug. 7—The people of Manitoba have been on trial, and to-day, by their own verdict, they have acquitted themselves as citizens desiring an honest government and a clean Province. By an overwhelming majority the Norris Government has been sustained. The latest returns give the Liberals forty seats, the Conservatives five seats and the Social Democrats one seat. The elections in The Pas, Grand Rapids and Churchill and Nelson were deferred, and these constituencies will likely add to the Government's majority.

The unparalleled character of the landslide in Manitoba is shown by the fact that the standing of the parties in the Legislature last May, when the Roblin Government resigned, was twenty eight Conservatives as against twenty one Liberals.

Cabinet Members Increase Majorities

Furthermore every member of the Norris Cabinet was returned to power with majorities which were greatly increased over those of July, 1914. Premier Norris was elected by a majority of 812 in Lansdowne, his opponent, W. J. Cundy, losing his deposit. Hon. A. B. Hudson, Attorney-General, and Hon. T. H. Johnson, Minister of Public Works, won by 1,000 and 1,255, respectively, in Winnipeg, their opponents also losing their deposits. Hon. Dr. Armstrong, Provincial Secretary, won in Gladstone by a majority of 404. Hon. Dr. Thornton, Minister of Education, won in Deloraine by 295 and Hon. Val. Winkler, Minister of Agriculture, won in Morden-Rhineland by 108. Hon. Edward Brown, Provincial Treasurer, still stands as Liberal candidate for The Pas.

Rogers Party Swept Away.

On the other hand, not one of the leaders of Hon. Robert Rogers' made over party remains on the scene. Sir James Aikins went down to defeat in Brandon before S. E. Clement by 697 votes followed by his lieutenant, W. H. Sharpe, who lost in Manitou to George T. Armstrong by 87 votes. Mr. Sharpe's defeat, by the way, is due in large measure to the efforts of Mrs. Nellie McClung, who returned to her old home town of Manitou last week in the interests of Mr. Armstrong.

Hon. George Lawrence, the ex-Minister of Agriculture in the Roblin Government, who was retained in the Conservative party as the only innocent member of the old Cabinet, was defeated by S. M. Hayden by 127 votes. Gould also is a feature. Although the full returns are not in yet from the outlying constituencies, the Liberal candidate Farley, is leading by 185 with only five polls to hear from.

Significant Vote in Winnipeg

The vote in Winnipeg and its bordering districts is most significant and can only be regarded as a direct intimation to Hon. Robert Rogers and his followers that they are not wanted in the political life of this Province. It is also an answer to the declarations of Sir James Aikins, C. P. Fullerton K.C. and The Winnipeg Telegram, that the members of the Public Commission were partisans. "We prefer the verdict of the people on the Fullerton charges to the verdict of the Commission" they said repeatedly during the campaign.

Casement Narrowly Escaped Lynching

At the Hands of Irish Prisoners in Germany—Another Win in the Struggle Against Landlordism in Ireland — Hatred of German Methods Increases.

ALLIES CERTAIN OF VICTORY

(Copyright 1915; Central News, by T. P. O'Connor).

LONDON, Aug. 7. We have nothing to repent and nothing to regret, writes the Westminster Gazette which epitomizes British feeling. If exultation be applicable to a nation where daily some family receives news of the death of a loved son, exultation marked all of the celebrations of the anniversary of the declaration of war in the United Kingdom, and the British Empire. The meetings everywhere were crowded and enthusiastic, even fierce.

The explanation is, first, the hourly growing horror of German warfare methods, culminating with the Lusitania horror, plus the deeper realization of what German victory would mean as a menace to all civilization, liberty and civilian lives.

Secondly, England feels that the hour is rapidly coming when her three million men will be quickly put in the field. The making of ammunition is keeping pace with recruiting and everything demonstrates the difference between the spirit here last August. The present spirit is that of hatred of Germany and determination to go right to the end. Certainty of ultimate victory of the Allies has increased rather than diminished by the year of war.

Irish residents of Britain are conspicuous in consequence of their enthusiastic and unanimous demonstrations of entire adhesion to the Allies' cause. The London meeting, called with only a few hours notice, was the most enthusiastic I have seen in years, the audience frequently rising to acclaim with bitter denunciation German savagery.

The Irish Attitude.

Indeed, no where has the years war produced more remarkable developments of feeling than among Irishmen. The doubts, misgivings, and hesitations assailing Irish minds when asked at the beginning of the war to make an abrupt volte face against their centuries old traditional attitude toward England vanished.

The few prosecutions of individuals occurring are contrary to the judgment of the Irish party, who regard these half-dozen cranks so utterly without influence, as to be unworthy of the least notice.

The transformation of Irish feeling is indicated in the fact that scarcely

Seventy Recruits To Parade To-night at 8

PRIVATE ED. RAYNOR

With the 22nd Battery, Second Contingent, Sussex, England. He is a son of Mr. George Raynor, 171 Prince Street.

First Public Appearance of the Men Who Have Enlisted During the Past Week—Will be Headed by 57th Regimental Band.

SOME MILITARY NOTES

Seventy recruits, who have enlisted during the week will march out to-night headed by the 57th Regimental Band. They will parade down George street at eight o'clock, affording another incident in the week's recruiting demonstration. This morning a group of the men who have had no previous training were undergoing preliminary work at Central Park.

450 BATTERY MEN WANTED AT ONCE

Capt. Ackerman Receives Notification to Recruit for Three Batteries in This Division

SOME ALREADY SIGNED

Captain W. C. Ackerman of the 24th Field Battery has returned from Kingston, where he received instructions to recruit for three batteries of artillery from this, the Third Division, extending from Toronto to Kingston. Four hundred and fifty men are wanted at once. There are two hundred qualified artillery officers at Kingston, but no places are ready for them. Hence the demand for recruits to man the batteries is an urgent one.

Dr. Eastwood has already passed a number of men who expressed a preference for the artillery service, and Capt. Ackerman feels that there are many others who have been simply waiting for this call to enlist. These are requested to present themselves as soon as possible at the Armouries for examination.

THE WEATHER

As if the country had not been already thoroughly soaked by the torrential rains of the earlier part of the week, we had another downpour to-day at noon. While the rain did not last very long, it fell over an inch on the level. Old W. P.

FIRST MACHINE GUN FOR NEW BATTALION

Mr. B. F. Ackerman Has Offered a Gun for Proposed Peterboro' Rangers

It was announced to-day that Mr. B. F. Ackerman had offered a machine gun for the proposed "Peterborough Rangers" battalion, which is now under consideration. In spite of the fact that this method of raising battalions is not being adopted at present, the members of the Patriotic Speakers' League have reaffirmed their willingness to proceed with the raising of the battalion and are now simply waiting for the official instructions from the Militia Department.

Patriotic League Send Big Bale

Women of Ashburnham Work'ng Diligently for the Red Cross

The Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham, sent their fortnightly bale to-day. It contained, four hundred bandages, ten individual bags for personal belongings, fifty-four dressings, forty-seven eye dressings, one hundred surgical kits, each kit containing thirteen articles, five hundred mouth wipes, thirty hospital shirts, twenty day shirts, five pairs of socks, ten hot water bottle covers, and two hundred and forty packages of gum. Miss Dover, one of the League members, who is out of the city, donated the gum.

The League meets for work every Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon. Don't forget to save your papers for the League. Collection will be made about the 15th of September.

SERGT.-MAJ. GUERIN IS COMING HOME

Is Suffering From Badly Shattered Nerves Following an Attack of Typhoid Fever.

INVALIDED HOME

Sergt.-Major Guerin, better known as "Buff" Guerin of the 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, now in France with the Canadian Expeditionary Force, is to be invalided home, according to reports received here. Since leaving Peterborough, Sergt.-Major Guerin has seen considerable active service, and at present is suffering from a nervous condition, caused by the nerve racking experiences through which he has passed. He also suffered an attack of typhoid fever. Sergt.-Major Guerin is a son of Mr. Terence Guerin, 28 Lafayette avenue. Prior to leaving for the front, Sergt.-Major Guerin was instrumental in securing a large number of recruits for the Battery. These were taken to Cobourg from time to time and subsequently removed to Valcartier.

Mr. R. R. Hall Meets With Rather Serious Accident in Toronto

General regret will be felt on account of the serious and peculiar accident that befel Mr. R. R. Hall, the well known barrister and ex-M.P. of Toronto, on Thursday evening. He received his injuries in an unusual manner. He was hurrying across the street on his way to the Union Station when he was struck by one of two automobiles which figured in an accident due to the slippery pavement. The police blotter states an automobile driven by David A. McDonald, King street west, skidded and struck a second car which was standing at the curb. The second car struck Mr. Hall. One of the wheels passed over his body. His injuries were caused by striking the pavement. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and removed by medical friends to St. Michael's hospital. He sustained serious bruises, a scalp wound, but the most serious injury was a slight fracture at the base of the skull. The attending physicians do not consider his case very serious, though up to seven o'clock last night Mr. Hall had not recovered full consciousness.

Mrs. Hall is with her husband in Toronto.

SATURDAY MARKET

Potatoes were plentiful on the market this morning at 20c a peck. Tomatoes had the outside selling all to themselves with other vegetables. Butter ranged from 28c to 30c and eggs were 20 cents a dozen.

Canadian Army Corps in Field

Corps of 40,000 Men Will be Maintained at the Front.

OTTAWA, Aug. 6. That Canada will have a full army corps in the field to be commanded by General Alderson, with Generals Currie and Turner in charge of the two divisions composing it, is the understanding in British military circles, according to the statement today of Hon. Col. McBain, who was in Ottawa after his return from the other side on official business.

It is understood that the first division, which is still in France in a depleted condition after the St. Julien and Festubert fighting, will be brought up to the strength by reinforcements, and with the second division, which is still in England, will form an army corps which is to take the field during the coming Autumn. The reinforcements necessary to keep an army corps of 40,000 men up to strength will be heavy, and explain the urgent present call for more recruits.

A RALLYING CALL

Tune—Scots Wha Hae, Wee Wallace Bled.

Death or liberty
Let us like a soldier die,

Death or freedom is our cry,
Death or liberty.

POLICY OF CONSCRIPTION

Reported That British Cabinet Has Practically Decided Upon Plan

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, Aug. 7. Lord Kitchener conferred with Premier Asquith yesterday for the third time in four days. The War Secretary has also held conferences with several other ministers of the Coalition Cabinet and a report is in circulation that as a result of his efforts the Cabinet has practically decided upon a policy of conscription.

No official announcement has yet been made and it is possible that none will come before Parliament reconvenes on September 14, but if by that time the Germans have not been checked in the eastern theatre of war, it is probable that conscription will be deemed necessary.

Some members of the Cabinet are said to oppose conscription in any form, but Lord Kitchener is reported to have gained the support of the most influential ministers.

A DEVICE TO JOIN RAILS WITHOUT FISH PLATE OR BOLT

Mr. James Rose, 329 George street, has received from the governments of the Dominion of Canada and the United States the patent rights for the manufacture of a railway chair, a device to join rails without a fish plate or bolt. Mr. Rose has perfected his invention after many weeks of labour. This new contrivance is bound to prove a great improvement, as with it a rail can't get loose, no matter how heavy the traffic.

A CORRECTION

The Examiner regrets that a paragraph appeared among the matters mews yesterday concerning a misapprehension existing in effect that Dr. Cameron has been appointed sole medical examiner for the district to conduct examinations of all recruits. This is an injustice to Major Eastwood who has been and still remains senior medical examining officer. Major Gardiner, A.D.M.S. of the third Division is receiving Major Eastwood of Major Cameron's appointment as assistant examiner in view of the increasing number of recruits, and let not this appointment did not affect our position that he Major Eastwood still remained senior medical examiner. Nor is it any reflection on Dr. Cameron's capacity and fitness for the position to which he has been appointed.

MANITOBA ELECTIONS.

The Manitoba elections held yesterday resulted in the return of the Liberal Government headed by Hon. T. C. Norris, by a sweeping majority—40 Liberals, 5 Conservatives and 1 Socialist were elected. This gives the Liberal Government a majority of 34, which will be added to when the deferred elections in the outlying constituencies are held. This result is much more than a party victory; it is a victory for clean government, and a smashing condemnation of governmental corruption. For years Manitoba has suffered from corrupt political methods, kept in play by other crooked methods; but the climax came with the exposure of the stealing in connection with the erection of the Parliament Buildings, evidence showing that more than a million dollars was paid in "extras," to provide campaign funds for the Roblin Government party. In the last Legislature the Roblin Government had a majority of 13. With an election honestly held, with a honest expression of public opinion, this majority has been converted into a minority of 34. The popular condemnation of corrupt methods could not be more crushing without altogether wiping out the Conservative representatives in the Legislature. The result shows that the people were in earnest, that they meant to make a clean job. They had no use for the "reformed" party headed by Sir James Aikins—it was only the old Roblin-Rogers political collection in another form under another name. Sir James, the new Conservative leader, the new running mate of Hon. Robt. Rogers, was defeated in Brandon by a majority of 700. The magic of "the man who can win elections" has failed; the Hon. Bob's sun is under the horizon.

MACHINE GUNS.

What a machine gun means is this. A machine gun in the hands of one man is capable of firing as many shots in a minute as forty rifles in the hands of forty men. Realizing the mighty help of machine guns, our liberal-minded Canadians are getting the machine-gun habit. All over the country public spirited citizens are giving machine guns. A splendid example has been set in Peterborough by Messrs. Peck, Kerr and McElderry, Mr. E. F. Mason, and Mr. and Mrs. Waddell. Their example should be followed, for we have many citizens who are equally able, and some abler, perhaps, to do the same thing. And when individuals cannot contribute a gun, several might club to present one. A citizen of moderate means was heard to say last night that he would be one of three to give a gun. The other two are called for. Societies, churches, clubs, and other organizations might, with a little effort, find it feasible to do likewise.

In addition to being a great positive help in actual fighting, the gift of machine guns would be a mighty agency in stimulating recruiting. Men eligible for enlisting, will see that while they enlist to fight, they will be well armed, and feel that while they are doing their bit, others who cannot go to fight are nevertheless fighting in their own way, making the sacrifice demanded of all in their own way.

Other places are doing nobly. Brantford has raised a machine gun fund of over $10,000. Storrington township in Frontenac county, has sent its machine gun cheque to the Minister of Militia; but the congregation of St. Matthew's Anglican church, Ottawa, is the church militant, indeed. They have pledged themselves to give one machine gun every month as long as the war lasts.

We that can't fight can do in this regard as much as if we were present in the firing line. And we should do it if we can; and many of us individually, and many of us collectively, can make ourselves responsible for the gift of a machine gun—in action the equivalent of forty men holding forty rifles.

THE CALL COMES TO ALL.

Pessimism is one thing; looking facts in the face with determination to meet them is another. Pessimism is surrender to weakness, the father of discouragement. True optimism is not irrational hopefulness; it takes account of conditions, and begets a determination to the exercise of every effort to justify hopefulness.

There is no doubt that the Empire is in peril; and that that peril will be realized unless—and here comes the rub—unless we do our duty and bring all our powers to bear to defeat the danger.

What is the danger? It is the danger in the first place of losing the liberty and conditions that make Canada the best country in the world to live in. If Germany wins; if we don't prevent her winning, we shall come under German domination as sure as sunset means darkness.

What that means we can judge from what Germany has done, where she has had and still has the power—in Belgium. The same thing would be repeated in Canada. We should not only have to submit to the monstrous burden of militarism, but become serfs and slaves, with no will but the will of our new masters. There would be no recruiting campaigns then. The war lords would say "go" and every able-bodied man would have to go or be shot.

We complain of our taxes now. They are light to what they would be under German rule, with everything subordinated to military preparations.

We regard with anxiety the large expense we in Canada are put to in financing our share of the war. That will be only a drop in the bucket compared with the crushing war indemnity Germany will place upon Canada in case we permit her to win. When she overcame France in 1872 Germany exacted the tremendous war indemnity of a thousand millions. And if Germany gets, or is given the chance, with all the great cost of this war, the indemnity she will impose on Canada as a part of the Empire, for which she has a specially bitter hate, will not be a light one.

That will be only one of the losses we shall suffer if Germany wins. Evreything in our political, civil and social life will be turned topsy-turvy. Everything will be Germanized, and we couldn't do anything but squirm and suffer under German government—another name for German tyranny.

There is danger of this, if we do not do our duty to the utmost. The only way to avert the danger is to unite in throwing our full strength with the allies.

The first way that presents is sending more men to the fighting line. Every man fit for fighting should join the ranks.

Every man counts. The individual citizen may think that he is not called because he is only one; but if everybody has the same feeling, and one has as good a right to it as another, there will be no increase of the fighting forces. The appeal is individual—to YOU.

The call is not only to the man eligible for enlistment, but to all our citizens, who can do their share; and with fuller realization of the situation, the public spirit of determination is strengthening. Nearly everybody is, in spirit and action, in the fight in is or her own way—standing behind the men who enlist.

In regard to both enlistment and other forms of fighting, the burden should not be put upon a few. One citizen with four sons, has three of them in the ranks. One widow with three sons has all of them in the ranks. Others have two or three each. There are hundreds who are not represented in the fighting line at all.

The danger that threatens looms over all; and all should share in the work of averting the danger and winning the victory that will assure us in Canada a continuance of enjoyment of the liberties and happiness, and comfort of living, we enjoy to-day.

A WIDOW'S GIFT.

The late Hon. James Young of Galt was one of Canada's best public men. He was a man of sterling character and ability, of the type of the late Hon. Alexander Mackenzie. That his widow was worthy mate for him is shown in her gift to aid the allied armies. I cannot send a man, but I want to do what I can in another way. So she helps by sending a machine gun. That is the true spirit, and that spirit is spreading over all the British Empire. It is the spirit that will let the world see that the wrongs Belgium has suffered, and Poland, Germany is going to inflict on the British Empire, will never make slaves of Britons nor of their kith and kin in other lands. Canada will emerge from the war, when the war is over, with a truer conception of herself and a better knowledge of her place in the British Empire. Mr. Young, like many other Canadians, was a Scotsman. He was born in Paisley, Renfrewshire, Scotland, in 1840, and came to Canada in 1857. He was a Liberal in politics, and represented Waterloo North in the Dominion House of Commons from 1872 to 1878, when he was defeated by Sir Adam Beck. He was elected for Waterloo South in 1882, and represented that constituency until 1896. He was a member of the Senate from 1896 until his death in 1909. He was a man of strong character, and a great public benefactor. He was a friend of education, and was a generous supporter of Knox College, Toronto, and of Queen's University, Kingston. He was a man of wide sympathies, and was a generous supporter of the Galt Hospital, and of the Galt Mechanics' Institute. He was a man of public spirit, and was a generous supporter of the Galt Hospital, and of the Galt Mechanics' Institute. He was a man of public spirit, and was a generous supporter of the Galt Hospital, and of the Galt Mechanics' Institute.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER'S DECLARATION ON THE DECLARATION OF WAR

Looking over the files of The Ottawa Free Press yesterday to extract despatches showing how Britain's declaration of war was announced one year ago, that is on August 4th, 1914, we came across a declaration by Sir Wilfrid Laurier that seems worth repeating at this time. The leader of the Liberal opposition had curtailed his holiday at Arthaba-kaville and returned to his office in Ottawa on account of the war crisis. He gave the following statement to the press at noon on August 4:

"It appears that up to the present time England is not yet engaged in war. We will hope and pray that the efforts of Sir Edward Grey may yet be successful in persuading the nations of the continent to the restoration of peace. I confess that the prospects are very doubtful. It is probable and almost certain that England will have to take her share in the conflict, not only for the protection of her own interests, but for the protection of Belgium and France and the higher civilization of which these two nations are to-day the noblest expression.

"The policy of the Liberal party under such painful circumstances is well known. I have often declared that if the mother country were ever in danger, or if danger ever threatened, Canada would render assistance to the full extent of her power. In view of the critical nature of the situation I have cancelled all my meetings. Pending such grave news there should be a truce of party strife."

In the twelve months that have elapsed, The Free Press has tried to forget its political party differences. For so doing it has been criticized by political zealots. We are glad to recall that we are but carrying out the manly and proper demand of the leader of the Liberal party.

"A truce of party strife does not mean that there shall be no sincere and friendly criticism of the powers that be. It would be absurd to contend that the Government of the day is possessed of all the wisdom of the ages, or that it is infallible. When mistakes are made they should be pointed out and when suggestions are offered they should be welcomed.

The trouble is that too often when a Liberal offers criticism or suggestions, there are many people ready to charge political malice or selfishness. For that reason The Free Press has urged the establishment in Canada of a coalition or "national" government.

This is a time when the whole of the resources of the Empire must be thrown into the scale against the enemies of Liberty, and among these resources are the ability and experience of all her statesmen and publicists, no matter to which political party they belong.

New Zealand has just formed a "national" ministry. There are problems facing us in Canada that cannot be satisfactorily dealt with except by men representing the united people of the Dominion whole heartedly, unreservedly, unitedly.

NECESSITY FOR ECONOMY.

From the renunciation of alcoholic beverages by the Royal family to the voluntary economies of all classes of society in Britain there is a lesson that cannot be too deeply impressed in all the colonies. Though the need of strengthening the nation by retrenchment may not be as apparent in Canada and the colonies, the material benefit of every sacrifice in the cause of national strength is none the less certain. Globe.

WARSAW'S SIGNIFICANCE.

The capture of Warsaw will be a great moral victory, but to the Russians it will not be as serious a blow as would the fall of Paris to the French, or Berlin to the Germans, or Vienna to the Austrians, for Warsaw is not Russian, but Polish, and sentimentally the Russians themselves attach little importance to it. So long as the Russian armies remain intact, and their morale is not destroyed the German problem on the east front remains unsolved. If Grand Duke Nicholas can extricate his forces from the Warsaw salient relatively intact he will have virtually conquered in defeat. Washington Star.

WAR GIFTS.

One or two of the speakers at a meeting the other night expressed the hope that the gifts of machine guns would not monopolize the giving of the public.

The speech of Col. H. D. Smith, general staff officer of the first division, was the speech of one with authority. It is clear that the Government will gladly receive machine guns. A machine gun is equal to forty rifles, and therefore a machine gun is equal to forty men. It can be handled by two men, one of whom could be under cover. The saving in men is therefore very great. It is the best up-to-date gun in the war. Germany appears to be well provided with machine guns, and it is fair to infer that a large part of such success as Germany has gained is due to the machine gun and her preparedness.

The Allies require time to catch up in equipment and preparation, and this they are surely accomplishing. The doom of militarism is written. Great Britain's navy holds the two-thirds of the earth that is covered by water, and every nation in the world except Germany, has the freedom of the seas, except as that freedom may be interfered with by Germany's invisible navy of submarines.

It is safe to assume that Great Britain's navy will continue to rule the waves both during and after the war.

Time may be needed to win on land. Men are needed, and as every machine gun furnished multiplies the effectiveness of every man, and reduces the loss of men, Generals Joffre and French are quite justified in delaying their strike until they can move forward with a sufficient number of the best weapons known in war. The machine gun, according to Col. Smith's words, might be called the wholesale rifle. It can be used wherever a rifle can, and is forty times more effective and forty times less dangerous.

By all means let the desire of the Government for machine guns be met thereby hastening the hour of victory.—Toronto Daily Advertiser.

GOOD RECIPE FOR BREAD

My bread recipe I have used since I was fifteen and do not know what a failure is. One cup mashed potatoes, half cup flour, one tablespoonful of brown sugar, two tablespoon lard and butter, enough of boiling water or potato water to mix fairly thin. Let stand till cool, while cooking pot on and nearly half of a Royal yeast cake in half cup of lukewarm water. When the above is cool mix together stirring quickly and often during the latter part. Do not put the salt in until you have the flour measured out ready to mix at night, as salt stops the fermenting of the yeast. Six quarts of flour, three of water, is the general amount. Mix stiff at night. Knead down again in the morning, let rise to top of pan a min. then shape into loaves. Let rise till twice their size. Have oven hot about twenty minutes till brown. Then just a moderate heat for the rest of the hour, so that it will be baked even all through.

A little girl was teaching her little brother the Lord's Prayer, the other night, and when she had said, "Give us this day our daily bread," he suddenly called out: "Pray for syrup, too, sister; pray for syrup, too."

more or less, pass your store or office door every day. One per cent. of these people stop and buy, 99 per cent. do not stop—do not buy. Why?

ADVERTISE—tell the people where you are and what you have to sell. Examiner Advertisements influence people to stop and buy.

In this way you can stop the crowds passing your store door and induce them to investigate and buy. If you stop two per cent. of the 500 people who pass your store—you thus increase the volume of your business to that extent.

Refugees of Warsaw Fleeing To Moscow

Special to The Examiner.

MOSCOW, Aug. 7 (via Petrograd and London, Aug. 7). Hundreds of refugees from War-saw are arriving here daily. Most of them are without money or means of sustenance, and are seeking aid at the American Consulate, where an enlarged staff is attempting to supply temporary assistance, pending the organization of a Russian relief commission.

The refugees state that although the population of the Polish Capital was convinced that the Germans ultimately would occupy the city, a majority of the citizens elected to remain only approximately fifteen per cent. to date having left the city.

This accounts for the comparative order and the absence of panic which accompanied the exodus.

When German occupation first seemed imminent the government issued an order that third-class tickets to any point in the interior of Russia should be given free to all citizens desiring to flee.

The only condition attached by the authorities was that residents leaving would not be allowed to return without a special permit.

Those choosing to go foresaw that War-saw would be visited with conditions similar to those imposed on Lodz and that the town would be cut off from the interior of Russia, whereby all provisions were obtainable, and that War-saw would suffer from famine.

The refugees compare the orderly and systematic abandonment of the city with the panic caused by the first German approach, last October, when an attempt of the city officials, institutions and private citizens to all go at once resulted in indescribable confusion.

The retirement this time was so carefully arranged that it went off like clockwork and an onlooker received the impression that a no more extraordinary phenomenon was occurring than the ordinary summer exodus. Sufficient extra trains had been provided, so that travelling conditions on the whole differed little from normal.

An unusual feature of the present abandonment of the city was the fact that provision tickets were made unnecessary.

The bulk of the refugees travelled on foot or with their waggons along the highway. Most of the refugees were unable to proceed southward and to Kieff and, finding the railway to Vilna monopolized for military purposes, they took the line to the east, temporarily crowding Moscow, Vladova and Brest-Litovsk. Many of these lost their homes in the outlying portions of Warsaw, the destruction of which became a military necessity.

All the territory immediately to the west of War-saw, containing large factories, Polish estates and peasant dwellings, now presents unchecked and unmitigatable areas.

Care had been taken that no suburban factories should fall in the hands of the Germans and be converted to their use. Chief among those destroyed was the million dollar sugar factory belonging to a Polish lawyer, Eugene Kurnluk, with more than 25,000 tons of sugar.

The factories in the city itself, although abandoned, had not yet been destroyed when the refugees left the capital.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hinz, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

HOME CONVENIENCE

MANY steps and much time and energy may be saved by having the work table and sink of the proper height and properly located. Provide a high stool on which to sit when working at the table or sink so that it will not be necessary to stand while preparing vegetables and other foods. Wood tables, covered with enameled iron or a composition top, will be more sanitary and easier to keep clean. These will serve the purpose of molding boards.

Many steps are saved by having shelves and books over the kitchen table, and drawers and a flour bin in the work table. Many utensils, as well as sugar, spices, flour and other materials can then be kept within reach when one is working at this table. The stove should be near both table and sink. Have some of the drawers tin lined and covered for holding bread and crackers. It will then be unnecessary to carry bread to the cellar and put in a boiler after each meal. For one working in a large farm kitchen, a table or tray on rollers will save many steps in getting utensils or food from one part to another, and getting food and dishes to and from the dining room.

ECONOMIC WASTE

THE only road to REAL economy is the road that leads to the Home Town. This is the FIRST COMMANDMENT in community development. Whenever we pass up our community and send an order away from home we break this commandment by one stroke of the pen. Give your home dealer the CHANCE to fill that order. Given the same conditions, HE can beat any out-of-town house in the country. The Long Distance route is the road to waste, over-buying and false economy. This cartoon shows vividly the ECONOMIC WASTE in long distance buying.

Two Young Ladies Had Exciting Experience at Stoney Lake Recently—Other News From the Resorts

"Woodside" Resort, Kawartha Park, under its new proprietor, Mr. David Charlton, is becoming very popular. Already a large number have availed themselves of the advantages it affords.

The following are a few of those who have registered: Miss White, Toronto; Mr. E. A. Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard, Mr. Howard Maynard, Mrs. Newland, Mrs. J. Goodwin, all of Toronto; Mr. Robert Fair, Miss Eileen Fair, Miss Dennis, Perschaie, Peterborough; Mr. Kerr, Mrs. George Bell, Misses Elsie and Estelle Bell, Toronto; Mr. Forrester, Peterborough; Rev. D. A. McKenzie and R. H. Wood, Millbrook; Mrs. John Bell and Miss Mary Bell, Mr. Fields, Miss Emma Fields, Miss Cowton, Miss Muriel Gladerman, Toronto; Dr. and Mrs. Tuzzle of Ottawa.

Mr. Morson and Miss Dennison, practising for the unset race. Last week they took a classic header, out of their sailing dinghy in front of a host of spectators at Juniper Island. They were rescued by Dr. Bartlett, who put out in his launch. Mr. Lawrence Graheme put out, too, and almost lost his skull in the process.

Mr. Lee, Cobourg, and Miss Perry, Peterborough, were hurrying to meet the steamer Manita at Kawartha Park one day last week, and just as they were passing in front of the store they suddenly were seized with the notion that things were rather quiet around Kawartha and they decided to enliven them up a bit by plunging head long into the briny deep, but it takes more than that to dampen their ardor.

Mrs. J. W. Bottrell and Miss Vera, of Lakefield are summering at Paudeshogan, Horseshoe Island.

Mrs. T. K. McElroy of New York, and Lieut. Gordon Grahame, recently returned for service overseas, have joined their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence H. Grahame, at "Kawarra." Mrs. Paul Weller of New York is a guest.

Mr. Arthur Hancock of Peterborough is visiting Mr. Kyle Harston, at "Oaklands."

Miss Marjorie Edwards of Peterborough is spending a month with Miss Hartstone at "Oaklands."

Miss Isobel Bethune, Toronto, is spending her vacation on Stoney lake.

Miss M. Cox, Cobourg, is a recent visitor at "Ogahla."

Mr. E. P. Leve, Toronto, is spending the remainder of Wednesday for a season.

Mr. Dean M. Wallace of Bennett is the guest of Mr. Gordon Smith, at "Smithcote."

Mrs. J. W. Bottrell, Lakefield, is a recent visitor at Holmwood, the summer home of Mrs. J. W. Woodsell.

Among the Kawartha Park registrations for the week are Mrs. A. Rayson, Mr. Lindsay; A. Ray, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Ridgeway and M. Dees, of Toronto.

Mrs. P. S. [illegible] and Miss Mc[illegible] Lindsay, are spending their vacation at Kawartha Keys.

Mrs. W. E. [illegible] and Master Jack, of Galt; Misses Alice Oliver, Gertrude M. Peterborough; Olive Colwell, of Peterborough; Misses Lazarus, Knowles, Bessie and Vila Dale, Gale; Mr. Stephen Bethune, Toronto, and Mr. T. M. Morris, of Stoney Lake, are the guests of Mrs. Bethune.

Mr. Wm. Bennett, Toronto, is a guest of Mr. A. W. Cumming at Hazelwood.

Miss Jane Stevenson, Toronto, with Miss R. Nesbitt, of Lakefield, are Leaguer Isle.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Young, Miss Minnie and Senior J. Lloyd, have recently returned to the above, and were Mr. and Mrs. J. Charlton, Mrs. A. E. Nicholls, Mr. and Mrs. T. Braden, and Mr. M. P. Taylor, of Lakefield.

Lieut. (Jack) Harstone paid a flying visit to see his parents at "Oaklands." He had attended service a few days previously and left for back to camp.

Mr. Percy Stock and family are camped on Pigeon Lake.

The [illegible] which the Stoney Lake Canoe Club [illegible] held Wharf were [illegible] and passengers [illegible] numbers, and will prove a great boon to tourist traffic.

LESS SPIRITS AND TOBACCO

Inland Revenue Returns For Last Year Show Decrease in Use of Liquor and Smokes

SIGN OF THE TIMES

OTTAWA, Aug. 7. [illegible] come returns for the fiscal year [illegible] a notable falling off in the consumption of spirits and tobacco. Canada's drink and smoke bill has been cut down by the [illegible] Inland Revenue Department. The returns just published show that there were [illegible] twenty million gallons less spirits drunk and forty-seven million fewer cigars smoked than during the preceding year. The last decrease in the national consumption of liquor and tobacco synchronized with the financial depression of nearly twenty years ago. Since then the nation's drink and tobacco bill has steadily mounted.

Total Still Large.

Despite the decrease mentioned, though, the total amount still large. Of cigars there were consumed 228,868,542 as compared with 288,210,892 in 1913-14. Cigarettes were smoked to the number of 1,089,630,000 as compared with 1,136,223,170 in 1913-14. Were the retail price of cigars at 7 cents and of cigarettes at 1 1-2 cents each, this means about $[illegible] paid on these two luxuries alone last year in Canada.

The total consumption per head last year was 1.06[illegible] gallons as compared with 1.[illegible] the preceding twelve months. Per capita consumption of tobacco showed the down grade, after several years of steadily upward tendency. Per capita consumption of [illegible] last year was 1.[illegible] pounds as compared with 1.116 pounds in 1913-14. It is lower now than at any time since 1907. The per capita consumption of [illegible] last year was 6.021 pounds as compared with 7.290 pounds in 1913-14. The per capita consumption of wine was 11.[illegible] litres as compared with 12.[illegible] litres in 1913-14.

Quite a Drop.

[illegible] a decrease in the consumption per head of the population of 2.[illegible] pounds as compared with 2.[illegible] pounds in 1913-14. The total amount [illegible] last year was 20,[illegible] pounds, which 15,[illegible] pounds were raw leaf. [illegible] tobacco [illegible] a decrease [illegible] 1913-14. [illegible] amounted to 2,[illegible] pounds in 1913-14.

CANADIAN TROOPS AT SHORNCLIFFE WERE REVIEWED

LONDON, Aug 5—The imposing double review of the Canadian troops by Bonar Law, Colonial Secretary, and the Minister of Militia, Major Gen. Hughes, at Shorncliffe yesterday was followed in the evening by a crowded meeting of the Canadian officers and non-commissioned officers, at which Bonar Law and Major-Gen. Hughes were the speakers.

Fine weather prevailed in the forenoon, but in the afternoon the weather broke down, and it was under heavy rain and thunder that the Colonial Secretary took the salute of the troops as they marched past. The second division was taken early in the afternoon to Beachborough Park, wher the Queen's Canadian Hospital stands. Patients and nurses of the hospital were amongst the crowd of spectators. As the troops stood under the heavy downpour of rain awaiting the arrival of the Ministers they cheerily sang the "Marseillies" and "O, Canada."

A later ceremony took place at the camp, where the reserve battalions were paraded.

Bonar Law's Speech.

Bonar Law made a brief speech in which he told the assembled officers that nothing had proved more clearly to his mind that we were fighting for what was worth while and what was being paid, than the fact that the men from all parts of Canada were animated by the spirit, that the fight was theirs as much as Britain's. He also reiterated with pride in view of their gallant achievements that he was a Canadian by birth.

Cheers were heartily given by the troops for the King, the Colonial Secretary and Major Gen. Hughes.

The review was watched by thousands of spectators from near and far.

Among the general staff officers at Montague Allan, Sir Herbert and Lady Holt, Sir Arthur Markham, Major Goalson, Colonel Dave Watson, the latter on sick leave from the front.

Among the general staff officers at the saluting base were Sir Edward Carson, J. J. Carrick, M.P., Canadian House of Commons, Sir Max Aitken, Colonel Hughes, General Carlton Jones, Major Alexander and Capt. Guy Mars.

The evening meeting was unique as being confined to Canadian officers and non-commissioned privates, are friends Bonar Law was received with great warmth and paid a tribute to the magnificent organization of the Canadian army, and then proceeded to examine the position both from Germany's standpoint and from the allies' standpoint, and also reviewed the effective work done by the army and navy. His quotation of Bernhardi regarding the expected breaking off of the colonies was followed up by the comment "this is the way you claim your independence, by sending men to aid the Empire." As to the postbellum settlement, Mr. Law reiterated his opinion in favour of an Empire parliament on a proportional basis, though disclaiming any official or party authority behind such opinion.

In urging that the Empire must be ready to make every sacrifice he exclaimed "This is not a war that can be carried on on the limited liability principle."

The Minister of Militia followed Mr. Law with an interesting survey of the work accomplished by both sides during the year.

ENCOURAGE THE BOYS.

The keen competition brought out in the boys' hog feeding competition last year has prompted the management of the Toronto Fat Stock Show to again include this class in their sixth annual show to be held at the Union Stock Yards December 10th and 11th.

This class is open to boys under 21 years and carries with it added prizes aggregating $125.00.

The Provincial Department of Agriculture are clearing free term at the O.A.C. at Guelph along the same lines.

This is the encouragement a boy needs to make him a good farmer and to keep him at home on the farm.

THE GERMAN ATROCITIES AS OFFICIALLY REPORTED BY BRYCE COMMISSION

Aerschot and District, Period III, (September.)

It is unnecessary to describe with much particularity the events of the period beginning about September 10th. The Belgian soldiers who had recaptured the place found corpses of civilians, who must have been murdered in Aerschot itself, just as they found them in Sempst and the other villages on August 25th. Some of these bodies were found in wells, and some had been burned alive in their houses. The prisoners released by the Belgian army from the church were almost starved.

At Haecht several children had been murdered, one of two or three years old was found nailed to the door of a farmhouse by its hands and feet, a crime which seems most incredible, but the evidence for which we found to accept. In the garden of this house was the body of a girl who had been shot in the forehead.

Capelle-au-Bois—At Capelle-au-Bois two children were murdered in a cart, and their corpses were seen by many witnesses at different stages of the cart's journey.

Eppegham—At Eppegham the dead body of a child of two was seen pinned to the ground with a German lance. Same witness saw a mutilated woman alive near Weerde on the same day.

Tremelon—Belgian soldiers on patrol duty found a young girl naked on the ground, covered with scratches. She complained of having been violated. On the same day an old woman was seen kneeling by the body of her husband and she told them that the Germans had shot him as he was trying to escape from the house.

Louvain and District.

The events spoken to as having occurred in and around Louvain between the 19th and the 25th of August deserve close attention.

For six days the Germans were in peaceful occupation of the city. No houses were set on fire, no citizens were killed. There was a certain amount of looting of empty houses, but otherwise discipline was effectively maintained. The condition of Louvain during these days was one of relative peace and quietude, presenting a striking contrast to the previous and contemporaneous conduct of the German army elsewhere. On the evening of August 25th a sudden change takes place. The Germans, on that day repulsed by the Belgians, had retreated to and re-occupied Louvain. Immediately the devastation of that city and the holocaust of its population commences. The inference is irresistible that the army as a whole wreaked its vengeance on the civil population and the buildings of the city in revenge for the set-back which the Belgian arms had inflicted on them. A subsidiary cause alleged was the assertion, often made before, that civilians had fired upon the German army.

The depositions which relate to Louvain are numerous, and are believed by the committee to present a true and fairly complete picture of the events of the 25th and 26th of August. Eye-witnesses worthy of credence detail exactly when, where, and how the firing commenced. Such firing was by Germans on Germans. No impartial tribunal could, in our opinion, come to any other conclusion.

On the evening of the 25th firing could be heard in the direction of Herent, some three kilometres from Louvain. An alarm was sounded in the city. There was disorder and confusion, and at 8 o'clock horses attached to baggage waggons stampeded in the streets and rifle fire commenced. This was in the Rue de la Station and came from the German police guard (21 in number), who, seeing the troops arrive in disorder, thought it was the enemy. Then the corps of incendiaries got to work. They had broad belts with the word "Gott mit uns," and their equipment consisted of a hatchet, a syringe, a small shovel, and a revolver. Fires blazed up in the direction of the law courts, St. Martin's Barracks, and later at the Place de la Station. Meanwhile an incessant fusillade was kept up on the windows of the houses. In their efforts to escape the flames the inhabitants climbed the walls. "My mother and servants," says a witness, "had to do the same and took refuge at Monsieur A.'s, whose cellars are vaulted and afforded a better protection than mine. A little later we withdrew to Monsieur A.'s stables, where about 30 people, who had got there by climbing the walls, were to be found. Some of these poor wretches had to climb twenty walls. A ring came at the bell. We opened the door. Several civilians flung themselves under the porch. The Germans were firing upon them from the street. Every moment new fires were lighted up, accompanied by explosions. In the middle of the night I heard a knock at the outer door of the stable which led into the street, and heard a woman's voice crying for help. I opened the door and just as I was going to let her in a rifle shot fired from the street by a German soldier rang out and the woman fell dead at my feet. About 9 in the morning things got quieter, and we took the opportunity of venturing into the street. A German who was carrying a silver pyx and a number of boxes of cigars, told us we were to go to the station, where trains would be waiting for us. When we got to the Place de la Station we saw in the square 7 or 8 dead bodies of murdered civilians. Not a single house in the place was standing. A whole row of houses behind the station at Blauwput was burnt. After being driven hither and thither interminably by officers, who treated us roughly and insulted us throughout, we were divided."

The prisoners were then distributed between different bodies of troops and marched in the direction of Herent. Seventy-seven inhabitants of Louvain including a number of people of good position (the names of several are given), were thus taken to Herent. "We found the village of Herent in flames, so much so that we had to quicken up to prevent ourselves from being suffocated and burnt up by the flames in the middle of the road. Half burnt corpses of civilians were laying in front of the houses. During a halt soldiers stole cattle and slaughtered them where they stood. Firing started on our left. We were told it was the civilians firing, and that we were going to be shot. The truth is that it was the Germans themselves who were firing to frighten us. There was not a single civilian in the neighbourhood. Shortly afterwards we proceeded on our march to Malines. We were insulted and threatened. The officers were worse than the men. We got to Campenhout about 7 p.m., and were locked in the church with all the male population of the village. Some priests had joined our numbers. We had had nothing to eat or drink since the evening of the day before. A few compassionate soldiers gave us water to drink, but no official took the trouble to see that we were fed." Next day, Thursday, the 27th, a safe-conduct to return to Louvain was given, but the prisoners had hardly started when they were stopped and taken before a Brigade General and handed to another escort. Some were grossly ill-treated. They were accused of being soldiers out of uniform, and were told they could not go to Louvain "as the town was going to be raised to the ground." Other prisoners were added, even women and children, until there were more than 200. They were then taken towards Malines, released, and told to go to the town together, and that those who separated would be fired on. Others witnesses corroborate the events described by this witness.

Louvain and District will be continued in Evening Examiner August 9th.

Interesting Letter From Driver J. Airriess, Contains Reference to Peterboro' Men Who Have Been Wounded

Mrs. E. F. Airriess, 88 McDonnel Street, is in receipt of an interesting letter from her son, Driver J. Airriess of the 3rd Battery Reserve, Canadian Field Artillery, now stationed in Shorncliffe, England. Driver Airriess has the following to say of his experiences from Jan. 1st to July 14th, the date upon which the letter was written:

I arrived safe and sound and am very well considering I wasn't sick on the journey over. We had an export into Plymouth Harbour. Then we proceeded to Dartmouth where we embarked on shore transports and came back to Plymouth. We then boarded a troop train for Westbanner from which point we walked to Otterpeole camp, stayed there for nearly a day and then marched from there to Shorncliffe, a matter of seven and a half miles. We are in the first reserve of the first contingent. We had about as nice a reception as you would want, at Exeter. We were hungry and tired. They gave us a package containing a ham sandwich, a piece of cake, a banana and a package of cigarettes with a little card bearing the name of the donor, one of which I am sending you. I saw a bunch of Peterborough boys back from the front, among whom was Harvey Staunton, R. Geroux, and young Fallen (not Bill).

There are a lot of Peterborough boys wounded. I am endeavouring to get a transfer to the Canadian Army Veterinary Corps. Dr. Rogers of Peterborough is Captain in this Corps. We are located about two and a half miles from Folkstone and one mile from Cheriton and Sandgate.

Driver J. Airriess concludes by giving his address, which is: Ross Barracks, Shorncliffe, England.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours' illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles or if trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

STEAMERS FOR STONEY LAKE ON CIVIC HOLIDAY

The Stoney Lake Navigation Co are providing ample accommodation for carrying excursionists to the lakes on Monday, in connection with the regatta to be held off Juniper Island. Steamers will be at Lakefield wharf to meet the three trains which are scheduled to leave the city via G. T. R. at 8:30 a.m., 12:20, noon, and 5 p.m.

Steamers will leave the Regatta at 4:30, connecting with train arriving at Peterborough at 6:30.

Steamer Stoney Lake will leave Juniper Island after the dance connecting with special train arriving at Petertorough about 12:30.

Passengers leaving on the 12:20 train can see the Regatta and may return by either train.

Steamer Manita will leave the George Street Wharf at 5 o'clock and will leave Juniper Island after the races are over.

L.O.L. Bands Have Been Helping Recruiting

The fife and drum bands of L.O.L. 50 and 58, two Peterborough lodges, have been manning the recruiting car on the street railway service during the past three evenings. They have taken turns in playing and occasionally play together, but for the most part followed the former method in order that the music would continue without interruption. They played military, patriotic and national selections and "stayed on the job" during the full period of time each evening. If some of the music like the "British Grenadiers," or "The Cock o' the North," were mistaken by any persons for party tunes they should extend their knowledge of these stirring pieces. It is true that they may have been played in parades, but that does not make them party tunes.

Trades and Labour Notes

(By the Official Scribe.)

In spite of the counter attraction of Wednesday night last, there was a good turn out of delegates at this week's meeting of the Trades and Labour Council. President J. J. Hartley resumed his seat after a few months' leave of absence, expressing as he did so his delight to be back with the local labourites.

A communication asking for a delegate to the convention of the Trades Congress of Canada was turned down owing to the distance being long and the purse strings short. Vancouver is the convention city this year.

The delegate to the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees gave some interesting details of his visit to Chicago, the chief one being that the local fight was not to be given up, as cases of more stubborn resistance have been overcome in other and more important cities. A new rule is that every delegate shall wear at least five pieces of union made clothing, a sudden enforcement of a like proposition would probably be the cause of unpleasant disclosures among union men. Moral, demand the label.

Secretary Wm. Stevens told of a demand from Toronto that the label held by the Globe Tailoring Co. be lifted, as the concern had forfeited its right to same.

Organizer Flett took the floor and after congratulating the membership on its attendance, notwithstanding the big recruiting meeting, went on to speak of the achievements of the American Federation of Labour, and the still greater efforts that could be made were certain internal hindrances removed which must necessarily be performed by the membership. Mr. Flett considered the building trades the hardest hit by the war, for instance Toronto's outlay of 3 to 4 million dollars this year as against 14 to 15 millions of former years.

Vice-President Hammacott told of the visit of Hon. Mr. Crothers recently to local industries. Secretary Wm. Stevens accompanied the Minister of Labour, putting things up to that official in a plump and plain manner as he well knows the way. The Vice-President told of Mrs. Crothers' deep interest in the girl workers, questioning several of them as to the hours they worked and the wages paid them.

A representative from the Moulders' Union reported on the strike at the Lock Works. The men had acceded to the request of the management and had a tentative day's work, but this was declared as not being satisfactory in results as a day of piece work, so the men were out. Mention was also made of the statement by a local paper regarding a lockout. This was entirely erroneous.

The Labour Day General Committee will meet on Monday night.

Next meeting, August 16th.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 6—[illegible] of Warsaw cost the Russian Government [illegible] more than $25,000,000, it was announced today. This amount was granted by the War Office for the removal of mills and factories from the Polish capital to the interior of Russia. Military experts estimate that fully $50,000,000 worth of property was destroyed by the Russians before they gave up the Warsaw and Ivangorod forts. The bridges over the Vistula which the Russians destroyed alone were worth more than $15,000,000.

RUSSIANS DEAL ENEMY BLOWS AS TERRIBLE AS UNEXPECTED

PETROGRAD, Aug. 7—It is difficult to write in cold blood of the heroic struggle in Poland. It is well known that the Russian supplies of ammunition are greatly inferior to those of the Germans. The enemy's batteries roar incessantly. Shells plow up whole areas and the smoke of them bursting darkens the sky.

It is a marvel that human beings can live in such a hell yet Russian soldiers fight in it. They retire slowly and gradually, and again and again, when the enemy's machinery of death is at full blast, they rush to attack, and deal him blows as terrible as they are unexpected.

It has been thus in that fierce wrestle on the Narew which is at last drawing to a close. It was thus on Tuesday night north of Lublin and Chelm. There has never yet been such a terrible battle on the Russian front.

All day long on the Kamale front north of Lublin to Bald Hill, on the north of Lublin, to Bald Hill, on the road between Chelm and Wlodawa, the closely packed batteries of Mackensen and Archduke Joseph deluged the Russians with iron and flame. Our allys trenches were destroyed, but in shell pits the Russian soldiers found new positions ready made, and took refuge there. When night came they rushed down on Mackensen's hammer phalanx and drove it into headlong flight.

This success will not permanently check the German advance, and the pity of it is that such a noble victory should be merely a stage in a retreat and not the turning point for a Russian advance. It is, however, a pledge that as soon as the munition work, which has been taken up with such energy by the Russian nation, bear fruit in this will stay the impact of the Russian armies.

I understand the Tories are having trouble," remarked the spinster. "Some people take her part, and others side with him." "And I suppose," crowded the bachelor, "there are a few eccentric people who mind their own business."

Figures on Population and Resources Favour the Allies

Herald Bureau, No. 130 Fleet Street, London, Wednesday.—R. P. W. Wilson in the Daily News and Leader, in foreshadowing the inevitable outcome of the war, directs attention to the population and resources of the belligerents, as follows:

Nation.	Population.	Resources.
British Empire	439,000,000	$2 245,000,000
Russia	174,000,000	1 700,000,000
France (with colonies)	80,000,000	1 100,000,000
Italy	38,000,000	565,000,000
Japan	53,000,000	325,000,000
Belgium (excluding Congo)	7,500,000	(unassessed)
Servia	3,000,000	42,500,000
Montenegro	500,000	2,500,000
Total	795,000,000	$5,980,000,000
Nation.	Population.	Resources.
Germany	65,000,000	$ 875,000,000
Austria	29,000,000	700,000,000
Hungary	21,000,000	170,000,000
Turkey	21,000,000	85,000,000
Total	136,000,000	$2,130,000,000

Against these forces and resources are alleged.

Mr. Wilson's conclusions are that the figures given sum up only one result, and that is final, overwhelming triumph of the Allies.

CANADA'S DEBT IS $734,656,544

War is Costing $10,000,000 a Month—Temporary Loans Increase by $92,000,000, Mostly War Expenditure

REVENUE INCREASES

OTTAWA, Aug. 7.—The financial statement of the Dominion to August 1 shows some striking increases in liabilities as compared with the same date last year. In the twelve months there has been an increase in temporary loans of $92,000,000, of $3,000,000 in the net debt, and of $16,000,000 in Dominion notes outstanding.

The total gross debt of the Dominion on August 1 was $734,656,544, of which $362,703,312 was payable in London.

Temporary loans included amount to $100,673,684, and Dominion notes outstanding $152,048,872, an increase of $16,111,396 over last year. The total net debt on July 31 was $683,745,092, an increase of $13,457,351 for July.

Customs, excise and [illegible] alike show an increasing revenue for July as compared with July last year. The figures are:

	July, 1914.	July, 1915.
Customs	$6,807,058	$7,240,321
Excise	1,653,050	1,784,477
Post-office	825,000	1,200,000
Public works, including railways	1,678,298	1,132,374
Miscellaneous	1,558,215	1,327,917
Total	$12,521,624	$12,685,085

Total revenue for the first four months of the fiscal year was $29,471,327, as against $32,704,870 for the corresponding period last year.

July expenditure on capital account (for permanent works) was $3,920,518, of which $3,808,273 was on public works, including railways and canals, and $112,245 for railway subsidies.

The statement does not show war expenditure separately but the increase in temporary loans is understood to be chiefly accounted for under this head. War expenditure is now averaging approximately $10,000,000 a month.

LAST VESTIGE OF OLD C. P. R. STOCK YARDS TORN DOWN AND OBLITERATED

Reminder of the Big Trading of Years Ago Disappeared a Few Days Ago — These Were the Happy Days for the Drovers—The Business Disappeared by Slow Stages.

A little note at the [illegible] minutes of the meeting of the Utilities Commission the other day quietly marked the passing of the old C.P.R. stock yards that formerly flourished on the present site of the Landy Shovel and Tool Company's plant. The C.P.R. wrote notifying the Commission that the water service was no longer required and that it be removed. Thus passed the old cattle yards, reduced some years ago almost to the vanishing point.

Before the ground was broken for the Shovel Works the stock yards spread themselves extensively over the lot bounded by Rink street, the G.T.R. Port Hope line, and the C.P.R. and Perry Street. These were the days when cattle, sheep, hogs, and even horses were shipped from Peterborough frequently and in large numbers. The yards were divided into numerous pens which seemed to be occupied continuously. There was even an immense barn for storing hay and other fodder for the cattle. Drovers travelled the adjoining townships ceaselessly buying up shipments, and as a variation, western broncbos were imported and auctioned in the pens. Some of these handy little horses may survive, but the most of them have probably disappeared from Peterborough stables. Cattle dealing flourished in these its brightest days. The local drovers sent many a load up the run ways, and cashed in consid[illegible] profit. But the business grew lean and dwindled. When the yards were reduced at the time the Shovel Works were erected they had seen their busiest days, and in the past few years trade has steadily diminished. It is one of these anomalies that the drovers can most readily explain.

A few weeks ago the remaining section of the yards was cleared up. Adequate shipping facilities have been erected down on the spur line in the C.P.R. freight yards for less recent conditions they handle only a car or so at shipments. The great old days of plenty belong to the realm of dreams, possibly dreams at that, in the drovers' recollections.

Hot Weather Fatigue

not caused by the heat.

With the digestion good and the body functioning properly, hot weather seldom bothers.

Grape-Nuts

(MADE IN CANADA)

is an ideal hot weather food. It's a body-builder—delicious, highly nourishing and easily digestible.

It's made of whole wheat and barley and contains those mineral salts, found under the outer coat of the grain, which are essential to well balanced daily rebuilding of body, brain and nerves.

Grape-Nuts will coax the sluggish appetite. And it's always ready to serve—a boon during the hot months.

WHAT REWARD FOR THEIR SACRIFICE?

Sir James Aikins May be Appointed Lt.-Gov. of Manitoba.

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Aug. 7.—There is some speculation as to what will happen to Sir James Aikins, Conservative leader, and W. H. Sharpe, Chief Lieutenant, who resigned the Federal constituencies of Brandon and Lisgar, respectively, to lead the provincial Conservatives of Manitoba. Should they decide to remain out of Dominion politics Sir James will, in all probability, be appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, while Sharpe is likely to receive the reward of a senatorship.

MAY NOW ENTER THE NORMAL SCHOOL

Successful Pupils of the Middle School for Entrance Into the Normal School

The results of the Middle School examination for entrance into the Normal schools are given below. The certificates of the successful candidates, and the statements of marks of those who failed, will be mailed to the principals or inspectors in the course of a few days.

The appeal examiners have already reread the papers of each candidate whose marks would appear to justify an appeal. Where such a candidate has still failed the statement of marks will be stamped as re-read and no further appeal will be allowed in all other cases of failure appeals will not be refused, if made before september 1st, and accompanied by the fee of $2.00.

A candidate after whose name a Middle school subject is indicated in brackets, is required to rewrite said subject with another departmental examination, for which he is eligible and which he requires to take. Such a candidate cannot be admitted to the Normal School this year.

Successful candidates who desire to attend the coming session of the Normal Schools, are notified that their applications for admission must be made to the Deputy Minister of Education not later than Wednesday, August 25th. The Normal Schools will open Wednesday, September 1st, at 9 a.m., at which time all candidates must present themselves. Applicants are required to be at least 18 years of age before October 1st.

Further information regarding the conditions of admission may be obtained from the syllabus, copies of which may be obtained on application to the Deputy Minister of Education. No candidate will be admitted who does not comply fully with the conditions prescribed thereon.

The following pupils were successful in Peterborough county:

B. S. Austin, L. Brackenridge, M. H. Browne, E. E. Brumwell, A. Cleary (honors), L. Cleary, G. Collinson (honors), M. C. Crough, H. D. Crowe (honors), M. F. Crowe, N. Doherty, L. English, R. THREE AMBULANCES BY SALVATION ARMY

Eastern Division, of Which Peterboro' Is a Part, Planning This Service.

The Peterborough Corps of the Salvation Army has been asked to contribute toward three ambulances to be sent with the Canadian soldiers. Notification came from the Toronto headquarters of the Army that the Eastern Division is preparing to purchase and fully equip three ambulances for service at the front. The plans are being worked out and details will be made known later.

A BRAVE BOY

Hugh, the fourteen year old son of Mr. Dan Connelly, 367 Rogers street, saved a boy's life at the dam yesterday. While Hugh was playing on the logs he noticed a lad drowning. He ran to where he was and swam against the current. The little lad was going down for the last time and Hugh grasped hold of him and swam to shore with him. Hugh then called for a man who restored him as he was almost gone. Hugh is a powerful swimmer and diver, and besides saving this boy's life.—Com.

I understand that you began your life as a newsboy," observed the friend admiringly. "No," replied the multimillionaire. "Some one has been fooling you. I began life as an infant."

$16.00 WORTH TOCACCO FOR SOLDIERS OVERSEAS

Mrs. Geo. Burnham, 754 Water street, has received from the stores of Mr. Clysdale and Mr. McCabe, tobacconists, sixteen dollars' worth of tobacco, to be sent overseas to the soldiers. A donation of one dollar has also been received from Mr. Geo. Elliott. The tobacco received at the stores was purchased in this way. Young men when buying tobacco for their own use also bought a similar amount for the boys in the trenches.

THE NEW DRUG STORE

Owing to delay in the arrival of portions of her goods and store fixtures, Miss Coughlin was unable to open her new drug store to-day as announced. She hopes to be able to have everything ready for opening on Tuesday next. The store presents a very neat and attractive interior. The wall cases, drawers and shelving has been well arranged and fitted, and are decorated with white enamel, and the walls treated to a rich blue ingrain. Mr. Thos. Houlihan had the contract for the carpenter work, which reflects credit on his neatness and skill.

USE THE REGINA ELECTRIC CLEANER

For Carpets, Rugs, Floors, Upholstery, Curtains, Walls, Ceilings, Beds, Furniture, etc., etc.

THE new REGINA ELECTRIC CLEANER is not only a high grade vacuum cleaner, but a sweeper as well, having a revolving brush inside the nozzle. The movement of the cleaner over the carpet operates the brush through a set of gears inclosed in a dustproof gear case. Thus the action of the brush is positive, and inasmuch as it is driven in the opposite direction to which the cleaner is being used it will loosen all threads, lint, etc., the suction drawing them into the bag. The Model "K" is the only electric cleaner having such a positively driven brush. This brush also raises the nap of the carpet, allowing the current of air to penetrate to the bottom of the fabric. The brush automatically adjusts itself to any kind of rug or carpet.

It is made largely of aluminum so light in weight and easily handled. The nozzle is twelve inches wide and of lows of a very large air displacement with consequent efficient results. It is so designed that it operates effectively on carpets and close to baseboards and can also be used for cleaning stair carpets. The electric motor is high grade and consumes only about one cent's worth of current per hour. It can readily be used under furniture beds etc.

How Britain Views the German Victory---An Empty Triumph For the Kaiser's Legions

LONDON Aug 6 The news of the fall of Warsaw though largely discounted here as to the practical certainty felt for the past week that the city could not be saved, made a deep impression in the metropolis On the other hand, it is considered an empty triumph for the Kaiser's legions

Admiration for Russia.

The Times will say editorially tomorrow

The impression created by the capture of Warsaw already has been eclipsed by the admiration unanimously aroused by Russia's heroic resistance The whole world marvels at the gallantry with which the Russian troops repeatedly stand at bay against unequal odds, while the coolness and deliberation of their withdrawal are the best possible augury for the time when they meet the German soldier on equal terms as regards armament

Meanwhile Russia has rendered incomparable service to the allied cause which can never fully be repaid By preserving her armies intact she has deprived the Germans of their prolonged aim, and undoubtedly has made more complex and difficult the future course of the German strategy.

Unbroken Russian legions are still massed beyond the Vistula, and Germany cannot turn elsewhere without taking them into account Russia has made the German advance far more costly than the enemy expected.

The German timetable has probably been once more upset, and the check it received days on the eastern front has resulted in yards a series of expensive delays, which are by no means at an end.

Every day gained by the Russians in postponing action, and the further breathing space he has thus gained for the western allies may prove to have a far more definite effect on the results of the war than the German triumph at Warsaw.

Russian Armies Probably Safe.

The Daily News says "The Russian armies are probably safe. Thanks to the seven days stand on the Narew, they should effect their retreat to the new line without much difficulty, but that is the best that can be said The line of the Vistula is enormously powerful, and if the Germans elect merely to hold it they can doubtless make impossible for a long time any renewed Russian offensive.

"Von Buelow's army in Courland is still pursuing its enigmatic course, and if the invasion is pushed farther this army may, by the capture of the Warsaw-Petrograd railway in the north make even the new Russian line difficult to hold. In any case the victory means for Germany the release of fresh troops She may use them against Serbia or Italy in France, Flanders or the Baltic provinces

A Terrible Price Paid.

The Daily Telegraph "It would be something for the German Emperor to be able to march proudly at the head of his troops into the city which for a whole year has defied his utmost efforts, but when he adds up the net gains and losses he will discover that at the cost of much blood and treasure he has only enabled the Russians to fall back on lines more easily defended and on these illimitable spaces of territory which have always baffled the conquerors from the west.

"If the German Generals intend to pursue the campaign to the eastward they will surely find that every step leads them into fresh positions of peril, with lengthening lines of communication and an absence of useful strategic railways.

"We need not, therefore, accept too tragically the latest victory of the German arms."

Defy Dyspepsia!

Among the symptoms of Dyspepsia or Indigestion may be mentioned a heavy, cutting pain soon after eating; a distended, full feeling of the stomach and bowels; belching of wind and flatulence; a burning sensation in the stomach, which indicates acidity; heartburn; palpitation of the heart; oppression of breathing; pain under the ribs and shoulder-blades; headache through the temples and eyes; dizziness, coated tongue and constipation; sometimes nausea or vomiting.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt is the natural specific for all these conditions. Being an antacid, it immediately relieves the acidity of the stomach and stops the fermentation. It stimulates the secretion and muscular action of the stomach and bowels, and overcomes the constipation. When its use is kept up the normal action of all the organs of digestion is re-established.

Barriefield Camp News

BARRIEFIELD CAMP Aug 5 To night there will be a dance following the mess dinner at the Head quarters, and the officers of the mess wish the press to make it clear that no eligible young man in civilians will be allowed to take part in the dance Thed feel that young men who should be wearing uniform and serving their King and country should not be permitted to enjoy any military privileges provided by others.

Since the Canadian Dental Corps commenced work in camp under Captain Winnett, assisted by Captain Simpson, the most thorough inspection of the teeth of the men in camp has been conducted, and all necessary work has been done quickly and thoroughly. In the commencement of the war, recruits were turned down by the hundreds because of some minor mouth troubles. The presence of a plate, a few decayed teeth, etc., were sufficient to reject an applicant for enlistment Now this has all been changed. Plates are allowed, decayed teeth are treated, worthless ones are extracted, and recruits are made fit for service. Rejection of men with minor mouth trouble caused much dissatisfaction in the first few months of the war. Men who were rejected asked if the military authorities wanted men to eat the Germans instead of to fight them. Before the days of the breech loading rifle, soldiers had to have good teeth to bite the end off the cartridge used in rifles like the old "Brown Bess." Good teeth are demanded now, as a matter of health.

Senator Lougheed, acting Minister of Militia, has given the medical officers of the expeditionary force much more latitude than they possessed in the opening days of the war. The stringent demands made on men who were required for fighting are not now applied to men who are serving in a clerical capacity or engaged in transport work. A man failing in the eyesight test for a fighting man should not be rejected for a transport section for instance. He may not be able to draw a fine bead with a rifle and strike an individual target at 1,000 yards and yet be able to handle horses to perfection and make an ideal transport man Such selections are now left with the medical officers, and the slight defects of sight and hearing which barred men in the beginning of the war are now eliminated, and a broader and more sensible standard established. As a result, many recruits are now accepted who have been rejected several times for overseas service.

WOMEN OF LEMBERG FAMED FOR BEAUTY

The Prager Tageblatt prints a description of Lemberg after its occupation by the Teutonic armies The writer thereof draws a vivid picture of the wrecked village just outside the city. Lemberg's devastated parks, the fallen shade trees in its beautiful streets and the entanglement of telegraph wires everywhere While he bewails all the havoc and destruction, he goes on to state—over the fact that the Austrian city still has its beautiful women They are to be seen as heretofore on the shops, restaurants, cafes and streets.

"Lemberg," he says "has been famous for years for its beautiful women They are a type by themselves and can be readily distinguished from all other women They are tall and slender, have a fine white skin with the complexion of peaches and cream There are few blondes and the majority are brunettes with blue eyes.

"In the streets I see the women of Lemberg rate as well as those of Paris They are as near the opposite sex with the air of a crowd They have small feet and hands, which set off by neat shoes They are also very proud of their small hands and take the great of care.

"An amazing fact is that the beautiful women of Lemberg are a credit to the families and all are married very young. There are fascinating creatures practically unknown in Lemberg Society, for who can see beautiful women in the streets and merely imagine that they perform all the drudgery of the home And with all this, preserve their beauty often past middle age"

STRONG TEAM COMING FROM THE QUEEN CITY ON MONDAY

Baseball fans are looking forward to the game on City Hall lay with the fast St. Paul's team of Toronto, who will play the local All-Stars. The Toronto team is composed of players in the Don Valley League, where they are leading, and Manager Tom Gilchrist has promised to put a strong team in the field.

Local followers of the game are anxious to see the St. Paul's battery, Dumas and Canfield, of whom so much has been heard lately. Canfield is supposed to have been sought by the Guelph Canadian League Club, to be the battery mate with Sonia Perez, as the St. Paul's team is conceded by many a good chance for the Amateur championship of Ontario.

It will be interesting to watch Hawke and Kerr pitch against the heavy hitters from the Queen City, with Swazie behind the bat. Players are requested to be on hand for the game Monday.

Do not forget the hour. The game commences at 2.30 p.m. sharp.

OTHERS WILL FOLLOW CONNIE MACK'S EXAMPLE

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—"In retrenching all along the line, Connie Mack is doing this year what every club in the major leagues will be doing next season," said a western club owner the other day.

"The wise Mack," he continued, "is as usual, a year ahead of everybody else. It took a lot of grit for him to do what he has done, but, like all men who do big things and accomplish great results, Connie has lots of courage.

"Mack saw the handwriting on the wall and went ahead and governed himself accordingly. Philadelphia fans will profit by his foresight, for in reorganization plans Mack has had a year's start on everybody else.

"Anyway, you can't keep a wonder like Mack down, for there is nobody in his class in digging up young players. No temperamental star can hold any club over Mack's head, for he is too resourceful in getting successors. That's where he has it on the average tactician."

BASEBALL

Joe Kelley, the Yank scout, holds that every man out looking for ball [illegible] City boy works and take on a big league series.

"You see so much mediocrity in the little leagues that when you finally run across a fellow who has just a bit more ability than the general run you think you have found a star," says Joe. "He stands out like a tombstone in a wheat field. But if you would suddenly stop watching him and go look at a big leaguer in a corresponding position, you would immediately realize that your phenom wouldn't do. There may be some bad ball players in the big leagues, but they are so much better than the best in the minors that the comparison is painful."

LAWN BOWLING

A fob match made interest very lively at the green last evening. Geo. Keath was the lucky challenger of Mr. Maynard's rink and the thrilling nature of the game made the enthusiasm and cheers assume the nature of an annual tournament. The match see-sawed about evenly until the 10th end, when Maynard got 7. The next end Kearns got 6, leaving him two down, and in the last end he evened it up and got the needed one on an extra. The score by ends:

Kearns	03202001002[illegible]	20
Maynard	00103017000[illegible]	19

TENNIS

The first league game of the Peterborough Ladies' Tennis Club will be played at St. Andrew's Church Court, on Tuesday, August 10, at 6.30 p.m. The opposite teams are St. Peter's vs. St. Andrew's. Following are the names of the players: St. Peters, Miss N. Shevlin, Miss E. Hayes, Miss E. Clancy and Miss C. Coughlin; St. Andrew's, Miss G. Evans, Miss M. Evans and Miss M. Morrison, Miss M. Rae.

TRIGGER

The attendance at the regular weekly shoot of the Gun Club, last evening, was very small, only six members being out. Following are the scores at 20 birds:

Injured While Doing His Bit

Mr. C. Robinson, Gladstone Avenue, Was Injured in French Work.

After doing his "little bit" somewhere in England, Mr. Robinson is back in Peterborough. He was paying a visit to his home in England in May, 1914, when the war broke out in the following August. Mr. Robinson at once enlisted in the famous old Worcestershire Regiment. After moving about from town to town for two months, the regiment settled down to serious training along the coast "somewhere in England." Here the work consisted of hard trench digging for four solid months, the trenches running for a good number of miles. Other work consisted of guarding German prisoners, which he says he would not "trust any farther than the end of his nose." It was while digging trenches Mr. Robinson met with an accident that caused his "temporary" discharge. He was just helping to finish the roof of a large dug-out when the top fell in, a piece of timber striking him in the right eye, causing a defect in the sight, but is gradually improving. He says if some of the boys over here could see the Belgian refugees in England who these "German cultured soldiers" have degraded especially women and children, so and avenge these crimes. Another is that would make any man's blood boil, who lives under the Union Jack is to see the poor fellows walking around on crutches, being pushed about in chairs, some with sleeveless coats and others blinded for life. Mr. Robinson says all the Canadian soldiers make a good impression in the old country and have certainly made a great name in France. His own friends, too, have done well. General French, on the occasion of the Battle of Neuve Chapelle said that if any unit could be singled out for special praise it was the "Worcesters," and it certainly is worth something to belong to a regiment like that. Mr. Robinson has two of the best characters any man could get from his commanding officers, and wishes Peterborough every success in the recruiting campaign.

Casement Narrowly Escaped Lynching

[illegible] Irish party is not represented either by a son or a brother in the army or navy. While Sean Redmond whose policy is so outspokenly consistent in defence of the Allies, was making weekly trips [illegible] Ireland, not a voice dared to be raised at these meetings against Redmond's policy or leadership. The Tipperary meeting was won [illegible] the Archbishop's approval, amidst cheers of priests present. The duty in welcoming Redmond was Dean Dillon.

Every parish in the county, numbering thirty-two, signed an address which was presented to Redmond and Dillon.

Extract from Address.

In view of the astounding lies regarding Ireland's attitude that have been printed in America, the following extract from the address of Ireland's greatest and bravest Nationalist County, sent Redmond [illegible] is quoted:

"During your lot with the other sons of the Empire in the war for human liberty, you have shown the statesmanship and acted up to the highest ideals of Irish nationality. Ireland, which is straining hard for the liberties of the restoration of its own freedom, has given its best blood in the struggle against tyranny in every and under the sun. She is doing the same today in France, Flanders and the Dardanelles. Her heroic sacrifices have won the world's admiration and established her claim to be firmly [illegible] to be a nation once again."

Further proof is unnecessary to demonstrate that Redmond's policy is [illegible] and unanimously approved.

Admire Russian Soldier.

Irish Nationalist opinion is running with war prospects. One contributing cause of the extraordinary growth of passionate friendship between troops of the various Allies today the Russian soldier occupies first place as the idol of the British heart in consequence of the stories reaching England of the astounding courage wherewith he has fought with at big guns or ammunition, and often without rifles.

As Mr. Balfour said: "It is a fight between men and munitions." This among other things, causes tranquil ity of British opinion, even under such occurrences as the long discounted fall of Warsaw.

Visitors from the French front glowing represent France's military revival. Therefore to Britain the anniversary of the beginning [illegible] real war upon Germany, the universally accepted calculation here is that we are nearer from the minimum to the maximum, whereas Germany is soon bound to descend from the maximum to the minimum.

Anglo-American Situation.

The cabled comments from American papers, friendly in tone, regarding the points of the Anglo-American dispute, have produced an excellent impression. The friendliness is represented to the extent that a number of responsible papers like the Manchester Guardian openly suggest that Sir Edward Gray ought to take further steps to meet America's just complaints. Whilst they should be alert in allowing Germany to relieve herself of the pressure upon her [illegible] supplies and export trade, England or none is ready to make any possible concession. American and neutral payments should be made [illegible] but the business must [illegible] England is willing to pay.

Casement's Escape.

Although the causes are [illegible] secrecy of England's self-defensive policy against a lawless enemy, [illegible] papers are not permitted to publish the story, well known privately, that Roger Casement when, when imprisoned, he endeavored to persuade to betray their oaths and join Germany.

A Victory in Land Struggle.

This week marks the [illegible] conclusion of one of the most [illegible] and prolonged struggles of the Irish peoples to win back land from the landlords. After a thirty years fight which involved violent deeds for more than thirty, also included battles wherein the police and military participated, Lord Clanricarde's estates have been compulsorily acquired by decree of the final court of appeal. The ruthless, [illegible] man, therefore," finally disappears from Irish life.

Nathan Mathews, the Boston lawyer received great attention here, ended with a lunch, plus an interview and conversation with Mr. Asquith. In frank, friendly discussion of the state of American relations he said: "Never have I known English opinion more friendly than it is today toward America."

MENINGITIS WAS CAUSE OF DEATH

Of Eight Year Old Fred Collins Who Was Visiting His Cousin in the City

The death of Master Fred Collins, son of Mr. Frederick Collins, of Otonabee township, which occurred yesterday afternoon, is particularly sad in that he came to the city to visit his cousin, Mr. Jas. Lobb, [illegible] and while here he contracted the dread disease of spinal meningitis.

Master Fred was eight years of age. His father, Mr. F. Collins, is well known throughout the township of Otonabee as he has a store, and is postmaster at Stewarts Hall, Otonabee. The boy came to the city a week ago to visit his cousin, Mr. Jas. Lobb's son. He was to have returned to his home yesterday. On Wednesday he was able to be about but became ill during the evening and was very sick through the night. On Thursday his condition became very much worse, and yesterday afternoon he passed away at the home of his uncle, 61 Argyle street.

The funeral took place at 3 o'clock this afternoon from Cemetery [illegible] taking parbours to Little Lake cemetery.

A CRY FROM THE TRENCHES

When our Canadian boys were at Salisbury, with money in their pockets and every facility for satisfying their wants, the necessity for sending them tobacco and cigarettes was not so urgent; but now that they are in the trenches, the need for something to smoke is very urgent indeed. Our boys are giving their lives; all they ask of us is something to smoke. We therefore make an appeal to the public for subscriptions to The Examiner Cigarette and Tobacco Fund for Canadians overseas.

THE RETURN POSTAL.

One of the most pleasing feature of The Examiner Fund is that every subscriber will receive a "personal thank you" from the particular soldier who has benefitted. This is done by means of a return postal card bearing the name and address of the subscriber and which The Examiner will put in every package sent to the front.

These postcards will be interesting souvenirs from the men who are "doing their bit" in the trenches in Flanders.

The 25c Parcel Contains:—50 Cigarettes. 4 ounces Smoking Mixture. Some Matches and a Postcard addressed to you. The Dollar Parcel Contains:—1 Briar Pipe. 1 Rubber-lined Tobacco Pouch. 1 Tinder Lighter. 50 Cigarettes. 4 ounces of Tobacco. Some Matches and a Postcard addressed to you. All cheques and orders to be made payable to Tobacco Fund, The Examiner, Peterborough, Ont. Inquiries concerning the Fund should be sent to the above address.

30 BRITISH PRISONERS IN GERMANY ASK TO BE SHOT

Prefer Death to Starvation in Detention Camp at Senne, in Westphalia, Where One Perishes

LONDON, Aug 4—So bad were the conditions at first at the detention camp at Senne, near Paderborn, in Westphalia, that thirty British prisoners of war asked to be shot rather than be starved to death. One prisoner from Ipswich died last month and his death was considered to be due to starvation and exposure. That is the story of Private Cuthbert, of the Fourth Field Ambulance of the First Guards brigade, who has been a prisoner at Senne for ten months, and comes from Stowmarket, Suffolk.

After the retreat from Mons Cuthbert was left behind at Landrecies in charge of the wounded in hospital. When the Germans arrived a Uhlan officer told Cuthbert and other ambulance men, he states, that they would be shot, as they had been gouging out the eyes of German wounded with clasp knives. A British officer, who could speak German, instantly denied this allegation, and after some conversation the Uhlan officer said that if the British soldiers behaved themselves they would be sent to Germany where they would be well fed, well looked after and have good recreation. This was after they had been standing against a wall for half an hour waiting to be shot.

The Uhlan's promise did not agree with the facts, as the food and general conditions at the camp were very bad at first. It was impossible to eat the food provided. Cuthbert was one of seventy-five prisoners who travelled in a cattle truck to Germany. As they passed troop trains the German soldiers threw bayonets and other missiles at them ,and at every station at which their train stopped the guard showed persons who came to see the prisoners their clasp knives and told them that they were used to gouge out the eyes of German wounded. This made the inhabitants furious, and the poor prisoners had hard experiences. It was impossible to get a drink of water anywhere.

For the first three months, after reaching Senne, the prisoners lived in the open, with one blanket between two and very little straw. After that they received horse tents.

Cuthbert described the food as extremely bad. A piece of bread weighing seven ounces was served out daily. This had to last twenty-four hours, and was often mouldy. They also had a pint of coffee morning and evening, and at noon what he called "pigs' swill, which the Germans may have termed soup." Occasionally a piece of sausage also was given.

During the whole time the prisoners were kept at work making roads, preparing railway tracks and breaking stones, and some were to a farm, where they were roused up at daylight and had to work very long hours.

BLESSINGS ALONG THE WAY

NOW many are familiar with the old Bible story relating to the meeting of Abraham, when he was returning home from battle, with the high priest Melchizedek, who blessed him? Our attention has been particularly drawn to this story by a recent writer, who said in part:

"Abraham's heart must have been hard on that day. He was returning from battle. His blood was hot within him. Butchery tends to make men butchers. He was in danger of returning home unsweetened and uncooled. But picture this gracious figure of Melchizedek crossing his path, a reminder of brotherhood and heaven, waiting to bestow a blessing. After Abraham had received the benediction, he was a different man. A sort of melody had driven out the din of strife. Upon his life there lingered a certain sanctity and peace. A perfect flood of day had broken through the clouds. His bitterness was gone—all because a gracious soul had met him on the way."

Is there not a lesson for us in the foregoing? Does it not bring to our minds the remembrance that there are Melchizedeks to-day crossing our daily pathway and radiating the benediction and blessing of a refining influence. We recall the friend who always meets us with a cheery word and a smile which seems to fairly enfold us. We go on our way lifted out of ourselves and with a glow in our hearts which does not leave us for hours.

We become so used to battling for our daily bread and striving to make our way in the world, that we need some refining agency to draw out the best that is in us and to sweeten the soul which is in danger of becoming sordid and warped.

The influences for good are all around us, but too often we fail to appreciate them. Each day, too, dawns as a Melchizedek with a fresh inspiration, a new glory and revelation to each of us, but often we do not see it, taking each day in the same matter-of-fact way. It is our privilege to greet Melchizedeks in many forms. It is an even greater God-given privilege to be a Melchizedek.—M.M.R.

PRESBYTERIANS GROWING

That the growth of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and in New York City in members and in money during the last year exceeded all previous records, and that in spite of war and a considerable assistance given to agencies in Europe that are crippled in their work, was made known yesterday. Presbyterian membership in the United States now amounts to 1,513,046 persons, an increase of 54,961 above last year. This is the greatest increase this church ever made in a single year when no consolidations swelled the figures. A few years ago the Cumberland Church came in, but even that record has now been surpassed.

Last year 116,000 persons were examined by elders with a view to membership, a number larger by 25,000 than ever applied for membership in the Presbyterian Church in a single year since its organization.

GRANDMOTHER'S DREAM.

Mamma said, "Little one, go and see,
If grandmother's ready to come to tea
I knew I mustn't disturb her, so
I stepped very gently along, tip-toe.
And stood a moment to take a peep,
And there was grandmother, fast asleep

A Difference In Two Fields

Oats Treated Before Sowing Showed a Minimum Amount of Smut

After five days judging, Mr. W. Hickson returned from Northumberland county on last Friday evening. Out of all the fields he judged he only found two farmers that had treated for smut. In one field the treatment was by immersing the bags and grain twenty minutes in the formulin and water and the other was by sprinkling the mixture of formalin on the oats. In the field that was sown from the immersion process, he only found one head of smut, but the field that was sown from the grain that was sprinkled he found several heads of smut. The treatment in both cases was performed by the same persons and with the same material, so it is evident that the immersion process is the more effective of the two. The fields that were not treated ranged from ten to forty per cent. smut in the district judged, so the farmers can draw their own conclusions, what is the best thing to do before sowing oats.

THE GERMAN LOSSES TO DATE OVER TWO MILLIONS

Pathetic Marriage In French Capital

PARIS, Aug. 8.—The most pathetic marriage in Paris since the war started was celebrated in the Church of the Antoine Quarter between Lieut. Canlers, who lost both eyes and his left arm in the explosion of a shell at Vauquois, Lorraine, and Mlle Marcelle Pothion, mistress at the Normal School at Tunis.

They were attended by Comtesse Jan de Castellane, sister-in-law of founder of the Blind Institution of America, and Mrs. Bliss, wife of the First Secretary of the American Embassy.

The engagement dated from before the war. After being so badly wounded he tried to release his fiancee from her promise. She refused.

Despite the mutilation of his face, the couple made a magnificent appearance. The scene at the Mairie before the religious ceremony filled the spectators with deep emotion.

Upon the official excusing the bridegroom from signing the register the bride spoke up with charming and tender eagerness:

"Yes, yes he can sign. He would rather. I can help him."

As she smilingly guided his hand across the page there were few onlookers whose eyes were dry.

Importance of Operations At the Dardanelles Keenly Realized in Great Britain

Allies Will Try to Influence Balkans by Progress There ---Increasingly Manifest That Germany Looks to East For Settlement of the War.

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Russia having rejected what in England is regarded as a bona fide proposal made by the German Emperor for peace with a part of Poland traded for Galicia the great struggle in the east must continue, and as there is no indication of an immediate general offensive by either side in the west, the struggle of the Russian forces to shake themselves free of the Austro-German grip remains the chief factor in the war news, with an added interest in the Dardanelles operations.

The Gallipoli field will be closely watched because of its possible bearing on the Balkan situation again simmering by reason of renewed Quadruple Entente pressure on Bulgaria and Greece. Never before has the importance of the operations at the Dardanelles been more keenly realized in Great Britain and France than now, especially so as there are many indications that Germany plans to deliver her next hard blow against Serbia in order to link up with Turkey and thus checkmate the spring plans of the Entente allied powers.

It is increasingly manifest that Germany looks to the east for a settlement of the war. By over-running Serbia she would occupy a very favourable strategic position to invoke Bulgaria's passive or active aid in reaching Constintinople along the main line. The expectation of such a move doubtless has brought about the renewed negotiations between the Entente allies and Bulgaria.

The Turks claim success in the recent trench warfare on the Gallipoli peninsula, but there really has been no noteworthy change in the situation so far as the public is aware.

The Austro-Germans continue to make progress both to the north-east and to the south-east of Warsaw and the Austro-Hungarians claim to have cut in two the Russian forces which retreated after losing the Lublin-Cholm railroad.

Keep your temper. It is worth more to you than to anyone else.

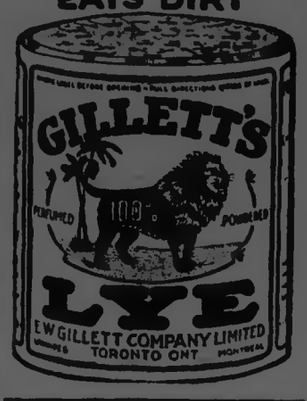
GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT



CAN'T BE CAUGHT AS IN THE DAYS OF NAPOLEON

Examiner Special:

BUDAPEST, Aug. 10 A Budapest newspaper publishes an interview with Gen. Von Buelow, obtained at the front, in which the general discusses the difference between the present German campaign in Russia and that of Napoleon in 1812.

"It has been remarked," said the general, "that the present strategy of the Russians is the same as that which proved effective against Napoleon. Such strategy was effective then, but now, when means of communication have been so much improved. The bread which our soldiers eat to-day in Windau, was baked in Brelau yesterday.

"In times when a railway is being built a mile behind the advancing forces, when thousands of motor lorries are close behind us, when asphalt roads grow ,as it were, out of the earth, so much strategy is effective. We drink German water and eat fresh meat direct from Berlin, and can build a road, if necessary, fifty miles long in two days. It is therefore, nonsense to speak of the days and strategy of Napoleon."

Many a Business Man who is careful to protect himself in money matters, is careless about health—his most valuable asset.

For many, tea or coffee drinking silently undermines health, because each cup contains from 1½ to 3 grains of the cumulative, harmful drug, caffeine.

Five to six grains of caffeine will kill a rabbit or a cat, and repeated daily will cripple a man.

How cripple a man? The caffeine, little by little, causes hardening of the arteries and premature old age, showing more in some than in others.

Some of the symptoms of caffeine poisoning are headache, nervousness, biliousness, heart flutter, sleeplessness at night, and "fag" after reaction of the drug in the daytime.

The way to avoid all tea and coffee troubles is to leave both tea and coffee alone and use

One Hundred Million Dollars in British Gold

Special to The Examiner

NEW RORK, Aug. 10. —One hundred million dollars in British gold arrived here this morning, guarded by a small army of secret service men. It came here from Canada very secretly in a big steel car, and was removed in ordinary looking boxes to the United States sub-treasury and deposited to the credit of J. P. Morgan & Co. It reached this continent via Canada, crossing the Atlantic on Canadian ships. It is pay for great shipments of arms and ammunitions from this country to British, French and Russian ports.

Finer Weather Is In Prospect

If the Toronto Meteorological Department can arrange it, and it has reasonable hopes that it can the weather during the next weeks at least will be exactly what the farmers in Ontario are looking for fine and dry and warm and in every way favorable to the growing and ripening crops.

The Bureau yesterday in its regular bulletin said that the outlook was promising for a period of fine weather in Ontario.

The rain is over for a time, for a few days at any rate according to all indications. The weather should be all that the farmers desire bright and warm with no nightly chill to threaten the maturing harvest.

There is every likelihood that the same conditions will prevail over the Middle Western Provinces, where dry hot weather is so much longed for by the wheat growers at the present juncture. In fact the Meteorological Office has given the weather a certificate for the next few days that the farmer is taking on trust.

The British bull dog is not handsome but he sticks to business and never gets the blues.

Crop is In Good Condition

Winnipeg, August 10. The special weekly crop report of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture states that with warmer weather the wheat crop has improved during the past week and is changing colour quickly in the southern portion of the province west of Moose Jaw. With a continuance of favourable weather harvest should be general in that part of the province during the last week of August while it is expected that some fields of barley will be cut during the next ten days.

Absence of frost seriously conditions following the rains has kept the crop largely free from this blight. Local cash demands for No. 1 and 2 northern wheat was active and some off grades were also in demand. Light offerings were fully equal to requirements. There was little enquiry for oats but barley and flax were not asked for.

ITALIANS FIGHT FOR AN EARLY AND COMPLETE VICTORY

Special to The Examiner

MILAN, Aug. 9 (via Lausanne and London, Aug. 10.)—The second general Italian offensive in the lower Isonzo is finished, and Goritz is still in Austrian hands. The terrible defensive line formed by the river, hills and trenches is still strategically intact, although in two places it is worn exceedingly thin. Austrians made use of great science and fought bravely, assisted by many Babarians. Among other experiments the Austrians charged with electricity barbed wire nettings protecting the principal trenches

GLASS PLATES ON HEELS.

Special battalions of Italians were chosen to destroy whatever remained of the trenches after the preliminary bombardment. Two glass plaques were attached to the heels of each of these men to prevent his electrocution. According to the testimony of an officer attached to one of these battalions the current sent through the wires was sometimes so high it melted the plates and killed the men. The Italians have advanced along the lower Isonzo in some places to the depth of seven kilometers and planted the Italian flag in several spots whose possession gives great advantage.

FROM ABOVE AND BELOW

Gen. Cadorna's plan is to reduce Goritz, the key to Trieste, by piercing the defence above and below the town. He moved half the army previously operating in Trentino to Isonzo, increasing the forces there to 300,000. The attack began July 18th. On the 20th the Italian left succeeded in gaining a little ground on the heights of Plava, and advancing considerably against the extremely strong reinforced concrete trenches of Podgora, less than three miles from Goritz itself. On the 25th the Italians suddenly switching to Carso, took almost the whole Bosco Del Cappuccio on the northern edge of the plateau, at the same time gaining a foothold at Sella Di San Martino. The 26th was the day of decisive action. The Italians attacked, and after five assaults, took a strong position at Monte San Michele, dominating the entire plain before Goritz.

ITALIANS HOLD WHAT THEY WON

On the 28th, the Austrians counter-attacked with 170,000 men, among whom were 30,000 Bavarians, whose losses when finally repulsed, were about 12,000.

The Italian position on Monte San Michele dominates railroads from Goritz to Trieste and Goritz to Laibach, and consequently the Austrians can be reinforced only by troops arriving in auto trucks or on foot.

The second battle of Isonzo was not a complete Italian success but not even the crack Kaiserjeger troops of the Austrian Emperor could stop the Italian advance. The losses on both sides were extremely heavy.

The third offensive will soon follow, for the Italians are keenly aware that Austro-German victors returning from Russia will soon be massed against their opponents on the southern and western fronts.

NOT THE BIGGEST
BUT THERE'S NONE BETTER

The size of an institution doesn't necessarily determine the quality of its product or service.

The biggest doesn't always produce the best.

It all depends upon the quality of the material used, the skill and interest of the workman, and the intention of the man behind.

We frankly admit that ours is not the largest Optical Establishment in Ontario.

But we do maintain that, with our thoroughly modern equipped shop and with well paid workmen personally interested in its welfare, and working under the supervision of Mr. Fowler, we get better results at less cost to the customer from our parlors than do the larger shops.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

"There was my luck, again," sez he, "the moon had it's only account to remain behind I struck the deep shadow where this Allan pounced out on me. I had just one quick glance at him, and if it wasn't for one thing I'd think it was Panther Emmons."

"What's the one thing?" sez I.

"Well," sez Baldy, layin' it off to me with his hand, "Panther Emmons is so dog-gone, everlastin' mean that he never would 'a' let my wooden leg where it could be got at again. Otherwise I'd think it was him."

"What has Panther Emmons got to do with Baldy?" sez I.

"He ain't got nothin' 'cept me," sez Baldy, "but he's all the time accusin' me o' things, the same as the rest. I've carried messages and such when told to, but I never revealed nothin'. Go-betweens allus do get the worst of it. All the pay I ever got was a little licker and tobacco and yet every time their plans went wrong, they allus started to lynch me for havin' squealed and give up their plans. I never knew their plans, they never confided nothin' to me, and yet says as I'm sorry as I'm sorry every time I've' came a single hitch in anything, I was accused o' treachery, treason, and loose-mouthedness, and nothin' soothed 'em except seein' me wriggle and stretch at the end of a rope, tryin' to get my toes to the ground.

"If I did know anything provin'-sure-again' any one of 'em I'd tell it to you but, and I'd tell it pronto. Gosh Hummage sez 'at this 'ere team Parts never does leave a trail till he sets what's made the road and I'd tell you, great law, if I really did. I did tell Bill Jones, and look how he had at the Bend, and Jones tried to comfort him, and soon how old Josiah was now on their trail. When I got through Baldy made some comments on his luck, and then stood up and threw his wooden leg as far as he could after which he sat down lookin' more discouraged than ever.

"What's the trouble now?" sez I.

"I'm beat," sez Baldy, "I'm licked to a finish. Big Jeff and Panther are more scared of old Josiah Cornell 'n they are of the last judgment, and if he once took after 'em they never turned back. Now then, if it wasn't none o' these scamps, what I want to know is, who in the hell has been shootin' me up and beatin' an' abusin' me every time I've stuck my nose out o' doors for the last year or two—that's what I want to know."

Well, I couldn't see much sense in it, myself, though I was sure that him lookin' like Bud Stern had drawn most of the shots, and his bein' downright ornery had won him his beatin's. He sat in his chariot with his face scrooged up while he rubbed his sore spots and studied over his troubles. Suddenly he passed me over the most cute wink that ever was handed to me, and sez: "I bet I know who it was, I bet I know."

Then he jumped down and gathered up his wooden leg, and I couldn't get a word out of him as to who he suspicioned had been takin' liberties with him.

"Where's my crowd o' sons?" sez he.

"They're down around the south line," sez I.

"I got to have those boys early this afternoon," sez Baldy. "I simply got to have 'em. Dan Cooper has got a contract to freight some stuff for a feller who is movin' his store, and he's took his whole entire outfit, and we have to do the chorin'. He's got some young mules over there now which are the strayin'est critters in the world, except that old red cuy he's milkin'. She wouldn't stay penned up in a hole in the ocean. I simply got to have my whole outfit o' sons."

"You'll have to ride out an' get 'em yourself, then," sez I, a little short. I wouldn't have stood for it at all, except that Mrs. Cooper was the finest woman in the world and it wouldn't do to leave her alone, especially as Panther and Big Jeff had said about Panther havin' it in for Dan. Panther was the last to leave the Horseshoe and he had been again' attackin' it first, so he naturally wouldn't feel any too friendly towards Big Jeff.

Panther had done the best work and it was his men which were killed, so I didn't think he'd join Jeff at all, and Baldy's tale made me purty certain he was still in our neighbourhood. Both sides of the crick were so marked up durin' the scrap that old Josiah couldn't pick up a trail until he got well out, so if Panther had cut off short, he'd never be missed. I made up my mind to head for the Horseshoe shortly after supper and follow Kate when she came, so that she'd be safe from him. She thought she was a regular scout, but it had been Placido's ears and eyes and nose which had done her watchin' for her.

Baldy went to the shop and fixed up his leg, got some extra feed for his ponies, and some cartridges for his gun, and then left grumblin' a little. I had kept such close watch on him out of spite at his not tellin' me who he suspicioned that I hadn't give him a chance to buy anything he couldn't have had for the askin'.

Then I went in to eat some food and found that Tom Smith had took pity on his mother and was spendin' a brief visit with her. I warned 'em to be mighty careful, and they promised not to stray outdoors nor to pull back the curtains. The Begum had put up curtains as hard to see through as one of Isaac's yokes, and I reckoned Tom Smith was as much out of suspicion there as anywhere.

Right after dinner, Slim Jones came ridin' in slow and careful on account of a bullet-hole through the sole muscle of his waist. This wound didn't amount to much, but was painful and as they didn't need him he had turned back. He told about how they had gathered at Bradin's and then started north in twos and three. When they reached the first campin' place, they had got suspicious of the feller who had brought in the news about this big rustlin', but they waited 'til the next day and then his whole line o' talk kept gettin' more suspicious until finally Bradin had ordered him tested.

The feller held out again' the test for some time, but finally turned the whole plan loose. Then they had all put out for the Lion Head hopin' to be in time to head off the raid; but soon after crossin' the Canadian, they had seen Big Jeff's crowd lookin' purty badly handled, both hosses and men. Bradin had over twenty men with him and he had turned Big Jeff to the west, while old Josiah and his three had come up the angle at him.

Old Josiah had took charge and they had kept up a runnin' fight, all the time edgin' west through broken country, and the only thing the old hermit dreaded was that a squad of rangers who were cleanin' things up out that way, might arrive and stop the game before it was all played out. Slim was certain that Panther Emmons wasn't in the crowd at all.

By the time I had got some of Monody's salve and a clean cloth and Slim had gone to the bunk-shack to cinch himself, the Begum called me in and began to ask me questions which surprised me exceeding. It seems that she had been in the cook-shack fixin' up some extras for Tom Smith when Slim had arrived, and she had waited until I was busy gettin' the cloth, and then she had pumped Slim for news of Bradin's ranch, and had discovered that in my account of Kate's bein' a guest there Truth had been rudely crushed to earth and that it was high time for her to rise again.

The Begum opened up by pointin' out to me how wicked it was to tell untruths, and so on, and I never tumbled to what she was drivin' at until she said she allus thought it was suspicious for an indicated gel with good manners to be wearin' a leather suit and ridin' alone in such a God-forsaken place, and then she began to squeeze me for news of what had become of this gel, and when I refused to give down the news, she began to hint meanness about Kate.

I never feel sorry for the moon when a yaller hound howls at it, and so in this case I was only mildly amused at the method the Begum was usin' to pump me; but Tom Smith never did have as much patience as a flea, and so he drew himself up like a jay-bird in a cherry tree, and sez: "Mother, this is the girl I would marry if I could."

This stilled the storm like pourin' oil on the troubled waters of a mill-pond, and I withdrew. The Begum was tellin' Tom Smith about havin' wrote for his father and beggin' him not to do nothin' till his father arrived. She also enlarged on what quality he was and Tom Smith tried to balance this off by braggin' about how vicious he'd been. I couldn't see as it mattered much which side won, so I slid right out.

Soon after this Jim, Flames and the Hagus boys arrived, and Jim was enough out of humour to be glad of the chance of a few words with me. "What are you doin'," sez he, as the children had gone in for a bite to eat.

"Just clearin' up a few matters so I can pitch in on the fall work," sez I.

OBEDIENCE TO GOD THE BEST EDUCATION

"The Wisdom of This World Is Foolishness With God," Said St. Paul.

Unbelief and Ignorance of God Abounding — Darkness of This World Palpable—God's People Walking in the Light—Knowledge of God's Word Costly—Time, Attention, Thought, and Loss of Worldly Influence the Price — Illuminating Power of Scripture — simple, Harmonious, and Reasonable Are the Teachings of the Word.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Syracuse, N.Y., Aug. 8. Pastor Russell preached here today on the text, "Sanctify them through Thy Truth; Thy Word is Truth." (John 17:17.) He spoke as follows:

Today we find that the great majority of people think very little about the Word of God, so that as a matter of fact our great colleges teach nothing pertaining to the Bible. Years ago it was quite customary that the Bible should have a prominent place in the schools, and the pupils were all under religious influences; for nearly every college was under the control of some denomination. This gave them a sectarian bias, however; and to whatever extent they were sectarian they were not free to study Truth.

But the world in its wisdom has been leaving everything pertaining to the Bible. To-day our college-bred men are the greatest opponents of the Word of God. The great majority of those graduated from our colleges within the past thirty years are total unbelievers in the Bible as God's Inspired Word. Many of them are ministers, who select their texts from the Bible and who retain a certain respect for it. Their parents venerated it, and so the sons still cherish it as they would an old friend. They regard it as they would a pair of old shoes that their great-grandfather had used—not that the shoes would have any intrinsic value, but that they were great-grandfather's shoes. Then the Bible is a convenient place from which to get texts. They know, too, that a great many people are not college-bred and still reverence the Old Book. They like to condescend to the extent of showing that they do not altogether ignore the sentiments of the common people.

If cross-examined carefully, probably ninety-five of every hundred of these would say, "I do not believe the Bible is the Word of God." Although many ministers do not so express themselves in the pulpit, they do so in private. As an instance of clerical unbelief in the teachings of Scripture, take the case of Rev. Dr. Aked. This well-known clergyman moved some years ago to the Pacific Coast, and became president of the Church Federation in San Francisco. Both orally and in print this gentleman expressed his utter unbelief in the prehuman existence of our Lord Jesus—his belief being that our Lord was merely an ordinary man, a fine man. This view was published broadcast.

The next day somebody came out in the San Francisco papers and said that with such sentiments Dr. Aked should resign his position as president of the Church Federation, that certainly nobody would be desirable in that position who did not believe that Jesus had more than human nature who thus discarded the Bible. The day following, Dr. Aked resigned, saying that he did not wish to offend anybody, etc. The Church Federation of ministers met, and re-elected him on the basis of his profession that he did not believe that Jesus Christ had either a prehuman existence or a superior birth! As far as I know, Dr. Aked is still president of the Church Federation; and those ministers that re-elected him, seventy-eight out of a hundred, were willing to come out in public and say so.

The point to which I am calling attention is this: The colleges and the ministers have abandoned the Word of God. The preachers like to select a text from it, just as they might on other occasions quote from Shakespeare. So far as we may judge, this is the general sentiment amongst them. Are they then sanctified by the Truth, the Word of God? If they declare that God has given a message to the world or to the Church, where do they find it, if not in the Bible?

The majority of the preachers do not believe in personal inspiration, except in the sense in which some people may be said to have a sort of intuition for music, etc., and so might be called inspired—that artist was inspired when painting that picture or composing that tune. But as for any belief in such inspiration as the Bible teaches—that "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit," not knowing what they were saying—I doubt that five per cent. of the ministers thus believe the Bible to be the Word of God. (2 Peter 1:21; 1 Peter 1:10-12.) With the religious teachers and preachers in this condition of unbelief, is it any wonder that true religion is at a discount with the people? It would be strange if matters were different. Jesus said, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith upon the earth?" You are witnesses with me that He has come and has found very little faith. 2 Peter 3:3-9.

Away back in the time of the Prophet Daniel, God declared that in the Time of the End He would grant a special blessing upon Bible students. (Daniel 12:1-10.) And here we are, down in the Time of the End! Many are running to and fro in automobiles, electric trams, steam railroads, etc. Knowledge is increasing everywhere. But the worldly-wise do not understand; for these things of God's Word are hidden from the wise and prudent, and revealed unto babes—those not too wise in matters pertaining to this world. (Matt. 11:25.) These accept the Word of God and are guided by it. To these, therefore, has come a great blessing.

Our Lord also spoke about the end of the Gospel Age. His parable of The Ten Virgins refers not to the world, but to the Church—the wise and the foolish in the Church of Christ. (Matthew 25:1-13.) In the end of the Age all the virgins, all justified believers, were ready to meet Him. But the Bridegroom tarried, and for a while all the virgins slumbered and slept. Then came the Message, "Behold the Bridegroom"—He is here! All the virgins awakened. The wise virgins had oil in their vessels. They trimmed their lamps (Psalm 119:105); they saw the Truth, and were prepared to follow the Bridegroom in to the Marriage of the Lamb.

But the foolish virgins did not have the light. When they asked the wise virgins for oil, the wise virgins declared that they could not spare it. The oil represents the Holy Spirit and the enlightenment which it brings. The foolish virgins go to buy when they give time for study and investigation—time taken from business, pleasure, and worldly affairs, that they may obtain the oil which God is pleased that His people should have. Those who do not find time for investigation do not wish to have the oil, the light. Although they are true Christians, yet they are not willing to pay the price and get the oil. Whoever is now rejoicing in the light of Present Truth will testify that it cost him something—something of worldly influence, time, attention, thought—to have the oil and the light, to make ready to go in to the Marriage.

How well the Master understood the present situation! God wished the light to cost something. To some of olden time our Lord said, "Sit down and count the cost"—how much the light will cost you—what discipleship will cost. After having put your hand to the plow, do not look longingly back to the things of the world. God is not pleased with such service. Whoever prefers the world, the flesh, and the Devil may stay with them. During the Millennial Age the Lord will deal with that class, and will give them mercy, blessings. But now He is calling for a special class that delight to do the Father's will, that do not need to be urged, pushed, and whipped. They must have the spirit of the Master, of whom it is written: "I delight to do Thy will, O My God. Thy Law is written in My heart."

Should any of this class come under a measure of difficulty, and temporarily become weak in the doing of the Lord's will, He will give them the necessary experiences, if their hearts are right. He will awaken them from their lethargy, just as in the parable all the foolish virgins were awakened.

God is not seeking to deceive people or to force them into the Kingdom. During this Gospel Age He has merely sent forth His Message to gather out those who wished to respond. God has been taking out a people for His name—using no force, no compulsion, merely His Word. We heard the call, speaking peace through Jesus Christ. Our hearts responded, and we came back into harmony with God. The Word informed us that through the death of His Son God had made all arrangements for covering our sins; and that He was willing to receive us just as if we had not been sinners—willing to take us into His family and make us His heirs, joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord.

But all this was merely the voice, the promise, of God. There was nothing to insist upon our becoming children of God; and if we were received into His family it was because we willingly, intentionally, gave ourselves to Him. All through the Gospel Age the Word of God has gone forth. If He had sent force, He could quickly have gathered all that He desired. After a few miracles people would have waked up and said, "What will happen to us if we do not get right with God?" That class will be dealt with by and by. Messiah's Kingdom will manifest the Power and the Wisdom of God.

Coming back to our text, we see that the Lord sent forth His Word, to accomplish a certain mission. His Word is Truth—not truth on every subject, but on the most important ones. Of these important subjects the principal one is that which God purposes to teach all His intelligent creatures—obedience to Himself. All other education will prove to be valueless, perhaps injurious, unless associated with obedience to God.

The world is becoming very much discontented. People are unhappy; they crave more money and less work. Nobody is satisfied except true Christians. The majority of professed Christians are under the delusions of the present time. But the true Christian has that which is satisfactory. Having given his all to the Lord, he has received the blessed assurance that all things shall work together for good to them that love God, to the called according to His purposes. Therefore he is content to let the Heavenly Father shape his affairs. Should he get out of work, God knows how to provide employment. He could feed Elijah by the brook, the ravens bringing the Prophet the necessary food.—1 Kings 17:3, 6.

One cannot fellowship with the world, and at the same time be great in the Lord. We prefer to be amongst those to whom the Master will say, "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." The knowledge that God is for us and loves us is a satisfying portion to heart and mind. Having left the world to follow Jesus and daily seeking to walk in His steps, the Church class are loved of the Father. They are the ones whom He has called.

In the beginning God created the Lord Jesus, the Logos. (Colossians 1:15; Revelation 3:14.) Then the Logos, as His active Agent, made the different orders of spirit beings, and finally man. (John 1:1-3.) After man had fallen into sin, God said, "We will let him have his experience with death and consequences. In due time I will send a great Redeemer, to ransom Adam and all his posterity. During the Seventh Thousand Year Day of man's existence this Redeemer will take charge of humanity. Meantime I will have nothing to do with them until they are restored to perfection."

But while God was thus resting from His earthly creation, He considered it a good time to bring in a New Creation. The first of this New Creation was the One who redeemed mankind. He passed through His experiences and testings eighteen hundred and more years ago. But this was not all of the Divine Plan. As the Apostle says, there was a secret which God had kept hidden from before the foundation of the world—His Purpose to have not merely a great Redeemer for mankind, but a people taken out from amongst humanity to be the Church of the Firstborns. These were to constitute the New Creation, of which the Redeemer would become the Head.

This work of gathering the Church class has been progressing for nearly nineteen centuries. All who have been begotten of the Holy Spirit are members of the New Creation, to whom old things have passed away, and all things have become new. (2 Corinthians 5:17.) From the very moment of their spirit-begetting, the light of the Truth begins to enlighten the minds of these New Creatures. They begin to see something of the lengths and breadths, the heights and depths, of God's character. It is a revelation. The Word of God is illuminating; the Holy Spirit has great illuminating power, and gradually rises more and more with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God.

Of this class God says, "Gather My saints together unto Me, those who have made a Covenant with Me by sacrifice." (Psalm 50:5.) He does not say, Those who have made a covenant to enter some church system, although some may have made a covenant with God and ignorantly with some church system also. Many people like to count themselves in amongst God's people, yet they have never entered into a covenant with Him. Apparently they think that they will receive the same reward as will those who have entered into such a covenant; but they are mistaken. No one will receive the Prize of the High Calling except those who have entered the race in the proper way and have run according to the prescribed rules.

Whoever makes this Covenant of Sacrifice is walking in the Master's footsteps. Our Lord made it at the age of thirty years. At Jordan He gave Himself, a perfect man, His time, His will—everything—to do the Father's will, whatever that might be. The Father indicated His acceptance by begetting our Lord with the Holy Spirit and by giving Him the enlightenment that goes with it. Whoever would be His footstep follower must also covenant to give his time, his influence, his money—everything—to the Lord. Then the Lord says, "I will place in your care those things which you have given Me. If you demonstrate your faithfulness as steward of these little things, I will know that you can be trusted with the greater things of the Kingdom. If you try to withhold what you have consecrated, you have not the spirit for which I am looking. I am seeking those who love Me and desire to serve Me."

From first to last the Bible is in harmony with itself. This is God's Message. This is His way of reaching His Elect, whom He desires to take out of the world. For nineteen centuries the Church has been engaged in calling men apart from the world that they might gain Divine favor and joint-heirship with Jesus in His Kingdom.

"Sanctify them through Thy Truth; Thy Word is Truth." The world does not have this Message; therefore its truth cannot sanctify. Mankind are seeking otherwise, and are getting more or less confused and further away from God through their studies. It is a remarkable fact that we seldom find any one well versed in the sciences who has any faith in God or in the Bible. Men have only the truth that the Prophet Moses discounted. (Hebrews 11:26.) This is the world's portion to-day. But the Science which will sanctify toward God, the Science in which we are in harmony with God, is such which we are now happy and will be during the Time of Trouble, is ours. Faithful is He who has called us, who will also sanctify us, according to the riches of His grace in Christ Jesus our Lord.—1 Thessalonians 5:23, 24.

VIOLENT ATTACKS OF DYSPEPSIA

Suffered Tortures Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, Jan. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been made well by "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered so much that at last I would not dare to eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives" and after taking them I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was well. I quickly regained my lost weight—and now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am fully recovered, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives.'

BRILLIANT SCHOLAR IS FIRST SEA LORD

Sir Henry Jackson Shares Marconi's Invention—Modest and Learned—Looks Anything But Sailor

A man of sixty, with the elastic figure, erect carriage, and quick, nervous walk of half his years; with a clear-cut, clever, clean-shaven face and keen eyes which take in everything at a glance. Such is the appearance is Sir Henry Bradwardine Jackson when he stepped unexpectedly into Lord Fisher's shoes as "Jacky" of the world's greatest navy in the world's greatest war. Nowhere in the King's fleet will you find a man who so little suggests the typical sailor. Out of his uniform he might be a fashionable physician, a diplomatist or a lawyer of distinction. His voice is gentle, his manners are the perfection of courtliness. Nearly thirty years had gone since Cadet Henry Jackson first set foot on the Britannia a delicate looking, fair-haired boy fresh from Stubbington School and his home in Yorkshire; and for forty of the years he was scarcely even a name to the outside world. But the navy knew him as a man who would certainly reach the topmost rungs of the ladder some day.

Renowned in Youth

"He was," a fellow middy said, "by far the smartest boy of his term, a perfect glutton for work, with a positive genius for mathematics, yet so modest and so amiable that we were all as pleased at his successes as if they were our own. But though he was always a fine sailor, he was first and foremost a student. What he didn't know, even as a young man, about electricity wasn't worth knowing, and as a lieutenant he was already recognized as the principal torpedo expert in the navy. But, nevertheless, he had to wait nearly thirty years before he reached captain's rank, when he was in charge of the torpedo school ship Defiance.

Fisher's Choice

For some time before his appointment to the Defiance, Commander Jackson had been experimenting with Hertzian waves, and while Signor Marconi was still groping after the secret of wireless telegraphy, the unknown naval officer had been able to send aerial signals and messages from one end of his ship to the other. But with characteristic modesty he was content not only to allow the laurels to go to his rival, but to join hands with him in perfecting his method. Yet, though the world knows nothing of the naval genius, Admiral Fisher believed in him, and his opinion is an affidavit of rare ability and promise. It was he who brought him first into prominence as Controller of the navy, and later placed him in charge of the Royal Naval War College.

In private life the First Sea Lord is as charming as he is brilliant in his profession. He is probably seen at his best when, after a day spent on the moors or on the golf-links, he settles down with his friends. Then, whatever the subject of discussion may be, from sport to science, he illumines it with an eloquence and knowledge rare as probably no other sailor has displayed.

Comfort and Cure For Baby's Skin Troubles

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which is causing so many babies what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for the trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Dusclos, Postmaster, Dugnaysville, N.B., writes: "I believe it is my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was covered with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. LAKEFIELD—Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell of Toronto are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Mitchell.

Mr. L. F. Dudley of Rochester, N.Y. is visiting at the home of Mrs. M. Atwood.

Miss Ritchie of Midwood, Ont., is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. T. E. Robinson at the Manse.

Master Kenneth Mackenzie left on Thursday last to attend the Naval School at Halifax, N.S.

Mr. T. W. Mitchell and Master Clarence of Toronto, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Mitchell.

Mr. A. S. Marshall has been transferred from the local branch of the Royal Bank to the Oshawa branch.

Miss L. Cummings, of Lucknow, Ont., is visiting in the village, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Cummings.

Miss Elsie Pearson, of the Royal Bank staff, is spending a two weeks vacation in Toronto and London.

Mr. N. A. Moore spent a few days at Stony Lake this week.

Miss Annie Elliot, of Norwood, is the guest of Miss Edna Braden.

Master Clayton Ridpath is visiting friends in Toronto this week.

Miss Marjory Morin, of Toronto, is visiting at her home in the village.

Mrs. F. J. Moore and family are occupying "Star Cottage" for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Stevenson and family, of Norwich, Ont., are the guests of Mrs. P. Baptie.

Mrs. C. L. Bicknell, of Toronto, is visiting friends in the village.

Mrs. C. Atwood and the Misses Atwood left on Tuesday to spend a few weeks at "Fairhaven" Stony Lake.

Miss Verna Burgess, who has been spending a few weeks at Stony Lake, the guest of Mrs. G. G. Hendren, has returned home.

Messrs. Thos Simpson, W. Ogilvie, W. Lemay, Leo Garvey, and N. Graham, are spending a two-weeks' outing at Stony Lake.

Visitors to the Lakefield Fair this fall will be struck by the many improvements made to the grounds and building. The exhibits have increased to such an extent that the directors have been compelled to provide more accommodation and at a recent meeting of the directors it was decided to increase the size of the main building. Workmen are now engaged in making an addition to the building, and when completed it will be 160 ft. by 44 ft. Owing to the fact that Lakefield has no skating or curling rink, the society has decided to make the addition to the building with the view of utilizing it in the winter for skating and curling purposes, and the young people will now be assured of a splendid sheet of ice for their favourite winter pastime. Ample accommodation will also be made for the curlers, and this popular sport will be carried on this winter. Commodious waiting rooms will be built at the north end of the building. The race track has been enlarged to a half mile track. The society are to be congratulated on their enterprise in providing a place for the young people of the village to spend the winter evenings in healthy exercise.

Mrs. (Dr.) F. D. Blakeman is visiting her parents at Cardinal, Ont.

Miss Fraser, of Vankleek Hill, is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. J. K. Fraser.

Miss Florence Salkeld, of Toronto, is visiting in the village, he guest of the Misses Ray.

Mrs. C. D. Crawford has opened up her cottage "Belle View" at Stony Lake, for the summer.

Master Malcom Vincent, of Peterborough, is spending a few weeks in the village, the guest of Mr. Arthur Webster.

Mrs. F. Simpson and Miss Kate, arrived home on Friday after spending a week at their cottage at Stony Lake.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

The newer waists are for the most part quite simple, and the example selected for this illustration is one of the best liked for a variety of fabrics.

7257

This waist has a surplice closing, which leaves the neck somewhat open, and as a trimming for the edges there is a wide, flat collar. Along the line of closing is a pleated frill, but the use of this is optional and it may be omitted. The wide, plain sleeves are of seven-eighths length and are finished with a flaring cuff.

In selecting material for such a waist as this there is no restriction, for they are shown in the shops made of the sheerest of Georgette crepe and also of more substantial fabrics, such as crepe de Chine, taffetas, organdie and some of the many novelty cottons. Voile is a favorite for all waists, and this model is no exception to the rule.

Collars and cuffs are sometimes of the waist material, but it is more usual to make them of something else, such as lawn, muslin, organdie, &c., and the same is true of the frill. This can also be made detachable, so that it may be attached to the same buttons as serve for the closing of the waist.

The waist pattern, No. 7,257, cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2 yards of 36 inch material, with 1 yard of plain material for collar and cuffs.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

WESTERN HARVESTING SHOULD BE GENERAL ABOUT AUG. 20

Detailed Report of Crop Conditions Throughout the Dominion—Hail and Rain Has Done Damage in Many Places.

MAY REPORTED GOOD

OTTAWA, Aug. 4.—A special press bulletin issued by the Census and Statistics Office gives the following report on the condition of field crops in Canada at the end of July, as summarized fro mtelegrams received from the Dominion Farms and Stations in accordance with arrangements made between the Departments of Trade and Commerce and Agriculture.

Prince Edward Island.—Beneficial rains fell frequently from the 2nd to the 22nd. Having now the necessary heat, all farm crops have made wonderful growth and give promise of a yield 10 per cent. above the average. A few sections of Prince County, owing to excessive moisture on low lands, have light crops.

Nova Scotia. Telegrams from Kentville River John, Antigonish and Central Clarence, report an abundance of moisture during July. Hay is yielding a bumper crop but the showery weather interferes with its curing. Grain, hoed crops and pastures are doing well.

New Brunswick. Fredericton reports an abnormally heavy precipitation during twelve days. The remainder of the month was fine with extra growing weather; crops that are not drowned are doing well. The hay crop is not quite an average one; the crop is about half harvested. Potatoes occupy small area, and there has been considerable rotting of seed. Turnips are thrifty, and grain crops in well drained land are looking extra well. The pastures are good and the milk flow is larger than last season. From Harland hay is reported as only a half crop, pastures are good and wheat looks very well. Other grains are short and late, potatoes and turnips are excellent; corn and beans are late. Musquash reports a heavy hay crop and that grain and roots are looking fine.

Quebec.—Excellent reports on the condition of the grain crops have been received from Shawville, Lennoxville, Knowlton, Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere and Baie St. Paul, but at Cap Rouge drought has prevailed, and if the warm weather continues without precipitation the grain, it is feared will ripen prematurely, with diminished yield. The hay crop was best at Shawville and Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere, but a good average at Lennoxville, Knowlton and Cap Rouge. At Baie St. Paul the crop was small, but the quality good. Corn is reported as backward, but fairly good.

Ontario. From Essex County it is reported that to the north excessive rains have damaged corn and hoed crops, in the south there is no damage and there is promise of splendid crops. Wheat and barley are all harvested. Oats are splendid crop and are now being harvested. From Galt, in Waterloo County, exceptionally heavy rainfalls are reported, hay and wheat are being harvested under difficulties. Barley and hoed crops never looked better. Oats are heavy, but show considerable smut. Brooklin, Ontario county, reports showery weather all the month and no damage. Fall wheat, well ripened, is being harvested. Barley is an average and oats are a full crop. Corn and root crops are doing well. Pasture is good, but hay is light and injured by rain. In Eastern Ontario the grain crops have filled very well and promise better than an average yield. The hay crop has turned out to be better than was expected in June. Corn and root and all hoed crops have made good growth during July, especially corn, which has made a remarkable growth, due to the showers of the earlier part and the high temperature which prevailed during the whole of the month.

Manitoba. From Brandon the report is that July has been favourable and that there has been enough rain to ensure good filling of the grain. Cool weather has made a rank growth and delayed maturity. Wheat cutting will begin about August 15, or two weeks later than last year.

Saskatchewan. From Indian Head it is reported that the crops have improved greatly during July with a good rainfall from the 1st to the 15th. Fallow wheat, oats and barley, on properly prepared land, are up to the average. Stubble crops are late. A severe wind and hail storm on the 22nd, did great damage to grain twenty miles north of the district. The oat crop is satisfactory. Warm weather is required to bring all crops ahead. At Lloydminster continued rains have kept the grain crops growing, and have somewhat retarded the harvest. Hoed crops and later grains have come along fine and good weather now should bring a bumper. At Kindersley the prospects for a bountiful harvest surpass all expectations. Wheat and oats have headed and partly filled. Only a very early frost can injure them. Flax, though not so well advanced, is good. All roots and vegetables promise heavy crops. Harvesting should be general by August 20th. At Rosthern the conditions reported in June continued until July 15th, when heavy rains set in. Grain crops and vegetables are now very favourable, the grain yield promising to be superior to last year, but below average. Rains came too late for the hay crop, which is almost negligible. Potatoes and root crops are in good condition. The Scott Station reports the weather as continuously cool and showery with grain crops growing exceptionally tall and rank. Warmer weather is necessary to hasten maturity and barley filling. Oats are heading out. Excellent yields of hay and small fruits have been harvested.

Alberta.—Edmonton reports weather was cold and wet until the 16th. Since then it has been ideal, grain crops advancing rapidly, root and hoed crops are excellent and a heavy crop of hay is being gathered. At Lacombe the weather conditions during the last half of July have been favourable. All early sown crops are fully headed and with continuance of present weather, the harvest should begin the last week in August. Straw is heavy and the grain yield promises to be good. From McLeod is reported too much rain all the month. Crops are very heavy but are from two to three weeks late. From Lethbridge it is reported that many rainy days during July have been unfavourable for grain, but not for hay. In some localities, particularly near the foothills, apprehension is felt as to whether the grain will mature before the frost, hot weather is needed. In the greater part of South Alberta the crops are safe with normal weather from now on. Hail has occurred in several localities. A report covering a wide area states that the crops in southern and southeastern Alberta are fair to good. At Lethbridge, McLeod and Pincher Creek they are good, but excessive rains have injured many fields, and summer fallowing is not finished. From Lethbridge and McLeod to Calgary the crops are excellent; from Lethbridge to Medicine Hat they are good. Hail has damaged parts of districts from 40 to 75 p.c. From Maple Creek to Gull Lake and Shaunavon the crops are excellent; from Shaunavon to Assiniboia they are fair to good. It has been too wet. From Swift Current to Pambrun and from Swift Current to Abbey the crops are excellent. From Prelate to Empress they will not ripen evenly. Cutting will be general in two or three weeks.

British Columbia.—At Agassiz July has been hot and dry, but there was plenty of moisture in the ground, and the hot weather made for the best development of corn, mangolds and grain. A large quantity of grain has been cut and some threshing has been done. At Invermere intermittent rain have fallen on eighteen days, rendering irrigation unnecessary. Much of the early cut hay is damaged. There is a promise of a heavy second cut of alfalfa and clover. Cereals are ripening well, oats and peas have improved, roots have made rapid growth; corn is very backward. At Sidney, Vancouver Island, a heavy crop of hay has been gathered in good condition. An excellent crop of autumn cereals has been harvested. A fine crop of oats is now being harvested. Roots, forage plants, fruits, and vegetables are in good condition.

Many Children Die From Summer Complaint

When They Could Be Saved By Using

DR. FOWLER'S Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mrs. Guy R. Rhyno, Middle Clyde, N.S., writes: "I have given my little boy Roy, that is over 11, it for summer complaint. He was in bed three days, and had come from a broken bowel. I live some distance from a doctor, but I sent word to him to come as soon as he could. In the meantime I gave him Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and he gradually grew better, and after the two doses, and after seeing the doctor he was cured. I have in mind other children, and I will never be without it through the long summer months without it."

Thousands of families throughout Canada and the United States have used this trying remedy during the past 70 year and have always found it a "friend in need."

When you ask for "Dr. Fowler's" see that you get "Dr. Fowler's." Don't accept some no name, no-reputation medicine which some dealer may say is "The same" or "Just as good."

FLAVELLE YACHT SUFFERS IN FIRE

LINDSAY, Ont., Aug. 9.—Mr. J. W. Flavelle's $3,000 yacht, Swanana lies on the shores of Sturgeon Point with a large hole in her bottom and Mr. Flavelle's chauffeur, Jack Salisbury, is in the hospital here badly suffering from painful burns about the hands, face and eyes as the result of an explosion which took place Saturday noon.

It appears that the gasoline tank had been leaking. Salisbury went down to the boat house to adjust matters; he cranked the engine and commenced to climb out in order to release the stern ropes when a terrific explosion occurred, the escaping gases and the gasoline igniting when the engine back fired.

Salisbury jumped into six feet of water and succeeded in pushing the boat out into the lake, saving Mr. Flavelle's boat house from being destroyed by fire.

TURK WARSHIP SUNK BY "SUB"

Special to The Examiner.

Constantinople, Aug. 9.—The Turkish battleship Kheyr-Ed-Din Barbarossa, of 9,500 tons displacement and formerly the German warship Kurfurst Friedrich Wilhelm, has been sunk by a submarine of the Entente Powers according to an official announcement issued today by the Turkish government.

A majority of the officers and men composing the crew of the Turkish battleship was saved.

The Kheyr-Ed-Din Barbarossa was built at Stettin in 1891, and was purchased together with the battleship Torgut Reis, from Germany by Turkey in 1910. The vessel was 354 feet long, 64 feet beam, and had a depth of 24 feet. Her complement consisted of about 600 officers and men.

The battleship carried four 11-inch guns in turrets fore and aft, two 11-inch guns in a turret amidships, eight 4.1 inch guns, eight 3.4 inch guns, and twelve one-pounders. The vessel also was equipped with two submerged 18-inch torpedo tubes.

RUSSIAN TROOPS HAVE ESCAPED THE TRAP

SEVERE FIGHTING ON THE WESTERN FRONT

GERMAN INFANTRY STORM THE FRENCH POSITIONS

The Charge Broke Down Under a Heavy Rifle Fire and a Play of Shrapnel---Two German Attacks Repulsed North of Souchez---On the Eastern Front Russians Are Parrying the German Thrusts---Chain of Forts Stem the German Advance.

WILL FIGHT TO A FINISH

Special Cable to The Examiner

PARIS, Aug. 10.—(French Official Communique)—Asphyxiating shells and high power explosive projectiles of all salibre were employed by the Germans in a violent attack on the French works in the Le Petre forest last night.

This afternoon's official communique reported the repulse of all attempts against the French lines.

German infantry attempted to take the French positions by storm after an hour's bombardment. The charge broke down under a heavy rifle fire and a play of shrapnel. Driven back to their trenches the Teutons resorted to the gas shells and then launched another attack. The French gave ground when the gas clouds poured down upon them, but reoccupied their trenches when the gas had been carried off by the wind.

Bomb fighting from the plateau near Vauquois, and rifle fusillades, and cannonading elsewhere in the Argonne without important results occurred throughout the night.

The War Office reported the repulse of two German attacks north of Souchez.

GERMANS HAVE MADE NO IMPRESSION.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 10.—Unofficial despatches to-day claimed the definite defeat of the major object of the great Austro-Berman campaign in Poland, the capture or utter rout of the Russian field armies.

The Russians whom Von Hindenburg sought to surround in the Warsaw district have escaped the trap. They are making an orderly retreat upon a line reaching in a northwesterly direction from siedlace, having evacuated Praga.

From the extreme southeast to the Courland, Russians dominate the retreat. They are moving back slowly to the Brest-Litivsk line, standing ground and parrying the German thrusts east of the Narew and inflicting severe blows in the region of Kovno. Despite most tremendous exertions and the use of shells on a scale only equalled before Przemysl, the Teutons have been unable either to pierce the Russian lines or to throw confusion into the Slav ranks.

The Germans thus have made no impression on the eleven forts surrounding Kovno, though outer defences of fortress have been under bombardment for two days.

Reinforcements both in men and guns are reported to be arriving to support the attack, and a determined assault on Kovno is expected within a few days.

Despatches from Austrian sources declare that the Germans lost sixty-five thousand in killed and wounded in advance from north on forts around Warsaw.

EXPRESSED INDIGNATION.

LONDON Aug. 10.—The Allies will fight to a finish and make peace only on their own terms. This was the general tone of angry comments that came from the British press to-day on the message sent to the United Press yesterday by the German Chancellor Dr. Von. Bethmann Hollweg, regarding terms on which the Kaiser would consent to peace negotiations.

The majority of the London papers, carried lengthy editorial comments, expressing indignation at what they termed the "impudence" of Germany's proposals.

TURKISH CONTINGENT WAS ROUTED.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 10.—By capturing several hundred camels, carrying supplies to the Turks along the eastern Euphrates, Russian Caucasus troops forced the enemy to withdraw for a distance of several miles.

An official statement to-day said that after the camel convoy had been taken, the Cossacks charged and sabred many of the Turks, taking 308 prisoners and hundreds of cattle.

Another Turkish contingent was routed near the Village of Okhan, the Russians pursuing the enemy in the direction of Daiar.

Russian troops on Sunday occupied part of the Tariam Daf ridge.

TROOPS MASSED ALONG THE BORDER.

SALONIKA, Aug. 10.—The Austro-Germans have begun to concentrate a new army on the Serbian frontier, planning to overrun Serbia and frighten Bulgaria and Greece into remaining neutral. Advices received here to day said that nearly a hundred thousand troops are being massed along the Serbian frontier.

FIVE ZEPPELINS WERE SIGHTED.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 10.—Five Zeppelins were sighted off the Island of Vliel, and near the entrance to the Zuider Zee to-day, cruising in a northwesterly direction, according to despatches received here. Their course if maintained, would take them to the coast of Scotland.

GREECE DENIES REPORT OF LOAN.

ATHENS, Aug. 10.—The Government to-day authorized a denial of the report that Greece had negotiated a loan of forty millions from Germany.

ENTERED THE FORTRESS THIS MORNING.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—Gen. Von Faulcl's forces broke the Russian line at Lomza yesterday and entered the fortresses this morning.

The War Office admitted that British troops have recaptured the western part of Hooge.

ASSISTING THE RED CROSS.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—For several weeks, Queen Amelie of Portugal, concealing her identity, has been working as a common trained nurse in the Third London General Hospital at Wadsworth, England.

SIX MONTHS OF GERMAN FRIGHTFULNESS.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Germany is beginning to feel the effects of the war of attrition and the stranglehold of the British navy, said the Globe. It would suit Germany well to make peace before the breaking point was reached, but it would not suit us Our sword will not be put aside until Prussian militarism is broken once for all, and the world delivered of its nightmare.

The Westminster Gazette commented as follows:

It is for the American people to decide whether the trident is safer in our hands or in the hands of people whose normal policy is exemplified by the sinking of the Lusitania and submarining of unarmed merchantment and fishing boats. We have a hundred years of good behaviour to place against six months of German frightfulness.

RUSSIANS PREPARING TO EVACUATE.

PETKOGRAD, Aug. 10.—The Russians are preparing to evacuate Vilna. Despatches received here this afternoon said libraries, museums and all relics were being removed.

A Zeppelin airship to-day bombarded Bielostock killing a woman and wounding one child. Another Zeppelin borbarded Kovel without loss of life.

This news was generally accepted here as meaning that Russians expect to surrender the fortress of Kovno or at any rate wish to save the highly prized works at Vilna in case the Germans sweep thruogh Kovno. Vilna lies eighty miles east of Kovno on important Warsaw-Petrograd railroad toward which the Germans are moving. It is the capital of the province of the same name.

RECRUITS MAY GO TO ENGLAND

Canadian Soldiers May Be Trained in the Old Country in Order to Maintain Unity of Corps.

FOUR DIVISIONS

OTTAWA, Aug. 10.—The advisability of keeping four divisions in England and France instead of two, as at present, is to be considered by the Militia Department, it was learned today. It would mean that future units would be equipped here, but would get all their training in England. At present Canada has one division at the front and another, the second, in England perfecting its training. It has practically two divisions in Canada the third, minus the drafts sent over as reinforcements, and those regiments of the additional 35,000 men which have now been recruited.

The practice since the sending over of the second contingent has been to supply reinforcements through the medium of drafts from units raised as the third contingent. Though this plan was the only one advisable under the circumstances, it has its disadvantages. For one thing, the sending over of drafts interferes with the esprit de corps of units, which as a rule prefer to maintain their unity. It was announced, therefore, this afternoon that the authorities would shortly give consideration to the plan of raising and equipping more here and immediately sending them over to England, where they would get their training. Two extra divisions besides the two which are now on the other side of the water would thus be maintained in England, the drafting to be done there instead of from Canada.

A fact not generally realised is that Canada has raised since the beginning of the war 145,000 troops. In all, some 80,000 have been sent to England, this number including the first and second contingents and reinforcements. There are now in Canand about 65,000 soldiers. There have been almost 14,000 casualties.

No confirmation has been received here of the report from England that a complete Canadian army corps under Gen. Alderson is to be maintained in the field by the Dominion. So far the only official word has been of the appointment of Gen. Steele to the command of an English military district and the succession of Gen. Currie. The report is credited here, however, and will necessitate no extra efforts, as the units necessary for a complete army corps are now in England and France waiting only for organization.

BATTERY RECRUITS ALREADY TOTAL 22

Recruiting for the artillery branch has been fairly brisk at the Armouries since this work was begun a few days ago. Dr Cameron has already passed twenty-two men who, it is understood, will be held here for some time undergoing preparatory drill work, and at the same time to further assist in obtaining new recruits.

From the enthusiasm already shown here for recruiting in this branch of the service it is practically assured that Capt. W C. Ackerman will secure a large quota from this district Lieut. Hamilton and Lieut Meredith Huycke are in the city in connection with this work.

Dr Eastwood was on duty all day yesterday, and although the general movement of citizens was out of town secured a number of recruits out of the number he examined.

C. O. F. Will Admit Boys Over Sixteen

The provincial convention of the Catholic Order of Foresters will be held every three years instead of every two, coinciding with the international convention which received a similar readjustment at the recent convention at Providence, R I., from which Rev. Father C. J. Phelan has returned. He was a delegate from the Ontario State Court After January next young men over 16 will be received into the order, as the result of an amendment which was passed at the convention All the High Court officers were reelected, although not all by acclamation The salary of the Chief Ranger was increased $1,000 and was the only change in this respect. The C O F is in a flourishing condition. Rev. Father Phelan stated While in Providence he casually met a former Peterborough man, Mr John Lynch, who was a delegate from Tacoma, Wash He left Peterborough twenty-three years ago Father Phelan recognized him at the first glance

Funeral Will Be Held To-day

109 RECRUITS IN PAST WEEK WERE ENROLLED HERE

Infantry, Mounted Rifles and Artillery All Share in the Most Recent Impetus to Enlistment

A CREDITABLE SHOWING

RECENT RECRUITS.
Infantry	45
Mounted Rifles	42
Artillery	22
	109

The above figure cover the recruiting of the past week and, in a measure should be a source of considerable satisfaction. At noon to-day Col Walker reported 45 recruits for the 59th and 77th battalions; twenty-two men were mentioned in the battery quarters, and at least 42 Mounted Rifles recruits went to Barriefield this morning. One officer numbered the contingent at 45. The total reinforcements from Peterborough to the 8th Mounted Rifles during the past month is 67. However, with the impetus received last week the immediate results of the keyed-up enlisting is immediately apparent.

Meeting To-night.

It was learned today that an important meeting of the Speakers' Patriotic League will be held to-night at 8 o'clock when the question of a local battalion will receive further and more detailed attention

While recruiting has been going well it is generally felt that throughout the city there are many men who are seriously contemplating enlisting, who realize their duty but are holding back for various reasons, business, personal and otherwise, which are temporarily restraining them It may be that they are attaching more importance to these preventives than they merit but the fact remains however

EVANGELIST A. H. RANTON Who 15 years ago held wonderful revivals in George St. and Charlotte St. Churches, will speak in the Big Hunter St. Tabernacle To-night at 8 o'clock. Hear Him! Subject for To-night will be based on some of the "fundamentals."

MACHINE GUNS FOR THE FIRING LINE

Mutual Benefit Society of the Canadian General Electric Company Make a Substantial Donation to the Peterboro' Health Association in Addition to a Machine Gun.

A TOTAL OF FIVE

So far Peterborough has contributed five machine guns for the use of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces or such other forces as the War Office may designate The latest contributor to this laudable cause is the Mutual Benefit Society of the Canadian General Electric Company. A meeting was held and the society voted funds for the purchase of a machine gun, and also made a grant of two hundred dollars to the Peterborough Health Association

A total of five machine guns has been donated by the following:

Peck, Kerr and McElderry.

R. M. Waddell and Mrs. Hugh Waddell.

E. F. Mason.

B. F. Ackerman & Son.

Mutual Benefit Society of the Canadian General Electric Company

It is understood that a number of other local institutions as well as private institutions are contemplating similar move. Among those might be mentioned the Commercial Travellers' Association which a few days ago, started a subscription list on its rounds

RECRUITING MEETING AT THE BAND CONCERT

A band concert by the combined bands of the 57th regiment and of the Salvation Army will be given at the King Edward Park this evening at 8 o'clock The bands will lead a procession of recruits down George street to the park, where patriotic addresses to stimulate recruiting will be given by His Honour Judge Huycke and Adjt. McElhiney

The 57th band, by permission of Lt.-Col. Walker, will give the following programme

Troops Avance Two Hundred Yards All Along the Line—Many Prisoners and Several Machine Guns Captured

CASUALTIES HEAVY

Special to The Examiner

ATHENS, Aug. 10.—Allied troops today made an advance of two hundred yards all along the line of the Gallipoli Peninsula. Warships took part in the action and nearly all the land forces. Gen. Ian Hamilton expressed confidence that a continuous advance had now begun.

Constantinople reports say that one of the Allies' submarines was bombarded and destroyed with its crew by Turkish aeroplanes.

CONFIRMED REPORT.

LONDON, Aug. 10. — General Ian Hamilton confirmed the Athens report of the allied advance in Gallipoli Peninsula on the Krithia road It is regarded here as the most important in the Dardanelles campaign The casualties among the Turks were heavy, including many pirsoners captured.

"After fierce fighting at Hari Bair, we have occupied the crest of the position," reported the commander. "We have made substantial progress at other points, taking six hundred and thirty prisoners and several machine guns.

Thirteen Persons Killed in Raid

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, Aug. 10. — The British east coast was raided by a German air squadron this morning. It was officially announced this afternoon that thirteen persons were killed and twenty wounded.

A Zeppelin participating in the air raid was brought down and destroyed

To-day's air raid on the British coast, the fifteenth since the beginning of the war, increased the total number of victims from German air attacks on English towns to sixty-nine killed and two hundred and seven wounded.

The German Zeppelin brought to earth in to-day's raid over the English soil is the first positively known to have been wrecked while on a mission of destruction to England. Only recently one of Germany's million dollar dirigibles was destroyed over Belgium by the British aviator, Reginald Warnford, who was killed a few days later on a French flying field.

Left This Morning Under Command of Major S. T. Medd—Will Join the Peterborough Squadron at Barriefield Camp—Other Local Military News.

LIST OF THE C. M. R. RECRUITS

A reinforcement of forty-two men, recruited here during the past three or four days for the Peterborough Squadron of the 8th Mounted Rifles, left this morning at 8.20 o'clock from the G T R station, under the command of Major Medd They were due to reach camp shortly after the noon hour and camp life and military training commenced almost immediately Lieut Hubbs, Squadron Sergt.-Major Biggs, Sergeants Farrance, Harris and Twohiney, who have been assisting in recruiting here also returned with this latest detachment Colonel Johnston, who has been in charge of the local recruiting, said farewell to each of the men and will once more retire from his military endeavours until further recruiting for the C M R is required.

In this morning's detachment were the following:

A Chance to Give Practical Help

Now that the fake idea that the Militia Department does not need machine guns has been dispelled, we hear of many splendid offers from private individuals as well as from companies and municipalities There are a great many people who are desirous of helping but who cannot do quite so much. There is a way for them to help in just as practical a manner and more directly, and that is by giving to a regimental fund. The money raised is used for just that purpose the purchase of machine-guns, field kitchens and other things of less value from a money standpoint, but of as much importance to the men A machine gun given to the government may go anywhere, a machine gun bought for a given battalion will go there and no place else.

Anyone wishing to help the soldiers by a money donation cannot possibly do it in a better, more practical way than by giving it directly to a regimental fund The money is used entirely for equipment and comforts for the men. When the necessary machine guns and field kitchens are purchased, the remainder of the money goes toward the purchase of other things necessary for the safety or comfort of the men while on active service

It is much better to give in that way than to a general fund because in the former case the money is devoted to a particular body of men for a particular purpose. The officers who are working in this district for the 59th Battalion fund feel that the is not at all properly understood Those who can give ought to give in this way The men who enlist for active service are giving all that is in the power of any person to give. Surely an appeal to those at home to make it easier for them by providing a fund which is raised solely for the purpose of helping them should not really be noise

There are many Peterborough men in the 59th Battalion and there will be many more A person who contributes to the regiment's fund has the satisfaction of knowing that he is directly giving invaluable help to those who are going to represent him in the field Not everyone can give a machine gun or a field kitchen but nearly everyone can help to purchase one The government can scarcely be expected to grant a specific sum of money to each battalion for a regimental fund How, then is such a fund to be raised if not by the people whose national existence the present war seems seriously to imperil

THE MANITOBA SITUATION.

The results of the elections in Manitoba, are unique in the history of elections in Canada. Never before has a party been so completely wiped out, horse, foot and artillery, as the party represented by the late Roblin Government. In the new Legislature, there are, or will be, forty-three government supporters, and five opposition members. There is practically no opposition. Of the five opposition members, three of whom are French Canadians, there is none that can be looked to for the leadership of the party—only in name. The titular leader, Sir James Aikins, can only be the leader in the Legislature, by one of the five resigning and giving his hardly won seat to the leader; and if this were done, he could hardly be elected. In his chosen constituency he was defeated by 700, and no constituency is likely to be anxious enough to have him in the house to elect him. The election results in Manitoba, involve both a benefit and a danger. They give emphatic demonstration, that the electors are tired of corrupt government, and want clean government. There is, theoretically, danger that a government with such an overwhelming support, may trade upon its strength and thus fail to fulfill the tremendous responsibility of clean government that has been placed upon it. There is less danger of this because the triumph of the present government is the punishment of wrong-doing, and the fate of the rotten Roblin Government may, and doubtless will, serve as an effective warning. It cannot be regarded as the victory of a party because it would have been impossible without the cooperation of both parties. If the new government has regard for this condition, and does its duty by all its constituents, it should by a straightforward and able course, continue to deserve and receive the confidence of all its constituents.

REMEMBER THE BOYS AT THE FRONT.

To remember the boys who have enlisted, is the way to stimulate the enlistment of others. Apart for the heroism and self-sacrifice of entering the line of battle, there is something in the wrench that separates the recruit, and the subsequently trained soldier, from all the associations of home. There are various way in which we can remember the boys of the new brigade. Of course we, especially our women, are busy in providing them with supplies and comforts not furnished by the government; but that is not all. Even in the training camps the boys are a long way from home, and home seems further away if it is not brought nearer by home newspapers and home letters. How welcome letters would be may be gathered from a letter from a soldier at Shorncliffe:

The plea for more letters to the boys at the front is more than thoughtful. It is kindly. The hungriest bunch for home news one ever witnessed in their life is on mail day in camp, and when the trenches come imagine what it will be. Stir the people up to write to their friends.

A post card or even a short letter is a little thing to write; but it is a mighty heartener to the lonely boys in camp hungering for home news. Home newspapers are, of course, welcome; but they lack the personal note of the written page. From time to time The Examiner publishes the addresses of some of our soldiers. Do you ever drop them a postal card or a brief letter? It is easy to find out where the boys not already in the trenches are, or the boys in prison camps. And it is an easy thing to write a post card or a letter. You may not know them well personally, or you may not know them at all. But a letter or card would be welcome from any body at home. It would show that they were remembered, that we did not lose interest in them when we shipped them off to the war—What for? To fight for us. The little things in life count most in the making of happiness; and it is as little as our stay-at-homes can do—some of us doing nothing at all—to write letters or postal cards to the boys. It will call for a little sacrifice of our personal time, but what would that be for the great sacrifice the soldier boys are making for us. Think it over; but don't think too much; join action to thinking and remember the boys in the training camps or the trenches, or the prison camps, with letters from home.

A GREAT PARADOX.

For generations past the slogan of the Emerald Isle has been, "Ireland for the Irish." Things have changed and the slogan is now "Ireland for the Empire and humanity." Recently the Dublin corporation passed a vote of confidence in John Redmond. In his reply the great Irish statesman said:

"Civilization and freedom throughout the world are at stake on the issue of this war, and for that reason I have on many occasions felt it incumbent upon me to tell my countrymen that in my judgment the highest duty and the most vital interest of Ireland for the moment is to do everything in her power to support the cause of the Allies."

Ireland's dream of Home Rule is closer than ever before to full realization. The bill has passed and the opposition to its application will disappear. There is a coalition government in Great Britain representing both parties, now working energetically and harmoniously for the very principle involved in home rule, liberty of the individual, state as well as person. The whole Empire is in the throes of the mightiest struggle of history for the protection—home rule—of the weaker and outraged state Belgium; and hereafter no party in Great Britain can consistently place any obstacle in the way of beautiful and gallant Ireland being placed in the enjoyment of what the whole Empire and half the world is fighting for; and Ireland as gamely as any of them. The splendid contributions of the dominions beyond the seas to the cause of Empire is a magnificent tribute to the justice and wisdom of home rule. Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa are as independent in their home governments as the United Kingdom itself. Yet they have in spirit and relative action all shown as strong and steady loyalty to the Empire as the United Kingdom itself. Home rule has brought the Dominions and the Empire closer together; its simple justice and fairness have appealed to their loyalty as no coercion could have appealed; and it will bring Ireland closer than this war has brought her in the present crisis. Justice and fair play, and the rights of liberty are, in that wonderful entity the British Empire—the terms of a magnificent paradox—the looser the bonds the stronger they bind.

A YEAR'S WORK OF THE NAVY.

The arm chair critics and our enemies take pleasure in decrying the work of the British navy in this war. But it has done much. Recently Count von Reventlow, made boast of the doings of the Germany navy and scoffed at the little work of the British. Hon. A. J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, completely answered his vapourings, and summarized thus briefly and effectively the achievements of the British Navy:

If any one desires to know whether the British fleet has during the last year proved itself worthy of its traditions there is a very simple method of arriving at the truth. There are six and only six functions which a fleet can perform:

It may drive the enemy's commerce off the sea.

It may protect its own commerce.

It may render the enemy's fleet impotent.

It may make the transfer of enemy troops across the sea impossible, whether for attack or defense.

It may transport its own troops where it will.

It may secure their supplies and (in fitting circumstances) it may assist their operations.

All these functions have so far been successfully performed by the British fleet. No German merchant ship is to be found on the ocean. Allied commerce is more secure from attack, legitimate and illegitimate, than it was after Trafalgar. The German high sea fleet has not as yet ventured beyond the security of its protected waters.

No invasion has been attempted of these islands. British troops, in number unparalleled in history, have moved to and fro across the seas and have been effectively supported on shore. The greatest of military powers has seen its colonies wrested from it one by one and has not been able to land a man or a gun in their defense.

Of a fleet which has done this we may not only say that it has done much but that no fleet has ever done more.

And we citizens of the British Empire can only hope that the second year of the war will show no falling off in its success, as it will assuredly show no relaxation of its efforts.

Per contra the German navy has done nothing much besides skulking in home ports gathering barnacles, except murdering women and children, sinking a few unarmed merchantmen and fishing smacks. Only once or twice has a section of the German navy dared face the British navy on the high seas, and then it was sent to the bottom. There is a great deal we don't know about what Britain is doing or preparing to do on sea and on land in this war. But there is no ground for thinking or saying that she has in either case been, or is now, forgetful of her responsibility.

SIR WILFRID AT ST. LIN.

Typical of the regard in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier is held by the Canadian people was the spirit of the demonstration accorded to him in his native village. From all parts of the province his fellow-Canadians came, as one of our French contemporaries says, "to salute the man in whom is incarnated, in these tragic days, our national ideal, and whose name has become a standard for the French-Canadians."

There were no racial, political, or other limitations in this demonstration. It was the tribute of Canadians to the greatest Canadian, a tribute of affection and of pride. The unsurpassable charm, the lofty ideals, the big heart, and the magnetic personality of Sir Wilfrid have for many years given him a special place in the affections of all Canadians, but there was something more behind the feeling shown at the St. Lin demonstration. Sir Wilfrid has devoted his whole life to the service of his country. Heart and soul, he has ever been at the service of his native land. Wilfrid Laurier is a Canadian first and a long life to the service of his country, without any other hope of recompense than the satisfaction of knowing that he has done his duty with all his might.

And never throughout his career has he descended from controversy to rancor, never has he uttered a single word wantonly to wound an adversary. To men of all parties Sir Wilfrid Laurier is a Canadian first and a politician afterwards. And it was as Canadian first that men of all political persuasions, both English and French-speaking, gave him such a memorable testimony of esteem in the little township where he first saw the light. His response to this manifestation of affection was typical of the man. It was a clarion call to the duty of the hour, an earnest plea to the noblest instincts of a people proud to call themselves British citizens.—Montreal Telegraph-Herald.

CANADA'S RELATIONS TO THE WORLD-WIDE WAR SITUATION

[illegible] over the enemy's assault, Canada [illegible] concern in continuing with war [illegible] in doing her part towards its prosecution. Thus, for [illegible] attitude of the other dominions. At the same time, however, it would not be wise to lose sight of the great changes involving this country that the war is certain to bring, and that many of these changes presently will have to be made.
